Important Tariff Changes Announced

Retaliation in Tariff Matters Fatal to Trade Declares Finance Minister

NO TARIFF WAR, DECLARES DUNNING

FACILITATE TRADE WITH THOSE WHO FACILITATE TRADE WITH CANADA

Surplus Over Expenditure is $44,507,000—257 Millions Paid Off National Debt in Five Years —Adverse Trade Balance Recorded.

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Estimated surplus of $44,507,000 for the fiscal year 1929-30 was announced by Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, in his budget speech today. Together with this announcement came the important statement that "numerous and complex" changes in tariff rates are provided for. Summarized briefly the Minister told the House that the present budget tariff proposals involve, under the general tariff, increases in rates on 64 items, and decreases on 46; under the intermediate tariff, increases in rates on 35 items and decreases on 98; and under British preference tariff increases in rates of 11 items which 689 will be free under British preference. The changes proposed, the Minister stated, will have the effect of greatly increasing British preference in Canadian market.

No Tariff War

"Canada will not engage in a tariff war with any country," asserted Mr. Dunning. "The world shows at the present time too many examples of disaster following such a course. As a great exporting nation, our course must be the contrary one of facilitating trade with us. Those who raise prohibitive barriers against our products entering their markets must expect that we will extend favor to our own good customers rather than to them. I speak in no spirit of retaliation I would much rather extend lower tariff favors to those who extend them to us than to impose prohibitive tariffs in return for like treat ment."

Highlights in Balance Sheet

Total ordinary revenue for the fiscal year 1929-30 was $440,300,000 of which revenue from taxation was $374,321,000. Special receipts and credits brought the grand total revenue up to $447,252,000.

Total ordinary expenditure for the fiscal year was $360,050,000. Added to this were special expenditures (such as repatriation), capital expenditured, (such as public works), loans and non-active advances, making total expenditures $402,815,000.

Surplus of revenue over expenditures $44,507,000.

Unmatured funded debt was $2,250,837,236.

Reduction of debt in the past five years out of surplus revenue totalled $257,800,000.

Canada's total exports during the last fiscal year were $1,144,900,-000 and imports $1,248,200,000, leaving an adverse balance of visible trade $103,300,000.

Decrease in exports as compared with the year before was $244,000,-000.

Combined net cash deficit of the Canadian National Railways for years 1928-29 including interest charges has been paid by the Government and amounted to $2,923,-652.

Loans to harbor commissions 1929-30 totalled $10,436,000.

They are calculated, he said, to serve the best intsrests of the Canadian people; to increase greatly the British preference in the Canadian market; and to enable Canada to buy more freely from those countries which buy from us most freely those commodities which are of vital importance to us."

The Minister summarized his tariff changes as involving, under the general tariff, increases of 64 items and decreases on 46, and under the British preferential tariff increases of 11 items and decreases on 770. As a result of the revision, he stated, no fewer than 589 items in the total of 1188 would be free under the British preferential tariff, extension of the preference a range of imports valued at two hundred million dollars.

ITALY MOVES FOR PARITY

Cabinet at One Sitting Authorizes Constuction of 29 Warships

ROME, May 1.—Italy, denied paper parity with France at the London Naval Conference, moved toward obtaining it in reality ,Wednesday.

The Cabinet, at a single sitting, approved the construction of 29 new warships, totalling nearly 43,000 tons, the keels of which are to be laid in the current year.

This armament, coupled with the launching of nearly 32,000 tons of new warships last Sunday and the additional construction of 22,000 tons now underway, will mean the completion of a fleet officially deemed necessary for defensive purposes in lieu of a limitation agreement with France.

The warships voted today include, One 10,000-ton cruiser of the Washington type, to be named Pola.

Seven destroyers or fast cruisers of 5,00 tons each to be named Monte Cuccoli and Muzio Attendolo.

Four destroyers of 1,240 tons each.

Nine submarines of 1,380 tons each.

Six submarines of 810 tons each.

Twelve submarines of 610 tons each.

The Cabinet's action came almost on the eve of a great French naval demonstration in the Mediterranean, to be held next week in connection with the 100th anniversary celebration of the French conquest of North Africa. At London, France demanded a Mediterranean fleet as large as Italy's total navy, plus 240,000 tons extra for the Atlantic and Pacific.

RONALD BAXTER WINS ORATORY CONTEST FOR THIS DISTRICT

Three Speakers Contest For Honors of District

To Mr. Ronald Baxter, of Picton Collegiate Institute, goes the honour of winning the Kingston District Oratorical championship.

A full auditorium greeted the three representative speakers last night at the local collegiate institute. Miss Lorine Adams represented the Belleville collegiate and her subject was "Strange ers Within Our Gates." Mr. Ronald Baxter for the Picton Collegiate, chose as his subject "World Peace" and Mr. Charles Amsty for Napanee, spoke on "Electricity and its Development in Farming Life". In the words of Dr. Bishop, who executed the duties of chairman in a capable manner, "the three brief addresses were of rare excellence and the speakers were each and every one to be congratulated on their splendid showing."

Dr. Bishop in giving his address informed the audience that they were to take part in a district oratorical contest and as they were to listen to three orators he would let his own address be taken as delivered. He added a few words on the great value of oratory in public life, and of the great talent possessed by pupils in the district on this subject. The only condition in last night's contest was that the oration be delivered in a period of time not exceeding ten minutes. The first speaker was Miss Lorine Adams of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and her subject was "Strangers Within Our Gates."

In her opening words Miss Adams

Belleville Boy is Highly Praised

At the annual closing concert of the Toronto Conservatory of Music held on Tuesday and Wednesday night of this week at Massey Hall, Mr. Clifford E. McCormick, pupil of B. H. Carman and son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McCormick, of this city, figured prominently and the Toronto papers yesterday paid the following tribute: "Mr. Clifford McCormick, pupil of B. H. Carman, contributed a group of three modern pieces, of which the two De Falla numbers were outstandingly successful. This young man shows a very real talent for this type of thing and a commendable soundness of style, which is a characteristic of Mr. Carman's pupils."

This young Belleville artist, it will be remembered, was successful a few weeks ago in winning a $50.00 prize offered by the Heintzman Company, for the year's best recital given by pupils at the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

Ernest Monroe Maimed In Cheese Box Factory

Mr. Ernest Monroe, a partner in the Stirling Cheese Box Company, suffered the loss of his left hand this morning while at work in the factory. The hand was so badly mangled that physicians found it necessary to amputate it. Drs. McCreary and Robertson, who are in attendance, stated that, although the man suffered from the loss of blood he will survive. Monroe left his home at eight o'clock for the plant, and fifteen minutes later the alarm was sounded when in some unknown manner, his left arm was caught in a saw.

Other employees of the factory removed the victim from his dangerous position and Dr. Alger of Stirling, was called. He rendered immediate medical attention and ordered Monroe to the Belleville Hospital. Mr. Lawrence Monroe, a brother, brought the injured man to the city. He was resting easier at the last reports.

PARALLEL PARKING IN FEW DAYS

Mayor Reid Says Plea For Cooperation Is Effective

TRUCK TRAFFIC

Mayor Says That Much Can Yet Be Done To Expediate Traffic

"A marked improvement of co-operation with regards to traffic on Front St. has been noticed," stated Mayor George A. Reid to The Ontario Intelligencer today. "But there is room for more improvement," continued His Worship.

The merchants have co-operated in not leaving their cars on the street but some still persist in parking their cars in front of their places of business and leaving them there for hours at a time. Trucks are also stopping as long as formerly and this relieves the congestion to a considerable extent. With the peak of the traffic coming His Worship requests the merchants and others to use discretion and allow the tourists a place, where he can park his car, see the city and incidentally leave some transient money.

Angular parking on Front street will be not existent after Tuesday, according to Mayor Reid. A special meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday morning at eleven o'clock to consider some important matters and at that time the by-law discontinuing angular parking during the construction of the lower block will likely be passed. It is not likely that a report from the Fire Chairman will be given at the meeting on Monday. Yesterday the council visited the two firehalls as a committee of the whole and closely inspected the two buildings, considering how improvement could be made to house the both patrols under the one roof.

INJURED WHEN GAS EXPLODED

Mrs. John Yorke, residing at 199 Church street, was the victim of a painful accident during the first part of this week at her home, when in applying her kitchen stove to add coal to the fire, gas which had formed on the surface, exploded, burning her badly about the face and arms. First aid was administered by the attending physician and the victim was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where she is now progressing favorably. Her many friends will be glad to learn that she expects to return to her home within the next week.

Communists of Toronto Say Speeders Must Not Be Interrupted

TORONTO, May 1.—CP—Though Communist headquarters announced their May activities would not commence until three o'clock, Toronto police made the first move by taking two of their followers to police headquarters. The men accosted by police were Bill Kantan, who has been prominently employed in communistic work, and Charles Marriott. They were taken to headquarters for questioning in regard to distribution of certain literature.

Charles Sims, district organizer of the Communists, said if the police prohibited their meeting planned to be held at the rear of the provincial parliament buildings they had plans made to prevent officers from interrupting speakers until they had at least completed their addresses.

AUTO HORNS TESTED FOR MOST PLEASING SOUNDS

NEW YORK, May 1.—The search is on to discover a refined auto horn that will make it almost a pleasure for pedestrians to be hit by a motor vehicle.

At the Dell Telephone laboratories yesterday 34 shiny new horns were brought out and sent through their paces. The horns bellowed, grunted, shrieked and cried.

Each horn was permitted to give one staccato warning, and one long blast. The audience checked those "having objectionable and frightening sounds." Unofficially, it was reported that most of them were objectionable, except one manufacturers.

horn that sounded like a radio crooner and is commonly termed the "sex appeal" horn.

The witnesses also heard the horns tested down to what they would sound at various distances. First at the halfmile, then the mile and finally the ten mile mark. It appeared that at the latter distance all horns, whether good or bad, sounded like chimes tinkling in a far-off pagoda.

The test was carried on by the New York noise abatement commission. Recommendations growing out of its conclusions will be made to all manu-

PRODUCE SOUND BY NEW METHOD

Cambridge, Mass. May 1—An instrument which may open a new field for musical expression has been developed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology here, it was learned tonight.

Utilizing beams of light and photo-electric cells, the new device, which was constructed by Professor Arthur C. Hardy and Sherwood F. Brown of the physics department, for Duval R. Goldthwaite, New York music patron, produces entirely new musical sounds by optical means.

According to Professor Hardy, the instrument produces synthetic musical sounds which have never been heard before and, in addition, is capable of producing the sounds of most existing instruments. Musicians who have heard the instrument believed it will open a new field for musical expression.

As yet none of the instrument is played in the manner of a piano, and the first experimental model, which has a three-octave keyboard, was developed to study the deep resonant tones of an organ. It can be made to produce the sounds of almost any musical instrument — such as a violin, clarinet or oboe.

AUTO RUNS 56 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 56 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings, but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 909-43M Third St., Milwaukee, Wisc., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men every where to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money making offer.—Adv.

STOCK MARKETS

STOCK MARKET REPORT

Jamieson Bros and Co., by direct wire from J. O'Hearn and Co.

New York was highly irregular today. After a strong opening, a good deal of liquidation took place, forcing many of the blue chip issues to lower levels. Some recovery took place later in the day. The news, which has been bad for some time is a good deal more bullish now, except on copper. In the mines the gold stocks are strongest, particularly Teck and Howie. Home of the old favourites appear to be at levels now, that discount any possible contingency. Quotations at 3 p.m. were:

TRIO SENT TO TRIAL, CHARGES INVESTIGATED

Thos. Oak, Mrs. Clara Knight and Gus Knight Face Higher Court

TWEED FIRE PROBE

Thomas Oak, Mrs. Clara Knight and Mr. Gus Knight were committed for trial by Magistrate Casement, yesterday afternoon to Belleville Police Court on charges of illegally endeavouring to obtain sums of money by false pretenses. Bail in each case was set at $1000 personal and 10% surety.

The fire which destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Knight occurred on the 5th of April, 1928. On that evening Mrs. Knight and Mr. Oak were in the house. According to Mr. A. J. Hughson, insurance adjuster, he had met Mr. Thomas Oak at Tweed on the 5th of April. Previous to the fire, according to Mr. Hughson, on the stand, Mr. Oak had stated that he had boarded with Mrs. Knight. Mr. Hughson claimed that he himself had done the investigating after the fire. Hughson said, according to Oak, he had gone to bed about 12.30. About two a.m. he had been awakened by smoke and had let Mrs. Knight out of the window by a quilt and had then climbed down the improvised fire escape himself.

Mr. Hughson testified that he had looked in the debris of the fire and had not been able to find any evidence of a victrola that had been burned up or a living room suite.

Gus Knight was charged that on the 5th day of April he did unlawfully attempt to obtain $1000 by false pretenses from the National Guarantee Company, certain articles, i. e. a living room suite and a victrola worth $150 contrary to the criminal code. Mrs. Knight and Mr. Oak were charged with attempting to obtain $1000 by false pretenses from the Provincial Insurance Company, that is, by attempting to obtain $1003 by false pretenses, representing that a living room suite and a victrola worth $150 had been destroyed by fire.

Both Mrs. Knight and Thomas Oak seemed singularly undisturbed in police court yesterday afternoon. Although they face a serious charge at the fall assizes they did not appear to be worrying—laughing and joking with each other during the trial before Magistrate Casement. All three, J. Oak, Mrs. C. Knight and Gus Knight are defended by C. A. Payne.

The trial did not offer any evidence in their own defense. Only enough evidence to send them up to a higher court was presented during yesterday afternoon's hearing. They will appear at the fall assizes.

Evidence for the Crown was given by Constable McCoy, Frank Stacks in surance agent; Capt. Hughson, insurance adjuster; J. V. Doyle, A. F. Staus bury, and others.

E. J. Follwell Laid to Rest

Impressive Rites Attended By Veterans And Representatives

Following the impressive service of the Masonic order, a volley was fired, the notes of the Last Post floated over the grave and all that was mortal of the late E. J. Follwell was laid to rest in Belleville cemetery yesterday afternoon. Representatives of the Masonic order, the Trades and Labor Council, Loyal Order of Moose, Post 99 of the Canadian Legion and employees of the Canadian National Railways with many intimate and personal friends were present at the obsequies. A short service was held at the home at 61 Grier street, after which the cortege formed led by the Masons and followed by the firing party and other organizations of which the deceased was a member. The casket was draped with the Union Jack and covered with many floral tributes. The cortege proceeded to Christ Church, where a large number had gathered and the service was conducted by Rev. A. L. Geen.

Familiar hymns were sung, led by the choir under the direction of Miss Eva Lavole, and Rev. A. L. Geen recited the burial service of the Anglican church. Reforming, the cortege went to Belleville cemetery and after the burial rites were conducted by Rev. Mr. Geen, Wor. Bro. Howard Hamilton, assisted by Wor. Bro. J. W. Hall, Very Wor. Bro. Leon Walmsley and Wor. Bro. C. E. Browne, conducted the impressive rites of the order. Afterwards the firing party in command of Sergt Major Fisher fired three volleys over the grave and Stan Lessels blew the Last Post". Veterans then deposited poppies on the grave of their departed comrade, who awaits Reveille on another world. The floral tributes were many and varied testifying to the mute way, the esteem in which the deceased was held by his legion of friends. The bearers were W. A. Forbes, Tom Hallam, Fred White, Fred Chapman, Stanley Lennox and George Rowbotham.

The floral tributes were:

BELLEVILLE'S MEMORIAL

Lack of interest by the general public outside of the members of the Canadian Legion, their families and the relatives of those who fell in the Great War and the opposition of the veterans and others to the scheme of memorial arches to commemorate Belleville's dead of The Great War have definitely put memorial bridge arches out of the view.

Some other form of war memorial will now have to be adopted unless Belleville is going to allow time to pass without some form of recognition of the service of the fallen and the returned men of the war. There is a memorial building but it is urged by the executive that the real need is a cenotaph. The cenotaph of course better than a memorial bridge or building serves the purpose of idealism. For memorializing the dead requires a shrine and this the veterans feel is the solution of the dilemma which this city faces.

What action will ultimately be taken no one would dare to foretell, for so many efforts to bring this matter to a definite decision have fallen by the way. It is now certain that the bridge is once and for all not to be in any way a memorial to the men who went and did not return.

It was argued against arches that such denote victory, and are not a shrine in the closest meaning of the word, while the cenotaph is any empty tomb memorializing the deeds of the mighty dead.

As Mayor Reid was invited by the public meeting on Tuesday night to bring the matter of a cenotaph before the city council, doubtless something more will be heard of the scheme before long.

MERRIE MONTH OF MAY

While the coming of May brought a warm spell, quite unexpected, seeding operations have been proceeding at a very rapid rate. The next ten days should see the seeding completed.

May has always been an auspicious month. It used to be marked by the spring revels, when the people especially the young of the rural parts took a different form of communion with nature. Nay, today when the highway is the closest approach many get to Mother Nature's heart. Those were the days when the Queen of the May was named, when dancing on the village green around the maypole marked the spring season.

Canadians love the month of May, though as in Old England "rough winds may shake the darling buds of May." To many Canadians it is even to be preferred to leafy June when the full leaf is seen which lends complete shade under the boughs of the trees especially in a city like Belleville over-blessed with trees.

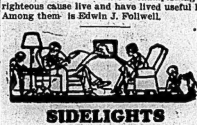
May has been given credit for being the generating month. Lybor has chosen it for demonstrations, and today's news of this aspect of the day is important.

To all eople whether actually linked up with Labor or not, the month and the day have peculiar inspirational value. Those of old who observed May Day caught probably a truer glimpse of the value of May Day than those who do not observe it.

WORTHY CITIZEN GONE

The recent death of Mr. Joseph L. Tickell removed a native and the long citizen of Belleville, who was held in highest estimation by all walks of the public. He was known throughout the province in his business relations as a furniture manufacturer and as funeral director. For many years he had held the post of examiner of the provincial board. In Belleville he was a loyal citizen carrying the traditions of his father, former Mayor George S. Tickell, for Mr. J. L. Tickell served for years on the Board of Education.

The present enviable condition of the Belleville Cemetery owes much to his constant endeavor to make the last resting place of Belleville's dead a shrine to their memory. He had served long on the board of directors of the cemetery company.



Mr. Tickell was one of the most active men, only ill-health compelling him to relinquish the business which he had followed since young manhood. He was a keen business man and an honour to the profession of funeral directors. Had the fatal illness with which he was stricken not ailed him he would doubtless have lived many years to carry on the business which was founded by his father.

LATE E. J. FOLLWELL

The world today justly pays more attention than it used to do to the man who represents labor. Belleville lost this week and Canada lost as well one of the staunchest champions Labor ever had in the death of Mr. Edwin J. Follwell. He was constantly on the qui vive in labour's interest, and was honoured by the Carmen's Association with the highest office in its gift.

Mr. Follwell set a laudable example in the first days of the war when he donned the King's uniform and went to France and served there until the end of the war. He was the type of the Englishman who felt immediately the call of duty and according he made haste to get to the front.

Mr. Follwell was carried off at a fairly early age, when he might have been expected to be able to give the ripe fruits of his busy and thoughtful life to the interest of labor's cause. While he had left his mark on the organization in no uncertain manner, continued health would have made it possible for him to continue to serve nobly as he had served. Such men who are tireless in the championing of a righteous cause live and have lived useful lives. Among them is Edwin J. Follwell.

LULLABY FOR MIGNON

By Aline Michaelis

Mignon, Mignon, come now to sleep,
Your Persian kitten sits this chair
Has curled into a ball so round
He seems a snow-ball fallen there;
Your largest doll, Bess Imogne,
Observes you with an anxious air;
"Oh, please, let's go to bed," she pleads,
I read it in her sleepy stare.

Mignon, Mignon, the nursery lights
Are very soft and low this hour;
Mignon, Mignon, your golden head
Is nodding like a weary flower!
Come, come to sleep, to move awhile
Through dreams no loveller than your days,
Far all you know of life, Mignon,
Is bright and fair as Dreamland's ways!

Mignon, Mignon, come now to sleep,
Your toys are weary after play,
While shadows creep, find slumber deep
And dreams no loveller than your day!

NOW THAT TRAINS are running faster than automobiles it behooves all of us to watch our step.

THE SPEED GOD REIGNS, but why all this hurry to get to Montreal, it isn't an oasis in the desert any more since the O.T.A. died?

PASSENGER TRAINS speeding up to eighty miles an hour, automobiles bowling, aeroplanes up to two hundred, just where are we going and why?

CLOSING OF LOWER BRIDGE to vehicular traffic has its complications. Rawson busline is seriously affected by the long detour via Front street, the upper bridge and Coleman street to Bridge street adding over half a mile to the west hill route. It is understood that the upper bridge will be restricted to vehicles under four tons weight and this will bar the Toronto busses which will be forced to use the College street bridge which will add considerable distance to the route. Bus men will be singing "All round the mulberry bush to get to Belleville." In any event motorists, bus passengers and truck drivers will see more of Belleville.

PARKING PROBLEM is still worrying the minds of citizens, including the aldermen. One Front street merchant suggests a two-hour parking by-law which would do away with permanent parking, give time for shopping. Others favor one hour, and still others think that parking should be on one side only, alternating for the blocks. When the new busses with their eight feet beam go on looks as though there would have to be some skillful navigating.

SAW A FAMILY PARTY sitting in an automobile on Front street eating bananas and throwing the peelings on the road, saw a Chinaman dumping out the leavings in his garbage can also on the street. Don't blame the Chinaman as much as the others who should have known better.

LETTERS to the Editor

CENOTAPH

Ont. April 28, 1930.

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—

Having seen the sketch of the new bridge and proposed memorial arches I must say it looks fine. The arches make a complete finish to the bridge but they do not fill the need of a cenotaph where the family of the boys who never came back can lay a token of remembrance.

The suggestion that the traffic problem will again come up in years to come is true and in fifty years' time one would not like to see the arches scrapped. We are in favor of the Pan Ter's Park proposition. The property at the end would be an eye sore to a new bridge, and if it could be bought and the Park extended it would make an ideal place for a cenotaph. It was the first place ever proposed and the late General S. Hughes turned the sod for a memorial. The cost would be no more than arches.

Yours truly,

stated that her title referred to those hundreds of organizations in foreign countries who year by year seek new homes in Canada. "Canada's greatest need is immigration and population," continued the speaker, "but we must consider the quality rather than the quantity. Canada welcomes all industrious immigrants with open arms." The speaker went on to tell of the great advantages Canada has to offer to the home seeker, the vast areas of unused or agricultural country waiting to be developed, of the great mining industries, and dozens of other opportunities which await men and women of resourcefulness. She spoke briefly on the welcome given to these foreigners when they arrive from their home countries. How the Canadian churches at the four eastern points make them welcome, of the work done by the British Welcome League, of the free-dom of worship and of the educational advantages which are free all over the country. Miss Adams then gave an entrance her listeners the other side of the question, "What, she asked, "do settlers bring to us," and answered the question by stating that they bring to us music, art, sculpture, architecture handicraft and literature and countless other arts, which help to build a greater and better Canada. Miss Adams concluded her fine speech by asking "Why then should we not encourage these settlers to help build our country so that she may take her place side by side with the most progressive nations of the world?"

Mr. Baxter of the Picton collegiate was the next speaker and his discourse on "World Peace" held his audience from beginning to end, and won for him the district championship. Mr. Baxter first referred to the great tragedy of the World War and of the trifling thing by which it was caused. He went on to say that leading statesmen have since the Armistice been seeking to solve the problem of World Peace. "If people think thoughts of peace," continued the speaker, "they will live peace." "The methods of years ago do not apply to the present time," said Mr. Baxter, "and the nations are beginning to realize, that preparation for war is not a hindrance to this great disaster, but on the other hand it enters them to conflict much more quickly than disarmament." "At the conclusion of the late war," he continued, "there was formed in connection with the League of Nations a World Court where international disputes could be settled without resorting to war. The high aim of the court is "World Peace". In conclusion Mr. Baxter told his audience to take Canada and the United States as an example. "Here are two great countries, he said, lying side by side, with only an imaginary line dividing them, yet they have engaged in no conflict for over one hundred years. It is the intention, said Mr. Baxter, to erect on this boundary an international Peace Garden, wherein will be no arms or steel, which signify war, but flowers and shrubs, the emblems of peace. When this great work is completed it will be a living example to nations of the world and a reminder to them that life can be lived in peace and without conflict.

Mr. Charles Amery of the Napanee Collegiate was the last speaker and his subject "Electricity and its development in farming life", proved most interesting to his listeners. He emphasized the great need of electricity in the life of the farm, and of the countless uses it could be put to on the farm. He spoke of the development of streams and river in Ontario which are furnishing no power. "These," said Mr. Amery "could be harnessed and the electricity produced used by the farmers in their daily life." The speaker told of the great help electricity could be to the farming world in the way of lighting, washing, sweeping, steelers. These advantages, Mr. Amery emphasized, are enjoyed by city people who have not nearly as much work as the farmers, so why should they not be enjoyed by the country people. He spoke of the farming industry as one of the greatest and most important industries in Canada and hoped that in time electricity would be available for every person on the farm. "Perhaps, concluded Mr. Amery, electricity on the farm can be compared to automobiles. A few years ago very few people had cars, now practically every family is enjoying their use. It may be the same with electricity and I hope that this day may not be far distant."

After the contests the audience was treated to a splendid musical monologue of a play, "Midsummer Night's Dream" by the second form pupils of Picton Collegiate, selections from the Girls' Chorus and Boys' Choir of the B.C.I. and a piano solo and reading by pupils of the Napanee Collegiate.

The three judges chosen for the oratorical contest, were Professor Stewart of the O.S.D., Belleville Collegiate, Dr. C. A. Public, Picton Collegiate, His Worship Mayor Simpson of Napanee, Napanee Collegiate.

RECORD REVIEW

The list of 44 Victor Records, offered as fresh entertainment for the merry month of May, provides a representative musical cross-section of the public's demands for the day. No composition has yet been written to please all of the people all of the time but the number of the records this should accomplish even this. Here is your critic's choice of the leaders.

Dance Records

One Day I Love Just Can't Be Bothered With Me—Fred Culley and His Royal York Orchestra. A catchy fox-trot melody emphasized by particularly smart and rhythmic lyrics. Culley's all-Canadian band is a hit.

Cross Your Fingers—Nat Shilkret and The Victor Orchestra. This one goes back a few years for its melody, and makes you like it. The strains of "Baml Baml Bammy Shore" are quickly recognized, but the rhythm of course is strictly modern. Good foxtrot which also makes listening pleasant.

In My Little Hope Chest—The High Hatters. One of the many, not to say one of the best, of the day's "optimistic" songs. The orchestra clicks in putting it across for the fox-trotters.

Popular Vocal

Gems from "Sunny Side Up"—Victor Light Opera Company. If you've seen and heard the show you'll want this one. If you haven't the record will give you a little of why the theatres are still standing 'em up for the screen version.

The One Girl—John Boles. Something away above the usual theme song. Boles scored with it in "Song of the West" and repeats on the record.

And Then He Took Up Golf—Frank Crumit. His hit-like patter about the world's most virulent athletic affliction. Graniland Rice wrote the words. Wot sed.

Red Seal

H. M. The King's Speech—The address with which His Majesty opened the Naval Conference. Recorded simultaneously with broadcast. Excellent reproduction.

The Boss of Trales—John McCormack. If great Irishmen needs any further popularizing with his public, his singing in "Song O' My Heart" should do it. The four songs he records reveal the typical McCormack and all the vocal qualities which have won him a place all his own.

The Prophet—Feodor Chaliapin. The remarkable Russian basso in a Rimsky Korsakoff composition which gives his talents full scope.

COUNTING CHICKENS

Washington, May 1—The fans who take no chances are rapping at the Washington ball club's door for world series reservations already.

More than 200 emails were received after Walter Johnston's lads had won eight straight. The club officials don't know what to do about it.

SAYS NOVA SCOTIA LADY OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. Geo. Weatherbee Suffered With Kidney and Bladder Weakness

Greenville, N.S., April 28 (Special)—"I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble," writes Mrs. Geo. Weatherbee, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. "Before my first baby was born I was troubled with kidney and bladder weakness. One day I read in Dodd's Almanac about Dodd's Kidney Pills so I purchased four boxes and they certainly helped me. I can recommend them to all who suffer as I did."

That birs. Weatherbee's trouble came from her kidneys is evidenced by the relief she got from Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are purely and simply a kidney remedy. Many women suffer periodically with backache, and, as middle age approaches, the pain increases in severity. Rest may give temporary relief, but Dodd's Kidney Pills do much more than this. They strengthen the weak kidneys and remove the cause of the pain.

Delicious with prunes, baked apples, sliced bananas or any fruit.

W. S. DYER INSPECTS LYNITE OPERATIONS

William S. Dyer, Government geologist in charge of the Onakawana lignite fields in the Blacksmith Rapids district left Toronto yesterday for the scene of operations.

Mr. Dyer is a son of the late Dr. W. Dyer, former principal of Albert College and a cousin of Mrs. A. R. Echryer of this city.

GETS POSITION IN OLD COUNTRY

Memorial Gates Will Be Dedicated on Dominion Day

PICTON, April 30—(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)—Mr. Arthur Pope has accepted a position with a canning company in England as mechanical superintendent.

He is leaving Picton on May 3rd and will sail from Quebec on the C. P. R. steamship Duchess of Scotland landing at Southampton and going on to London for a few days, before taking up his duties.

The position was secured through Brown-Boggs Co., Hamilton, manufacturers of canning machines, who are trading a number of their machines to the English canning plant. He is under contract for one year. Mrs. Pope and children will remain in town.

Mr. Pope has had a wide experience in handling canning machinery which will equip him for his work overseas.

He came to town a few weeks ago from Bellville, where he had been connected with a canning factory.

Mr. Donald Minaker of the Royal Bank, Bellville, is visiting his mother in town.

The schools re-opened on Monday after the Easter holidays.

Miss Lena Emmons, Odessa is a guest of Miss Ruth Minaker.

Those brave men from Wellington vicinity who gave their lives in the Great War for King and Country will be remembered at the July 1st celebration at Wellington, when memorial gates will be dedicated to their memory.

It was not so long ago that a branch of the Canadian Legion was formed at Wellington and already they have shown great enterprise in putting over number of events. Their latest is a memorial to their fallen comrades and a Dominion Day celebration.

A number of Wellington Old Boys have contributed to this worthy cause and contracts for the memorial gates have been let — the building to have been let—the building to James Patrick of Bellevile, and the granite and bronze tablets to W. A. Jones and Son of Picton.

The memorial gates will join the entrance into Wellington's beautiful park by the lake.

Work on the erection of this memorial will begin shortly.

New School

There is a movement on foot to secure a new public school for Picton, but nothing definite has been decided. It is claimed, that in the present, the lighting in most of the rooms, is exceptionally bad. The Public School Inspector has prepared a report which favors building a new school or remodelling the present one.

CENTRAL LEAGUE PROSPECTS ARE NOT CLARIFIED

Peterboro May Not Enter and Oshawa Dislikes 3-Team Loop

PRESIDENT BUSY

The situation in the affairs of the Central Ontario Baseball League are at present discouraging but prospects are for a better condition. An adjourned meeting of the league was held at the Queen's Hotel, last night, with delegates present from Oshawa, Belleville and Kingston. Peterboro threw a monkey wrench in the proceedings by not attending and signifying their intention of dropping out owing to the total situation in Peterboro for a year or so. Oshawa with this information at hand refused to consider a three team loop and the meeting became a stalemate for the time being.

A brighter cloud appeared on the horizon when Mr. Elliott suggested a probable solution to the situation and this will be acted upon. Mr. Elliott will journey to Peterboro, personally to look over the situation and a meeting of the league will be held in the Lift Lock City on Saturday. All the delegates present at the meeting last night were unanimous that everything possible should be done to keep the league in existence. Business men in Peterboro are more favorably inclined to the operation of the league than they have been for some time and probably with a little missionary help at the present time the proposition can be put over.

READING NOSED OUT THE BISONS

Jersey City Came From Behind to Defeat the Red Wings

Baltimore, May 1—On the arrival of the Toronto team here late last night, Steve O'Neill, manager of the Leafs, announced that Frank Harner, crack southpaw, would be his pitcher in the first game of the series with the Orioles on Friday. Guy Cantrell will work on Saturday, while Johnny Prudhomme and Kyle Graham are slated to get the assignments in the double-header on Sunday. That means Sam Gibson who has won both his starts in league games by the shutout route, is being groomed to pitch against Reading in the Toronto opener next Tuesday.

While Frank Barnes went down in both games he pitched since the schedule got under way, he was more or less unlucky, especially at Jersey City where errors by Pete Cote and Holen Richardson looked defeat in his way. Then his team mates did not do much in a hitting way.

Reading, May 1—Reading came from behind to nose out Buffalo in the first game of the series 7 to 6.

The Keys scored five runs in the seventh inning after the Bisons had tallied for four markers in their half of the frame.

GRETA GARBO THRILLS CROWD

Most Intense Acting By Fair Artists in O'Neill Play

"Anna Christie", the much talked of play which Greta Garbo chose for her introduction to the sound pictures drew large audiences at the Belle Theatre last night. Opinion was not unanimous as to the merits of the story but there could be no question about the excellence of the acting and the appeal of a story which shows some the the seamy side of life in such a frank manner. The acting of Marie Dressler as an old woman of the streets in the slums of New York, ever fond of her gin and bitters and too far gone in sin to be careful of her actions was an artistic piece of character acting and comedy work. The part of the old Swede sea captain (George F. Marion), who hated 'that old devil sea" which was forever seeking to drag sailors down to the depths was exceptionally well taken as was the part of the young Irish sailor, (Charles Bickford), whose love triumphed over every obstacle and was firmly anchored to his religion in the final renunciation of his prejudices in favor of his affections.

On the Sport Trail

Evident depression in the Senior baseball situation at Peterboro, has turned to optimism and the outlook in the Lift Lock City is a good deal brighter today than it was yesterday. There was Lift enthusiasm manifested at the meeting on Monday night but some of the city's sport supporters have rallied to the cause and there is every possibility that Peterboro will be included. Central League fans are pulling for the Petes anyway and here's hoping they manage to muster a club.

Oshawa was none too keen to enter with three teams while Belleville delegates while not opposed, did not express enthusiasm over the prospect Kingston were quite agreeable to anything. Th's fellow Murray of the 21st Battalion Club is a real supporter of Lakefield and the Kingston club is fortunate in having a man of Mr. Murray's calibre at its head.

There is little doubt now but that the Petes will be in, and it will make a splendid compact four team group. Peterboro have sufficient material but there is no one to get behind the club. An encompassing news story in these columns from Peterboro indicates that there is still a spark of enthusiasm left and some of the old executive may take hold of the situation.

R. A. Elliott, President, has been done some revolutionary work in Peterboro and he will no doubt convince the supporters of the need of a senior team in the northern metropolis.

Following are a few comments on the Central League situation from the pen of the Kingston-Whig Standard scribe.

The plea of the Petes is that they are under heavy expense and therefore cannot take a chance on going into the C.O.B.L. What they mean, here's reason. Their only trip is to Kingston, while the locals take the long jaunt to Oshawa and do no kicking about it.

As a matter of fact, it is understood that players in Peterboro wanted to enter the C.O.B.L. and signed with the General Electric team believing that this would be done. The team, however, is entering intermediate series.

It will be too bad if Peterboro drop out simply because it will mean a three team league. But that will not deter Oshawa, Belleville and Kingston who will operate with the Lift Lock team.

PETERBORO MAY YET FIELD TEAM

Baseball Enthusiasts Are Rallying to the Cause

PETERBORO, May 1—There still remains good reason for optimism as to the chances of Peterboro placing senior baseball team in the Central League. The old executive, it is believed, is willing to stage a comeback and attend to the business details involved in staging a senior team on condition that they get the undivided and co-operative support of all players and team officials.

Several business men, representative of the baseball enthusiasts of the city, when interviewed expressed the belief that a senior team for Peterborough can be made possible, and several are even prepared to assist financially if the project can be placed on a business like basis.

In Favor of Team

Ernest L. Payne: "As Peterborough has been represented by a senior team by the interest of the city in sport, and in baseball for some years, it would be for publicity as well."

Dr. J. B. Pentland: "I would like to see a team in the Senior League. It would be willing to contribute if enough would go in. Surely to goodness a town like this can have a senior team."

Frank G. Stinson stated: "To me it would seem too bad to dispense with senior ball as far as Peterborough is concerned. We have a beautiful baseball field in James Stevenson Park. Both our senior hockey and baseball, as well as junior teams, have given the city publicity, nationally and internationally. Looking back to the time when our hockey teams did so well, it seems to me that as a city we discourage senior hockey when we did go ahead and plan for an artificial arena. I assume too that great difficulty has been experienced financially in senior baseball, even though we have had exceptionally fine senior teams.

Chas. Cummer says: "I love the sport. I hate to see the city drop out of senior ball. In consideration of the fact that the city has made such a splendid showing in past years in junior series, there surely must be ample material in the city from which to drop a senior team."

Chris. Graham states: "I would like to see senior ball continued. It would give the younger fellows a chance."

Harry Williamson says: "I am for senior baseball. It brings business to the city. It brings visitors from other towns and cities."

Give Younger Players a Chance

Dr. E. S. Woods, over the 'phone stated: "I feel that we should remain in the Central Ontario Senior League. We should have a team. This would give the younger players a chance."

"It is very desirable that Peterborough should have a senior ball team in the Central Ontario League this season," exclaimed A. E. G. Patterson, who has always been a generous supporter of all kinds of sport, and particularly baseball. He was one of the promoters of the former Peterborough team in the Canadian Professional League.

MONTREAL GETS AN ACE

Montreal, May 1—The first hole in one of the new golf season has been made on a Montreal course. The ace was secured by Robert Mickles on the 125-yard fifth hole of the north course of the Royal Montreal Golf Club when his mashie shot from the tee ended its flight in the cup.

They not only drive worms from the system, but repair the damage that worms cause and so invigorate the constitution that it speedily recovers from the disorders of the digestion that are the result of the work of these parasitic intruders. CITY COUNCIL RECEIVES NO PAY

Belleville Representatives in Payless Class in Ontario

During the past week or so Toronto citizens and city officials have been making a great issue of the "salary grab" on the part of members of the Toronto City Council. It is interesting to note that in cities of a smaller size, such as Belleville, there is no likelihood of any such trouble, as local aldermen serve the city entirely without remuneration, and consider it a privilege to be in a position to give these services. The mayor, also gives his services free and the only remuneration received by him is an honorarium of $500.00 per year. From this it can be seen that the local council is bound to be made up of men who have the best interests of the city at heart, and not by those who would merely seek a position on the council, in order to obtain a substantial remuneration at the end of the year.

Paying of aldermen is practiced in some cities and it may be of interest to readers to know that in London, Ontario, the aldermen receive $5.00 a meeting for their services in connection with meetings of standing committees and Council sessions. The mayor of London receives a salary of $5,000 per year.

CHEESEMAKERS ARE COMMENDED

Dairy Organizations Praise Competition Put On to Raise Production

Commendation from various branches of the Dairy Industry have been pouring into the office of J. L. Irvin, produce grader of this district respecting the competition sponsored by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, in which cash awards will be given to patrons of various cheese districts in which the Association are interested. W. F. Hagbens, secretary treasurer of the National Dairy Council of Canada wrote to the secretary of the Association commending the action to increase production and better fat among the patrons. Already eveelen patrons have entered from the Campbellford district of which J. A. Murray is the Dairy Instructor.

The banks in the district have contributed liberally to the scheme, the Association receiving cheques of $50.00 each from the Royal Bank, Bank of Montreal, Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Dominion Bank. In past years these banks have donated cups for various competitions but waved their right and gave money in this instance. The prizes are all large and the patrons will receive a fine present whether they be the winner in their district, through Mr. Irwin for the Association the banks are thanked for their interest in the matter.

TRENTON EMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS SHOWING A MARKED IMPROVEMENT

Some Disappointment Expressed in Hold-up at Airport

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 1.—Within the past week, employment conditions in Trenton have taken a turn for the better, until now very few of the regular residents are without work, although there is still quite a large floating population doing nothing. The Airport has been a great disappointment to many, and very little work is being done there, even now that the fine weather has started.

Work on the overhead bridge west of Trenton, has absorbed a large number of workers, while the Cooperage Mills which started again after a winter layoff, took on fifty men the other day.

The Canada Crecote Company has been a steady place of employment all winter, about one hundred and fifty men having worked there are winter. Timber Products Limited operated their sawmill without a break from the day it was opened, about the middle of March, and a large number are found work there when the pinch was hardest.

Other mills and factories, such as the E. and E. Dauche Paper Mill, the Belden Mills Factory, and the Glen Miller Paper Mills have been running steady all winter, and employing a large number of people.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE CARD PARTY

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 1.—The Catholic Women's League of Trenton, held a most successful Card Party in the Parish Hall from three o'clock to six yesterday afternoon. A large number of ladies were in attendance, and all enjoyed the occasion, which was spent playing euchre, bridge and other card games, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Thomas Quinn is president of the League in Trenton.

PLEADS GUILTY; PAYS COURT FINE

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 1.—Trenton Police Court is a busy place these days, with traffic cases predominating all others. Yesterday morning Osselton Donetta pleaded guilty to reckless driving and was fined ten dollars. This is the man who ran his car in front of a G. N. R. train. Tuesday morning, and although the car was badly smashed, and his wife somewhat cut about the face, he escaped injury.

Three motorists paid five dollars each for failing to stop at Bridge Streets while several others paid five and costs for exceeding the speed limit through the town. Magistrate T. A. O'Rourke was on the Bench.

ELEVEN ENTRIES IN HERD CONTEST

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Campbellford, May 1.—Eleven entries in the Farm and Herd Competition have been sent in to the secretary, J. H. Dudgeon, from the Campbellford district and all these will be in the thick of the battel for prizes. This competition is open to every Cheese factory patron in Central Ontario and before the fist of June rolls around, which is the last day for the receiving of entries, it is expected that a large number, considerably over five hundred, will be in the competition. It ends on the 31st of October.

The Campbellford district entries are: Alec Linn, Menie Factory; John Odell, Prince of Wales factory; Stan Diamond, Kimberley factory; John Bennett and Andrew Haig, Kim berley factory; Elvin Pollock and Linsley Watson, Prince of Wales factory; Thomas Watson, Trent Valley factory; C. W. Anderson, Brae factory; W. B. Miller, Prince of Wales factory; Rol-fity dollars each to the competition.

HOLSTEIN CLUB WAS ORGANIZED

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Brighton, May 1.—Under the able direction of Agricultural Representative Smith, of Brighton, a Holstein Heifer Club has been organized and already 1.e members of the Club have had their animals delivered to them. The heifers cost approximately two hundred dollars apiece and their records will be taken as soon as they have come into milk. Club members will be under the supervision of the department and will receive assistance in feeding, breeding and management of the cattle.

In addition to the record of performances, club competitions will be held at the local fall fairs and special trophies will be donated by the Provincial Department of Agriculture so that every encouragement will be given to the competitors to exhibit their stock in a businesslike way. The objects of the club are to stimulate an interest in good stock and to encourage the members to keep record forms. Class of this kind are of great influence in the breeding of good stock in a community, it has been found. Where necessary, the Department will furnish a pure bred bull, free of charge.

Douglas' Egyptian Liniment is unsurpassed for rheumatism, lame back, inflammation, burns and felons.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

Now don't run after them if they run away; just tap the tin a little, as you drop a little custard in front of their mother so she can call them.

Let me say right here: Never try to drive any bird. They can hide where you can't, and experience has proven to my entire satisfaction that they can fly faster than I can run. Always throw feed and kindness at them, and watch results.

In about a week, let the hen out a few minutes before sundown, as she hasn't time to stray far from home and will go back into the roost. In about another week the hen can run all the time with her family. Feed at the back door, or any place you want the quail to come, and your pets will be there. Remember that it is the human race that is wild, not the birds. Birds are wild because they have to be, and we are wild because we prefer to be. Any creature that is intelligent enough to fly or run from you for self-preservation, will come to you for food and protection from all other enemies.

And to the value of quail, I know this, that they are the farmer's friends; that they cannot live in the fields in winter, and that they do follow up the pioneer's axe where climate will allow; and that fully seventy-five per cent of their diet consists of weed-seed and insects that are injurious to the production of food stuffs for the human race. The small amount of wheat they eat is most all gathered from the stubble field, and as for the few kernels of corn, this is mostly taken during the winter; and we all know that a farmer who makes a practice of leaving his corn out, is an undesirable heavy weight and possibly has no appreciation of Bob White's beautiful note ringing in the country, and the sooner, he moves to town and joins the "Retired Failures' Association" the better for the country.

CHAPTER VI

Raising English or Ring-necked Pheasants in Canada.

Having often heard father speak of the English pheasant as a beautiful game bird, and as I was overly anxious to pay Canada back some of the birds I had conserved in my younger days, I decided to try these pheasants.

In 1896 I sent to Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, for two or three settings of English pheasants' eggs. I felt sure this climate would agree with them as they were exactly the same breed as I was. English buck-eyes! However I was smart enough not to ignore my mother's kind offer, and I let her have one setting to hatch for me. I paid particular attention to the two hens I set, scarcely allowing them to get off the nest; and here is where I now believe I made the mistake. Not one egg hatched. But dear mother signalled me to come over and I was right there. Her old hen had hatched eleven. Mother smiled and gave them to me, hen and all, but told me to leave them with her until the next day. Then I moved them, and raised nine to the size of a quail, when a dog killed four, leaving the old hen and me with only five. Four of these proved to be males and a cat owl killed the hen. March, 1896 found me with four beautiful male birds only.

I had now learned that a gentleman in London, Ontario, had English pheasants for sale, and as my experience had proved that an English buck-eye hitched up to a Canada was a joyous, satisfactory cross, with the human race I wrote this man and secured two hens which were undoubtedly English-Canadian. I liberated three of the four male birds and put the two hens in with the one male, and from this trio we hatched sixty-two pheasants. Then I enclosed four acres with a wire fence seven feet high. Along one side I made several brood pens about two rods square, each. I put one male bird with every five hens, putting plenty of gravel and grit in each pen so as to secure good digesting powers. I also gave the birds plenty of shade.

Our pheasant hens laid from thirty-five to fifty eggs each between April the 15th and June the 15th. By giving the old birds lots of grit, the egg shells were very hard. I used Wyandotte hens for mothers, putting from twenty to twenty-five eggs under each hen, and setting them on the damp ground as much as possible. The eggs, like quail eggs, hatch in twenty-four days. I pursued the same course, all through as I have described for raising quail, only the nest and coop are one-quarter larger. I used the insect powder by the pound. I usually set four or five hens at a time; keeping a record of the same, I knew when to prepare for it hatch. I penned them in front of her for two or three days, the same as with the quail.

When raising pheasants, I never let hens out of the coops. When birds are from six to eight weeks old I take the hen away but leave the coop there. Coops may be set around like beehives, two or three rods apart. I paint and oil my coops, some white and some red; the little fellows will know their own coops and will not forget them.

Remembers, I have experimented with a great variety of pheasant foods. I have raised flies by the tens of thousands to feed to them. To do this I would take a piece of meat, say of beef's liver, allow the flies to blow it, and a few hours later throw the meat in a barrel; the barrel would be partly filled with rotten sawdust and the top of it would be covered with a screen, with a hole left about an inch in diameter. In a few days the maggots would have the meat all eaten up, and would have disappeared into the sawdust below. In about two weeks the barrel would be simply full of flies. I would now put a small flytrap over the hole, darkening the rest of the screen; the flies would come to the light, get into the traps, and when in the small trap could be either scalded or drowned. I have also fed the pheasants the maggots. But to raise either flies or maggots is not as desirable for the nose as it might look from the eye and both are unnessesary. Feed a little custard, and when about two weeks old, add corn-meal to it. Keep them hungry and let them hunt for insects. Exercise is what they need and what they must have. When birds are three months old, they should be caught and shipped.

The high fence for young is unnecessary, for your birds will know you and will by just as tame as chickens. In this way I made my pleasure self-sustaining, and I would often let an old hen and fifteen or twenty go. The finest brood I ever saw was out of two poor hatches. I put twenty-five with one hen and in about a week I let hen and all out. They roamed all over the premises, but of course like spiteful deeds and chickens, they came home to roost. I fed them just enough to give them a sweet taste in their mouths, and the hen raised twenty-three of them. How they did grow! Finally she left them and they went to the woods about one-half mile away.

In this way I stocked this township so I could have shot a two-bushel bag full in half a day. Two miles north of my place there were twenty-eight hens dusting in the road at one time. But today I doubt if there is one left in the township. Men came for miles and miles around. Yes, I have seen them come twenty-five miles to hunt rabbits in this neighborhood! Now I don't want to insinuate that all rabbit hunters are hunting pheasants, but what I really want to say is that all pheasant hunters were hunting rabbits!

CHAPTER VII

The Natural Enemies of Our Birds

Now we come to the most serious question that the bird-lovers of America are up against; and until this great question is settled, we shall con tinue to go pell mell against each other.

At a sportsmen's show in Michigan I saw one-half dozen mounted hawks in a glass case, and there were thousands of school children looking at them. The label read: "These are all valuable hawks." Another man will say, "Destroy every owl or great horned owl," and possibly this same man will advocate the destruction of the wild house-cat with the positive fact is that this owl is nothing but a wild house-cat with the advantage of wings to help destroy crops, while murderous depredations he has got the house-cat chased right out of the slaughter house, for he will kill and eat a great variety of wild birds and animals I have never known a house-cat to destroy, such as turkeys, wild geese, peacocks, all kinds of hawks and all other owls, and animals such as skunks, mus krats, groundhogs, minks, weasels and hares. Now, although I have no personal knowledge of this, yet a gentleman farmer who lived near the woods told me (and I believe him) that he did not repeat that his bounty of house cats which were about half grown, were in the habit of climbing upon the roof of the house and sitting near the chimney to keep warm during the winter months; these horned owls came and made away every one of the cats. However, I have no positive proof of this last statement. But this I do know: There is nothing reaches high enough or sleeps low enough to be out of reach of this heartless cannibal. One regrettable fact to me is that I have never seen where another bird or animal ever killed a great horned owl, although they have lived in the township with me all my life.

VALUE OF GRADED BEEF TO HOUSEWIVES

Edmonton, Alta., May 1 (CP)—The value of graded beef in aiding the housewife in her purchase of this important home commodity formed the subject of one of the most interesting demonstrations given in this city, in a long time when more than 100 women representing affiliated organizations of the district, received information given out by officials of the Dominion livestock branch of the department of agriculture. Two halves of beef were used in the demonstration one of which was divided into the various cuts found in the retail stores and the winners were each presented with a roast or steak from the cuts.

A band of gypsies were chased out of Belleville on Saturday. They were riding in Hudson and Cadillac cars, and stopped to do their old tricks of "telling fortunes" and "making your money grow", but were ordered to move on, as it was said they had done some very shady work in Western Ontario.

The late eight year old Walter Savage who was drowned in March by the railway bridge and found near the docks last week, was taken to Perth for burial.

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY

Gladys Johnson

Ridiculous..... to be searching like this for something which couldn't be here..... What could be printed in The Spy which could concern her? And yet, why had it been mailed to her, if not to wound?

Down in a corner, that column of sneering personalities called Through the Spyglass.....

"The night has a thousand eyes— the day but one— " So runs the old verse, which is perhaps the reason the night sees so many more interesting things than does the day.

Apropos of which, The Spy saw such a touching sight a few nights ago. A young married man of this town calling on his former inamorata. Tender love scenes are so touching!

I shall not disclose his name, of course, for The Spy is never indiscreet, nor do we wish to cause trouble among those who sit in the high places, and this young man, not so long ago married into one of our wealthiest families. Nor can one entirely blame him, for it is whispered that he was much enamored of this lovely blonde who is fair, though she does not belong to the social elect.

Be that as it may—this gentleman's call upon the lady of his secret choice, did not end until that hour when the milkman beginsth his rounds.

The Enemy at Work

Tut! tut! K. What would the fair wife say!

Fortunate it is that this little love nest is hidden where no one would ever look for it. But Cupid is a sly fellow and can find his way even down among the busy marts of trade.

By the time Ardeth had finished reading Iris effusion, her face was white and cold. She turned to the heading address on the cover. Only the curt, typewritten direction which gave her no clue as to the sender.

She tore up and found her eyes caught by the gaze of Ah Ling standing opposite in the doorway. And Ardeth knew that in some fashion the contents of this paper were known to the Chinese girl.

Warm sympathy in Ah Ling's gaze. "That is a bad paper! I wanted to throw it out, Miss Carroll, but—" she shrugged, "sometimes it is better to know what our enemies are saying. Then we can be on guard."

Ardeth swept the paper into the basket as though it were a snake.

Ah Ling is Wise

"It's vile. Why—who would put that thing in?"

Her mind went fearfully back to the night when Ken had come here—dazed and seeking comfort. Someone had followed him..... someone had waited to see him leave..... Some enemy, lurking about the small shop in the night, finding, perhaps in the dark alley, peering in at them.

The thought was horrible.

"Oh—a dastardly thing to do!" she heard herself saying in a low, intent voice, which she did not recognize "A—a rotten thing to do! Who would want to hurt me..... Who would do such a thing?"

"The Spy," Ah Ling returned promptly with a wise look of her slant eyes.

"But who is he!" Ardeth blazed at her. "If I could find out I would..... I would have him horsewhipped out of a decent community."

Ah Ling shook her head with its waves of tampered hair. The small ivory face was expressionless, her eyes were remote.

"No, Miss Carroll. You could not afford to do that. Neither you—nor any of the other people he has slandered. For the world would misunderstand. They would not applaud you for killing a snake. They would say you were admitting your guilt. Can't you see—to take offense at what is written is to admit guilt. That is why such a thing as that—can live." She poked contemptuously at the green sheet with one orange brocaded slipper. "It would be all the world needed to start it whispering. The world is not charitable."

The Spy Revealed

"Ah Ling—Ricardi! You know who The Spy is!"

"I know. I will tell you—for your own protection. It is Cyril Underhill." Little Rosie Ling's lip curled as she said it for she hated him.

Ardeth's eyes went wide for a moment. "How do you know?"

The slanting eyes glittered. "My cousin Lee works for him as cook. Mr. Cyril Underhill is careless! He leaves his papers about his apartment. If he thinks at all of Lee he thinks 'Oh, he is just ignorant Chink.' " The vermilion lips curled. "My cousin Lee is American born. He reads English as good as me—as you—though that so clever Mr. Underhill does not know that.

"He knows much, my cousin Lee. What this Cyril Underhill does. Who calls upon him—" she suddenly shocked herself. Slanted a sidewise look at the other girl. Made a little gesture with her hands.

"Well, I have told you. Because I like you a lot, Miss Carroll. But you will say nothing, of course."

The Scandal-Monger

Ardeth was silent, turning over in her mind the information she had just received. She did not doubt the truth of Ah Ling's statement for a moment. She knew the network of relationship which bound together San Francisco's Chinese. She knew the diversion of those excellent servants who could hear and see all and say nothing—at least to no white person.

Chinatown could ring with the affairs of Pacific avenue, but Pacific avenue would never guess it. It was Ah Ling's personal loyalty alone which had allowed even this much to seep out to her.

So Cyril Underhill was The Spy. Her face burned as she remembered the days he had been down here, petted and patronized by the very women he was secretly stabbing in the back.

She remembered him standing, dark and elegant by the Coromandal screen reading excerpts from the scandalous articles he had secretly written, encouraged by malicious feminine laughter.

Ardeth's Hands Tied

Did Cecile know he was The Spy? It would be like her to appreciate the spiteful humor of thus being behind the scenes. Or was Cecile deceived and worked as well? Was this man of no loyalties leading her on, too?

But Ah Ling was right! Ardeth thought with a sudden maddening sense of impotence. Her hands were tied with her knowledge. If she told this to Kirs..... her heart leaped with fright. Ken would kill the sneak. It would mean a scandal which would bring the world down about their ears. To expose Cyril Underhill would release scandals whose ramifications led far back. An avalanche which would shake a city to its social depths.

No. Nos yet. Wait! And in the meantime do nothing which could bring this scandal monger down upon her defenseless head.

FORT BELVEDERE GETS A SPRING CLEANING

London, May 1 (CP)—One of the last of the Royal residences to receive its spring housecleaning is Fort Belvedere, the Prince of. Wales' out-of-town house, this having been left to the last in order that the house might be as spick-and-span as possible when the Prince returns from his African trip. During the absence of the Prince the Queen has been keeping an eye on things for him, and has twice visited Fort Belvedere to see that everything was running smoothly there.

The Prince's special treasures, such as the trophies he has gathered during his visits to various parts of the world, the picture he has had specially painted of his aeroplane in flight, and the plain mahogany desk at which he writes, have been her Majesty's particular care. All these are gathered together in the Prince's study, and the Queen has inspected them carefully during her visits.

Old Dutch Cleanser protects your home with Healthful Cleanliness because it removes the dangerous invisible impurities as well as the visible uncleanliness. Old Dutch chases all dirt—none is left behind.

There is nothing else like Old Dutch. To the eye it looks like a fine powder but through the microscope you see thousands of flaky, flat-shaped particles of distinctive character. These particles possess natural detergent qualities—they erase the dirt.

This drawing of a highly magnified Old Dutch particle illustrates how completely and safely Old Dutch works. Being flat-shaped, these particles make a perfect contact with the surface. They make a clean sweep and leave the surface smooth and free from scratches. Old Dutch doesn't harm the hands.

Old Dutch doesn't scratch. Avoid damaging grit. This drawing shows a highly magnified particle of hard, scratchy grit at work. Being of irregular shape the sharp, hard points dig into the surface and leave scratches which not only mar its beauty but are lodging places for dirt and impurities.

P. E. I. THE HOME OF OLD CLIPPERS

Recall Days When Georgetown Competed with Fundy Ports

Charlottetown, P. E. I., May 1 (CP)—Evidence that the modern familiarity with Prince Edward Island as Canada's garden province has not obliterated memories of the island as the home of tall clippers, has been set forth in the reminiscences of one of the province's old time salts, now a resident of that other isle, Cape Breton, whose recollections go back to the days when Georgetown competed with the Fundy ports as a home for masters to sail.

Shipwreck, storm, record crossings, the whole routine of wind-ship experiences were the yearly lot of more than a score of deepwater captains out of Georgetown in the latter half of the last century.

Captain Jack Gordon, known as most dashing of the Islandmen. Times were dull when with two other masters he was forced to sign on as able seaman on a full-rigger bound from Greenock, Scotland, to San Francesco. In the Californian port Captain Jack joined an old Scottish side-wheeler plying to Callao, Peru, but his new appointment was shortlived, Callao rum proved heady, and the Georgetown skipper woke up in the Inca ruins at Cuzco. Working his way back to San Francisco, he began the long journey overland to the Atlantic, spending the first winter in Missouri with an old trapper. Although Captain Jack had many souvenirs of foreign countries gathered on subsequent voyages, none were valued more highly than a tobacco box of petrified wood which came into his possession during the voyage across America, and a policeman's whistle picked up after a scuffle with the bobbies just before the circuitous journey began at Greenock.

Captain William Gordon and his four brothers, first cousins of Captain Jack, comprised one of Georgetown's most famous sea-going families. William was sixteen when he entered the service of a relative as supercargo, and twenty-one when he was given a master's certificate at Dublin. After sailing the Hon. Dan Gordon's ships for many years he bought the brigantine Capstan, which was thrown on her beam ends off Cape Hatteras and abandoned when the Captain, with his wife and child, were rescued after nine days aboard the helpless vessel. Three of his four brothers were captains. Alfred's, last ship, the Sappho, carried oats from the Island to England, coal from the Welsh pits to South America and sugar up the Saint Lawrence. Jack commanded the tea clipper to the Orient, and annual also ran to and from China to New York and San Francisco. He is now superintendent of a steamship company in Tacoma, Washington. Neal a younger brother had a master's certificate when he died at sea on a voyage to Portugal.

One of the oldest living mariners of the clipper era is Captain Hugh McPhee, who made thirty-six voyages to the Rio De La Plata and never lost a ship. Captain McPhee, now nearly ninety years of age, owns a prosperous farm at Georgetown Royalty.

Captain Mick Sigsworth, who was drowned off Grand River in attempting to rescue his son, was noted for his resemblance to the pictures of Captain Kidd. He wore large gold ear rings and a colored bandana. At the time of his death he had given up deep sea work and taken to fishing.

Captain William Sencabaugh was a ship builder as well as master. Going according to his means in days of "scarce money" he had the brigantine Aquilla on the stocks for seven years. A son of his by the same name was lost in the Canadian government steamer Sir Simcoe, when she went down with all hands off the Magdalens.

Oats gathered from around beams in the hold proved to be the old grain able food for Captain George Crawford and his crew, when the schooner Jubilee was blown far off the coast of New Foundland. They ultimately sighted a fisherman off the Flemish Cape, secured food and sails, and made their way home.

Thirteen days from Cardo to Liverpool was the record set up by Captain Bill Graham in the brigantine Idealia in 1873.

Another noted Island sea-going family owned the three Westaway brothers, Jack and Joseph, who were twins and James. Jack commanded the Plymouth, and later sailed on the steamer Prince Edward, running a regular service between the Island and England. Joseph sailed his father's ship, the Westaway, and is now senior partner in a Brooklyn firm of ship brokers, while James is still sailing out of New York to South American ports.

SUPERSTITIOUS OF THE SEAS

First Ship Launched After Prohibition Had Disastrous Time

Portland, Me., May 1 (CP)—The age old superstitions which have endured in ships are bowing to the onslaughts since man first went down to the sea of modern education but a few of them still persist and probably always will.

The early superstitions had more to do with the launching of a boat than with the actual managing of the vessel. It is not improbable that Captain Noah, when he cast off his shore line and started his memorable cruise to Mt. Ararat, rubbed the lump of the camel for luck as he came up the gangplank, even as many a bottle of Brut Imperial Pomeradin or Fonsey Sec, has been broken over the bows of vessels sailing the Newfoundland Banks. The breaking of a bottle of wine over the bow of a new vessel is a survival of the sanguinary custom of our savage ancestors, paralleled by the practice, at an officer's funeral, of leading his charger as a symbolical sacrifice at the grave.

When a ship was launched by the Vikings it was the custom for victims to be bound to the rollers over which the vessel was driven as he run down to the sea, so the "stem was sprinkled with blood", for which in modern times, until recent years, wine was generally substituted.

The early Greeks decorated their new completed ships with garlands of flowers and adorned the brow of the navigator with a floral crown. A priest "purified" the boat in some fit ting manner and then consecrated it to the God whose image it bore. This custom of bedecking the boats with flowers still persists at some of the Grecian ports while the Captain, replacing the priest, takes a jar of wine, sips a little of it and pours the rest over the deck.

A century ago, the supply of fuel, timber for the small schooners was concentered around small settlements located about a mile back from the coast of Maine. The smaller boats were constructed at these settlements and when completed were dragged in cradles to the shore by many yokes of oxen and horses. The neighbors all turned out and lent a willing hand as long as the owners kept a goodly flow of good old New England rum running.

In 1851 Maine's first prohibition law did away with this happy old function and in 1887 the barque George A. Wright was launched without the aid of "demon rum", the bouquet of flowers was hung over her jib boom instead and hardy old mariners frowning on such a sacrilegious pomby send off predicted all sorts of dire fortunes for the craft. Six weeks later while off the Banks edge of the Newfoundland banks, bound from Boston to Liverpool, the Wright's cargo shifted, the vessel turned turtle and down she went.

Another boat, a sardine carrier, was launched at Friendship, Me., and its owners being ardent prohibitionists decided to call it the W.C.T.U. As the "sardines" slid down the ways she was christened with a bottle of minerral water to the accompaniment of temperance songs. The W.C.T.U. was an able boat and did good service for a number of years but a perusal of the Maine registers for the last four or five years fails to show her "launch" was ever duly registered. It would be rather interesting to know her fate. Maybe she has lived up to her name, maybe not.

One of the earliest superstitions was that rats leaving a boat generally indicated misfortune. This undoubtedly was a throwback from the idea that crows will not build their nests in a ship that is likely to fail. Another was that certain ships were Jonahs and a skipper would have much difficulty in signing on a crew, no matter how sound or seaworthy his boat might be, if this dreaded rumor should happen to be spread about the vessel. Trouble was experienced in the old days by some individuals, even if they were expert fishermen, when they effect that a certain person was a "Jonah" was sufficient to keep the "Old Man" from signing him on.

A cherished early superstition was that if a man tore his finger on a fish hook he should immediately tear the hook from its gauging and keep it free from rust until the wound healed thus forestalling blood poisoning. Still another had to do with the procuring of a nail from a church and fastening it into a fishhoop. It was believed that no fish in the sea could withstand the temptation of such a hook. The early Finns used to believe that the reason the flounder was white on one side was because the Virgin Mary had laid her hand on one of them and the side she touched turned white and has so remained ever since throughout the flounder family.

These superstitions and many others have endured through the ages and today when a group of "old timers" gather together to attend the christening of some new schooner mutterings of "treason" and predictions of dire misfortunes can be heard against boats that are been sent to the sea without the aid of time honored tradition.

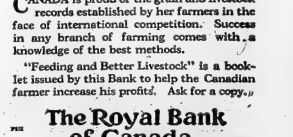
ADVOCATES MUSIC IN CANADIAN SCHOOLS

Montreal, May 1 (CP)—"In children lies the only hope for the musical future of this Dominion," said Douglas Clarke, director of the McGill University Faculty of Music. "Educate children in music, and not necessarily in playing an instrument or singing. They must be told about music, how to listen to it and who made it. To do this properly means that it must be incorporated in the regular school curriculum. The study of music can do as much to train the mind as Latin Euclid and Algebra, and, in addition, it leaves something of real practical value with the student in after life."

Mr. Clarke went on to say that children should have their music lessons in school time. In addition the actual practice, constructive talks should be given to the whole school on music appreciation. Here he thought the gramaphone would prove invaluable as the child could follow the evolution of music through a series of records in addition to learning to recognize the sounds of the various orchestral instruments.



"Musical education in schools" said the speaker, "seems at present to be confined to singing. But, I would say let singing go, let even instrumental playing go on. Give the children a chance to know music. Let them know the one art, which, above all others has the power to unfold the unsuspected beauties of life which, without such guidance as I have suggested, must lie hidden from them. If this were put into practice the Canadian public would, in a few years, lead the world in musical knowledge and appreciation. Without this education music might as well shut up shop."

SCHOOLBOY HOWLERS

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—The Brown Oyl, which is issued from time to time at Brown public school, gives the following as samples of some "howlers" perpetrated by the pupils: The highest mountain in Switzerland is Blanc Mange. By Magna Carta no free man could be hanged twice for the same offence. Sir Walter Raleigh was the first man to see the invisible armada. The poll tax was paid by everyone who had a head. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Grandstand Pilot

by

Jasper B. Sinclair

CopYright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc

"There are two ways of flying a plane in this war. One is for the good of the squadron and the other is for personal glory."

Major Hampton was speaking in his usual blunt way, his words crisp and incisive. There was no mistaking his meaning.

Bill Donovan stiffened, then took a step forward.

"If you mean——"

"If the shoe fits, Donovan, you are entitled to put it on. I simply mean that I won't stand for any more grand stand flying. Do you understand?"

Donovan's face paled, his hands clenched, then relaxed. He hesitated an instant, biting back a sharp retort.

"Very good, sir!" he responded, saluting stiffly and striding from the room.

Outside the cool night air struck him full in the face. "Grandstand" Donovan they called him. The name had stuck ever since he joined the Fifth Pursuit Squadron.

On his first flight with the Fifth they had gone out over the lines, at dawn. Instructions had been specific. They were to take pictures of a new sector for the artillery. Under no circumstances were they to engage in combat or deviate from their course.

It had been Donovan's first flight. On their way back he had been unable to resist the temptation to swoop down, and "strafe" the German trenches. That action had cost him a severe reprimand from Hampton and earned him the nickname of "Grandstand" Donovan.

He wouldn't have minded the reprimand so much, only——

Hampton had been his boss back in the States before the war. A serious mistake on Hampton's part had cost him a lot of money. Hampton had shifted the blame onto Donovan, resulting in the latter losing his job.

A queer quirk of fate had sent Donovan to the very squadron which Hampton commanded. Since the day of his arrival the major had been riding him at every possible opportunity.

It grated on Donovan's high-strung nerves, but there was nothing else to do but grin and bear it.

Motors were roaring in the hangars of the Fifth the next morning, as Donovan entered the shed where his Nieuport stood. Mechanics trundled the ship out on the field. Other planes were being wheeled into position ready for flight.

Silvery lances of light were piercing the gray horizon. A thin mist shrouded the valley, indicating low visibility. It was a grim portent of what they might expect up in the sky.

"We're flying in formation this morning, Donovan," explained Hampton curtly. "And I don't want anyone slipping off on their own. Remember that!"

"I'll remember!" returned Donovan, equally terse.

Singly the Nieuports took the air. Donovan's ship was the last in the formation. When the chocks were kicked from his wheels he pulled back the stick and climbed swiftly into the gray sky.

At two thousand feet they leveled off and headed into the eastern horizon. The mist-filled valley below was invisible at this altitude. Flashes of crimson flame split the fog, marking the positions of the American batteries. Then the faint hum of sustained machine gun fire, told Donovan they were crossing the lines.

The squadron soared higher to get above the mist, the tiny ships hugging each other's tail in order not to lose formation. It was an easy matter to get lost on such a morning, and Donovan had no intention of giving Hampton any more loopholes for further lectures.

A quarter of an hour and they headed into a heavy bank of fog. Under ordinary circumstances they should have turned and headed back to their tarmac, but Hampton was obdurate.

"What's he thinking of, anyway?" growled Donovan. "Betcha two francs he'll have some of his ships in this fog. And then he'll give 'em fits. for getting out of formation. As a pilot he'd make a good doughboy!"

Dank and yellow fog wrapped itself around Donovan's wings. In another moment he was lost in a world of white ahead. Then he slowed up a bit, fearful of a collision. When he emerged from the fog bank he was alone.

The rest of the squadron was neither ahead nor behind him. He climbed higher in an effort to locate them; dropped a thousand feet. Still no Nieuports.

Grimly he flew to left and to right, hoping to chase himself wayings to relocate the squadron.

"Now I will catch the devil!" Donovan muttered. "He'll accuse me of going off on a solo flight again. Oh, well! Perhaps something will turn up now!"

He grinned, hoping his eyes pealed for any lone Bapds that might be scouting, the sky. Save for the dim pounding of artillery, however, there was no indication that a war was in progress.

Donovan shrugged. "All sensible fliers are down on the ground where they belong on a morning like this! Guess I'll drop down a bit further."

In his downward flight he suddenly emerged from the mist. A fringe of woods rushed to meet him.

Quickly he straightened out his ship skimming the tree tops as he "gave it the gun."

"Narrow escape, that!" he muttered. "Serve me right for coming down so fast! Might know I was pretty close to the ground."

Then he grinned again. A column of gray-green was emerging from the far end of the wood, deploying into an open field. A few bursts from his Brownings satisfied Donovan that his guns were in working order.

"A chance for a little fun after all!" he laughed. "Even if it's only strafing some troops!"

His jaw tightened. At the far end of the field he spied a Nieuport, its Allied markings glistening against the white of its wings.

"I wonder——" he began, then stopped short. Closer inspection revealed the insignia of the Fifth Squadron. "One of our own pilots," he grunted, "and these Heinies are running toward him!"

Quickly he dipped down, heading toward the stranded ship. One wing was crumpled, the undercarriage shorn away....apparently from a hasty landing. Someone was standing near the propeller, gun in hand. . .

"Hampton!" exclaimed Donovan, bringing his ship to a jolting stop alongside the wrecked plane.

"Donovan!" shouted the major, running toward him. "You're just in time!"

"Stop in, quick!!" retored Donovan, grimacing as the major clambered into the cockpit behind him.

Bullets were already spattering against the fabric of the Nieuport, as the Germans rushed across the field.

Donovan laughed recklessly, as the ship rose off the ground when he pulled back the stick again. Guttural shout of rage and a final splash of bullets against the plane's wings as he climbed swiftly into the sky.

Then his face sobered as he turned around in his seat.

"Lucky I came down to strafe those troops, sir!" he declared. Donovan could not resist that thrust.

Hampton grinned, a trifle shakily.

RADIO IMPROVED DURING ECLIPSE

Signals Sent from California Had Wider Range Than Usual

Los Angeles, April 29.— In the area affected by the eclipse of the sun yesterday, almost ideal radio communication conditions prevailed. Western Air Express with its 20 radio stations located throughout the area between the Mississippi River and the Pacific coast, undertook to make a comprehensive study of the effect of the eclipse, which occurred between 9.30 a.m. and 12.30 p.m. ideal upon radio signals.

It was found that although the eclipse occurred at daylight, radio conditions which ordinarily are associated with darkness, became noticeably better during the entire period of the eclipse.

As an example, signals sent out from Los Angeles which are usually heard no further north than Oakland, were heard with greater strength in points land. The same phenomenon occurred in all other directions. El Paso, Salt Lake, Denver and other points which are usually out of range of Los Angeles during daylight, could be reached with great signal strength. Points which were entirely out of the area of the eclipse reported no change in conditions from what would normally be prevalent in daylight.

JOINT MANAGER IS EX-PICTON MAN

The announcement in yesterday's press that W. A. Bog and Jackson Dodds had been appointed joint general managers of the Bank of Montreal is of great interest to Prince Edward County residents. Although Mr. Dodds is not known in this section, W. A. Bog is an ex-Picton man, getting his start in the bank there. He is senior in point of years to Mr. Dodds and is near the retiring age. He is still remembered by some Picton residents as his brother, who started in the Standard Bank—many years ago and rose to the position of chief of the inspection staff before he was retired.

APRIL ESCAPADE - - - - BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

"I think Gordyn brother has consider able pull," the man went on; he'll work it, it's noted it. But at any rate, here in what I was thinking," he added in a brisker tone, returning to the problem of the moment. "They're through with us, and we can beat it. I'll have Roundtree take the luncheon on. He can have the crowd over to the Club. You're in no condition to play hostess after last night, and Gordon'll make our excuses. Get your things, and put the mail in the car we'll drive off somewhere and fool away the time un foamed and bubbled and slid into a

Again in the beautiful Serano, which shot through the green springtime roads like a projectile, Mary Kate was very silent at Chris's side. None of the happy babble of yesterday was repeated she watched the countryside go by with sombre brooding eyes.

"Like Half Moon Bay?" .

"I didn't hear you."

"I asked you if you'd like the run over to Half Moon Bay?"

"Oh? Oh, I don't care."

And she lapsed into her apprehensive silence again.

The car climbed up above the trees to the top of the hills, and started down toward the broad plant of dim grayness that was the ocean. The grass was spattered with buttercups, and their milky smell was sweet, with a thousand other good springtime odors, in the warm soft air.

Larks went whirling up to the blue sky, leaving their plaintive liquid notes in the hills in the air beneath them. In the sheltered lap of a great rock, on the ridge, there were poppies in the grass, tailor flowering petals fringe sprawled in a foam of delicate green foliage, or folded into shining orange cones.

Going down the long grade the vegetation changed; became the stout, tough, shorter herbage of the coast. Lupin and cuken flowers were blue in ash-gray tufts; and about the silvery old barns and farmhouses pink mallow grew on blowing bushes.

The wind was keen and soft from the sea; it brought the color into Mary Kate's tired face. Chris stopped his car on a headland, and they looked out across the rolling blue waters heaving and dimpling placidly, mysteriously, under the assault of hot sun.

North and south the beaches curved between waters and land, sometimes rising to cliffs, some broken by great tumbled masses of rock. The tide foamed and bubble dand slid into a thousand channels, in the rocky places and wrote endless, unceasing curves over and over again on the sand.

All along the shore were the little frame houses, beaten and discolored by wind, and set in angles of artichoke and cabbage patches. Now and then there passed a humble little village, marked by windblown herges, and blighted gardens whose paths were outlined by irridescent abalone shells. It was a deserted world, on a fragrant spring morning. The men were in the fields, the women in houses. Now and then a Saturday group of little girls, walking toward a village store, and gum and chocolate bars, huddled caustically at one side of the road, when the car, with its long desolate melancholy four-toned cry, went sweeping by.

The queer, endless day dragged by. At half-past one o'clock they had mussels and spaghetti and sour, delicious Italian bread at a bleak, bare, odorous seaside restaurant that looked as if they had been its only guests in years, and the old Italian host, paper shawled for Mary Kate himself and brought it, warm and foaming, to the table.

It was three o'clock. Four o'clock. They were going back over the hills they were in Belmont and had turned north. At the Burlingame station there very simply and kindly put Mary Kate back on her train.

"You have money?" he asked, while they were waiting at the station.

"Oh, plenty, thanks!"

"You've been an awfully good sport, and I'm awfully sorry it's turned out this way. But don't worry. It'll be all right."

"O, I hope so!"

"And I'll so you, soon."

But at this she looked up at him unsmilingly.

"I think not. I'd rather not—ever, see you again!"

"Oh, say——" he protested with that widening of the eyes that was familiar to her now, "Why this?" he asked.

"I'm hoping to get married this year," she told him. But without any confidence or happiness in her tone. "I'll be leaving Mr. Roundtree—"

"You don't mean," he asked, as she paused, "you don't mean that you think you have to tell the man you marry about this?"

"He, I wasn't thinking of that," she said quietly. "Although it might be the wise thing to do. I'm going to tell my mother the whole story, this afternoon. And if she thinks I ought to tell him——"

"She won't!" Chris protested.

"But I was thinking that our ways aren't even again," the girl went on, as if she had not been interrupted. "There's no reason why they should. So good-by."

She held out her hand, and Chris shook it, and said again, "I think you have been a wonderful sport! And don't worry, you'll never hear of this housebreaking mess again. And thanks awfully, Mary."

"You're welcome," she said youthfully, indifferently. He followed her, with her bag, into the car, and placed her luggage conveniently. There was only a second left, in which to run to the door and jump down. Mary Kate was on the wrong side of the train; she did not see him again.

And then it was all simple. The towns and villages of yesterday began to reverse themselves, like a film running backward, and in no time at all she was in San Francisco, she was in a taxicab, she had given the driver the O'Farrell Street number.

CHAPTER XXVI

The city looked grimy and weary; workers were streaming home in every direction. The dreadful sense of being a child that must return to inevitable punishment—a sense that had shadowed her all day, returned to Mary Kate, and by the time she had reached her own doorway she was almost sick with emotion and excitement.

The children were all out upon her like a flash. Pat and Regina and Tess, and big Tom, who kissed her with a warm, unshaven cheek against hers, and brought up the procession with her bag. Mother was in the kitchen, and Aunt Julia was here.

Mary Kate had never felt an impulse of affection toward Aunt Julia before. But she fairly loved the weary monologist who was in the rocker this afternoon; Aunt Julia was so noticeably disgruntled and so acutely critical that the O'Haras never had time for anything during her visit but a feverish concentration upon her conversation. Afterwards they pieced it all together and laughed about it until they had to lay their heads down upon their supper plates.

At the sink, broad, capable mistress of all she surveyed, was Ma. And when Mary Kate saw her mother she forgot that the separation between them was a matter of hours rather than weeks or months, and ran toward her confidante, her friends, her nurse and teacher, judge, and advocate, the court of last appeal for all the difficulties and woes her twenty years had known. Her arms were about her mother's neck, her cheek was pressed against the soft, shapeless cheek, her tears were wet upon her mother's face.

"Mary Kate, between us and all harm!" Mrs. O'Hara said, "I did not tell you, Aunt Julia," she explained to the caller, in a somewhat strangled voice, "that Mary Kate went up to San ramento, all by herself, and stayed at a hotel there!"

"Oh, Mother, I'm so glad to be back!"

"Well, don't cry about it, dear-r-!" the mother remonstrated, her own smile coming through tears. "You'd think it was a year, and she away!" she said, half-scornfully, half-proudly, to the visitor.

She held Mary Kate off at arm's length, and her tone changed.

"Why, what's come to you dear?" she asked quickly.

"She's the picture of death," observed Aunt Julia Deane, pleasantly, as she watched the pair.

"What is it, Mary Kate? Were you in an auto?" Mrs. O'Hara continued alarmed.

"I'm tired, Mother." The girl clung to her as if she she could never let go, dropping her weary head upon the broad breast tightening her slender arms about the old woman's shoulders, laughing and crying.

"But child! you look awful!"

"I think—" She had arranged this with Chris, for just this emergency. It came to her now as an inspiration. "I think maybe I had a touch of ptomaine! Mother."

"I'll make hi!" Tess shrilled, rushing for the kettle.

"I'm tired of being treated like a child," Mary Kate protested, but Mary Kate made no move to obey.

"I'm honestly all right, Mother, but I'm train sick—"

"Did you have any lunch?"

Draw on It for Refreshment and Joy; Make Your Mind Colorful, Advises Health Authority

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph. D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

What we picture in the mind's eye is always more alluring than what actually occurs.

When we think of something we would like or want to do, the check-rein on our thoughts is loosened and the images we conjure up fit perfectly with our fondest fancies.

That is one of the advantages of using one's imagination.

Thy imagination can be made an unbounded source of pleasure.

The average individual uses his imagination altogether too seldom!

The chief reasons why books and music and all forms of art are so fascinating is because they stimulate the imagination.

Comfortably seated in a chair, you drink it all in, and the mental pictures that take shape gratify the deep and unfulfilled wishes of your inner self.

Witness the quiet and soothing reactions when you hear a sweet melody or the stirring of emotion at a crisp, intense marching song.

In the one case the music produces mental images of quiet, peaceful scenes and meadows or a picture of bygone days at home surrounded by loved ones.

In the other case you visualize the tread of soldiers, the shouts and farewells as the stalwart, uniformed column march by.

Your patriotism becomes definite and focused.

You thoroughly enjoy the experience.

But always it is the imagination that as an intermediary between the sound heard by the ears and the resultant pleasurable feeling-tone, gives value to the sensation.

It is the imagination that can be made a pleasure ground of thought.

Make your imagination rich and colorful!

Draw on it for refreshment and joy!

Practise stimulating your imagination by recalling scenes and experiences of the past.

Think of a pleasure trip, for instance.

Close you eyes, relax, and let the thoughts of the past come forth.

Relive the scenes that thrilled you and stimulated you.

Work your imagination for all that it is worth!

It takes practice, in a way, to stimulate your own imagination, but it comes easy after a while.

An excellent plan is to read a vivid, colorful and exciting story, then to close the eyes and see how much of the story and how accurately it can be re-built in the mind as compared to the impression it made when first read.

It also helps to look at a picture, a landscape in preference to a portrait, and then to see again with how in detail it can afterwards be imagined.

And to stimulate the imagination: nothing is better than to try and create something like a story or a sketch. It may not be well expressed nor well drawn. But what does that matter . .

In the last analysis, it is the exercise of the imagination you are after.

In the W. C. T. U. awards, for the Township Competition, the best papers were forwarded for the County competitions.

In the Church of St. John the Baptist, there was no morning service, evening service was the usual evensong, and during the offertory, Mr. Jas. Aylesworth gave a cornet solo with organ accompaniment by Mrs. J. Aylesworth.

Prize Competition

The April Institute meeting was held at the home of Mrs. W. Parks with a very good attendance. Mrs. C. N. Whytock presided and opened the meeting with a short sing-song, which included "The Institute Ad," and "Institute Ode." Minutes were approved and correspondence read, and discussed.

It was decided to form a class for the Girl's Coaching Competition, and Mrs. Chas. Whytock was appointed to secure teachers and receive names for the class, which is to be held during June. The coach is the same as last year, Miss Edith Hopkins, of Lindsay.

The proposed date for the District Annual was satisfactory to all the members as far as can be judged, so June 18th, will likely be the date, and the meeting place Springbrook.

Mrs. W. Whytock and Mrs. T. L. Nickle gave a report of the meeting held on Tuesday last called by the Agricultural representative Mrs. M. Wilkes to consider the advisability of holding three months' course for boys and girls in Madoc for the townships of Madoc and Huntingdon.

A pleasing piano solo was given by Jean Nickle who played "A Curious Story," and "Over Hill and Dale."

Mrs. C. W. Whytock took the topic, "Planning a Flower Garden," and gave many useful hints and suggestions as to planting different varieties for the shady side of the Garden.

Roll call was answered by Garden Hints, and some good ones were received.

A discussion as to shrubs and planting for the Public Park brought some good suggestions and a committee of Mesdames Tumelty and Wickham were appointed to confer with Messrs. Hayes and Hawthorne as a board for the Park and Memorial beautifying.

The National Anthem was followed by a half-hour of social intercourse, while tea was served by the hostess and her assistants.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burkitt and Mr. Charles Burkitt of Niagara Falls, N. Y., spent the Easter week end visiting friends in Madoc.

Mr. Harold Smith of Toronto is spending a few days at his home in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Christie and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Hill spent the week end as guests of Mrs. M. Christie.

Mr. and Mrs. H. McMillan and family have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. Roraback in Hillier.

The dance in the armouries under the auspices of the Sacred Heart Church was exceptionally well attended, and all report a very enjoyable evening. The music was furnished by Charlie Coyer's New Ben Ton Orchestra, of Belleville.

STOP CONSTIPATION AT THE START

You May Pay If You Don't

When you realise that about 90% of all sickness begins with constipation, you won't want to take chances. If you have the symptoms—bad breath, coated tongue, always tired—put a stop to them now!

But do it the natural way. Not with pills and drugs, which give only temporary relief and must be taken in increasing doses. Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—an appetizing deliciously flavored cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN sweeps the system clean of wastes and impurities. Its action is natural; the roughage carries with it the poisons which clog your system.

In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in iron. Scientific research shows that nearly all this iron goes into the blood, making it give the rich glow of healthy color.

You'll like ALL-BRAN. Ready-to-eat with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Physicians recommend it. And we guarantee it to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. Two tablespoonfuls daily — with every meal, in recurring cases.

Start now! Today. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers in the red-and-green package. Served in hotels, restaurants and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

WOMEN POLICE ON FORCE IN HUMBERS

Manchester, Eng., May 1 (CP)—The subject of women police is referred to in the current issue of the "Manchester and Salford Woman Citizen" the organ of the Manchester and Salford Women Citizens' Association which refers to the Home Secretary's "Parliamentary statement that there was an immediate contemplation an increase in the number of women police in the Metropolitan police area from 50 to 100, followed by the announcement of the appointment of a woman adviser on the organization of Metropolitan Policewomen."

"These two announcements," says the journal, "show a definite step forward after what has seemed to be a period of marking time. In spite of the evidence of a growing demand for greater employment of women police.... in spite of the testimony of in spectors of constabulary as to the good work being done by women police wherever they are employed, the number of policewomen in the country has been very slow to increase."

Rawdon Farm Youth Held for Wounding

DISCHARGES SHOTGUN AT BOYS WHOM HE TOOK FOR CHICKEN THIEVES

Howard Holden and Clelland Reid Getting Pig Rack Recently Bought are Slightly Wounded by Thos. McDougall Farm Helper—Unlawful Wounding Charged.

Mistaking two neighbour youths for chicken thieves, Thomas McDougall, eighteen year old English immigrant boy today faced two charges of "unlawfully wounding", following a shooting affair in Rawdon township three miles from Hoard's Station, last night, at nine o'clock. He appeared in police court here this morning and on the advice of Crown Attorney Bryson C. Donnan and Provincial Police he was remanded in custody of Mr. C. U. Clancy, his employer, without bail and for one week. He elected summary trial before Magistrate W. C. Mikel K.C., but did not plead.

Fortunately the two victims, Howard Holden, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Holden residing on the "Town Line" three miles from the village of Stirling, and Clelland Reid, who lives with his mother on concession four of Rawdon town ship, received only superficial wounds and no serious complications will develop according to Dr. Carleton of Stirling.

It appears that one week ago Holden purchased a pig rack, from Mr. C. U. Clancy of Hoard's and it was agreed that the apparatus should remain at his latter's home until it was required for use.

Scene at Clancy's

Last night Holden, with young Reid, proceeded in a truck to the Clancy homestead to remove the rack. Mr. Clancy was not at home and the pair backed the truck into the barn, loaded the rack, and proceeded down the lane. McDougall, who came to Canada last August and who is employed by Mr. Clancy, was alone at the time and he noticed the vehicle coming out of the barn. Unaware of the transaction and curious as to their presence he shouted at them to stop, but apparently they did not hear his calls.

Farmers in the locality have been bothered with chicken thieves this week and McDougall fearing a theft from the hen-roost ran into the house and procured a twelve guage number three shot gun, weapon used in deer hunting.

Shot at Truck

He again warned the intruders and when they paid no heed, he loaded the gun and shot at the retreating truck from the kitchen door, a distance of sixty yards. It is understood that Mr. Dougall in his statement to police has said that he shot at the back of the truck. Some the pellets struck the frame-work and ricocheted into the car, striking the occupants on the back of the head at the base of the skull. They stopped and McDougall was shocked when he saw who the men were. Some of the neighbours were attracted by the shots and Dr. Carleton was immediately notified. The injured pair were taken to his office and some of the pellets just beneath the surface of the skin were removed. After attention had been given they were taken to their homes and according to word received here today, they are suffering no serious effects.

Provincial Constable Bert Hammer headquarters staff Belleville, visited the scene and after proving the affair held McDougall on a nominal charge, bringing him to Belleville, where he was placed in the cells.

Neither McDougall nor his employer appear to be particularly disturbed over the affair. The former claims that he was only protecting Mr. Clancy's property when he shot at the men. The neighbours at Hoard's give McDougall an excellent reputation as a hard and conscientious worker while his employer thinks hugely of him.

NOTED ENGINEER CALLED BY DEATH

George Decks Asked No Public Heity About Life or Death

TORONTO, May 2.—The death yesterday morning of George Decks, president of the Dominion Construction Company of Canada, peer of North American engineers and pioneers, was announced today by relatives. He was 72 years old. Wednesday night he had been in consultation with a number of Canadian and United States railway engineers. He returned to his home and suffered a heart seizure which brought death early Thursday. First among efforts discovered was a letter stipulating he should be buried quietly; that there should be no flowers or undue ceremony, and that relatives should permit of no publicity regarding his life or death. It was out of respect for his achievements as a railway builder that the silence was permitted to be broken.

WRONG PIPE CUT PHONES ARE OUT

600 Lines Affected by Lower Bridge Operation For Short Time

One hundred and twenty-five subscribers of the Bell Telephone Company here were without service this afternoon for about four hours, as a result of a misunderstanding. Three large pipes which were formerly laid beneath the pedestrian walk on the north side of the lower bridge which is being dismantled, carry the wires which serve the residents of the West side of the river. Orders were given by the Bell Telephone to cut one of these pipes which carried what is known as "dead" wires. The wrong pipe was cut and as a result a short circuit was caused some six hundred subscribers being without service for a short time. This condition was soon rectified however, and with the exception of one hundred and twenty-five residents mainly on the west side all had the use of the phones practically all day. One man was set to work splicing the wires and he completed the job late this afternoon. The pipes now carrying the wires will be moved to the north side while the bridge is under construction.

OTTAWA STUDIES TARIFF CHANGES

OTTAWA, Ont., May 2—CP—Political Ottawa is today studying tariff schedules brought in by yesterday's sweeping budget. Out of the mass of changes the predominating features are to increase the general tariffs and lower the duties under British preference. The hundreds of changes in the steel schedules are perhaps most intricate. They mark the stiffening of protection for primary producers under the general tariff. It is estimated that the tariff has increased the duties on steel products, of which over two hundred and fifty millions dollars was brought in from the United States last year.

His home always carried an atmosphere of hospitality.

RUSH WORK ON ATHLETIC FIELD

Bay of Quinte Ball Loop Will Open on May 14th

(Special By Staff Reporter)

Trenton, Ont., May 2.—Although far from being completed, the new C.P.R. Recreation field here is beginning to look more and more like a baseball field. The diamond itself, due to good work on the part of M. Baldini, who has had charge, is in good shape, but the outfield is still rough and stony, and much labour will have to be put on it before it will be suitable to play on.

All through their work the contractor has been troubled with the stones which dot the field in thousands. The diamond will undoubtedly be well drained, as where it is located would make a good gravel pit, but when the top dressing is put on, it should be fine. It has been levelled off well.

Two weeks' work on the part of six men and three teams have been necessary to get the diamond in the shape it is at present, and the officials of the Club have almost decided that they will have to have as much more done before the whole field is in real first class shape.

The opening date for the Bay of Quinte League is on May 14th, just twelve days away, so if they expect to play at this field, work will have to be rushed through. The candidates for the team have been practising for the past few days at the College Street school grounds, which is far from satisfactory as there is not enough room there.

STIRLING BOX OFFICIAL BETTER

J. E. Munroe Much Improved Today—Attended By Dr. Alger

(Special By Staff Reporter)

Stirling, Ont., May 2.—The condition of Mr. J. Ernest Monroe, one of the owners of the Stirling Cheese Box and Basket Factory, who had his left hand cut off yesterday morning while working at the factory, is much better and unless complications set in, he will be able to leave the Bellevile Hospital within the next few days. He is being attended by Dr. Alger of Stirling, and Dr. McCreary of Belleville assisted during the operation yesterday.

Mr. Monroe is one of three brothers who operate the Box Factory, he being the superintendent of the plant, and having charge of the mechanical features of it. He received his injury only a few minutes after going to work yesterday morning, according to eyewitnesses. It seems that as he walked by a circular saw, placed in a horizontal position, he noticed that there was quite a lot of shavings underneath. Samuel Bone who was working nearby declares that he started to clean out this space while the saw was still running, with the result that his hand was severed about an inch and a half or two inches below the wrist. Although suffering greatly, Mr. Monroe extricated himself from his position and walked downstairs, where first aid was applied and a car brought to take him to the doctor's office. He was immediately rushed to Belleville Hospital where he is at present.

The Stirling Cheese Box and Basket factory is located just across the C.N.R. tracks from the Stirling Station, and is a particularly busy place just now.

FARMERS PRAY FOR RAINFALL

(Special By Staff Reporter)

Trenton, Ont., May 2.—Farmers in this district seem to be of the opinion that if the month of May is dry, conditions with them will be even harder than they were last year. Seeding is so late this year, owing to the late spring that should there be little rain to give the seeds a good chance to sprout early, the grain crop will not be ready before the autumn rains come on, with the consequent loss to the farmers. This is the opinion of several prominent agriculturists who were approached by the Ontario Intelligencer with regards to this question. "Every little bit helps," one remarked, with a smile as he watched a few drops sputter down yesterday morning. "If we even had one thunderstorm a day for a week or so it would help a whole lot." All these men hastened to correct any misunderstanding that the whole province needed rain, they were all speaking only for this district.

FUNERAL OF MRS. KILBANKS WAS HELD

(Special By Staff Reporter)

Prankford, Ont., May 2.—The funeral took place this afternoon from the late residence, 7th Concession of Murray, to Wooler United Church, of Mrs. George Kilbanks, who passed away Tuesday evening in her 56th year. The service at the Wooler Church, of which deceased was always an active worker, was in charge of Rev. Bell, who also officiated at the grave. The large number of floral tributes and the number of friends in attendance at the Church showed the esteem in which she was held. She is survived by her husband and one son, Roy, of Ottawa. Interment was made in Stockdale cemetery.

TRENTON TO HAVE GIRLS' BALL TEAM

It was decided by the Girls' Softball executive that there will be no Trenton Softball League formed this summer and that the only games which will be played with some out-of-town teams. Two years ago there were three teams playing, last year there were only two, while this year there will be only one to represent the town. The idea prevalent amongst the girls and it is a true one, is that with one good team in the field they can go further in winning their games than if they had all the good players divided up amongst the two teams.

To Help You Get Thousands of Miles of Care-free, Economical Motoring

THE NEW FORD ROADSTER

THE assurance of good dealer service, at all times, is as much a feature of the Ford car as its beauty of line and color, safety, comfort, reliability, economy and ease of control.

In addition to the main factory at East Windsor, Ontario, assembly branches are located at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, with sales and service branches at London, Saint John, Regina and Calgary. More than 700 Authorized Ford Dealers have been established throughout Canada to serve your needs and to see that genuine Ford parts are quickly available when needed and at a low price.

This is by far the largest automobile-dealer organization in Canada and it is of great value to every Ford owner. "What kind of service will I get after I buy a car?" is always an important point to consider in the purchase of an automobile.

When you receive your Ford, the dealer will explain the simple little things that should be attended to periodically to insure the best performance. He will also tell you about the Free Inspection Service to which every purchaser of the Ford is entitled at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles.

This inspection includes a check-up of the battery, generator charging rate, distributor, carburetor adjustment, lights, brakes, shock absorbers, tire inflation and steering gear. The engine oil is also changed and the chassis lubricated through the high-pressure grease gun system.

No charge whatever is made for labor or materials incidental to this service except where repairs are necessary because of accident, neglect or misuse. The labor of changing the engine oil and lubricating the chassis is also free, although a charge is made for new oil. This inspection is free for the first 1500 miles only, and is made thereafter at an equitable charge.

Every time you take your Ford to the dealer for oiling and greasing, it will be a good plan to have him check over important points that have a bearing on continuously good performance and tell you exactly what the car needs. You will find him prompt and business like, fair in his established flat rate charges for labor, and sincerely eager to do a good job at all times, so that you will get thousands of miles of enjoyable, economical motoring.

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY

Gladys Johnson

Life flowed on, a thing of busy days when the small shop pulsed with customers doing their last minute Christmas shopping. The days were a hectic tide, mounting as shopping time grew shorter.

Ardeth was before it was light, hurrying to meet salesmen and look at stock which she was too busy to select at other times. Her bookkeeping and other accounts were attended to at night after the front door was locked.

No time for lunch. She sent Ah Ling out for a bottle of milk and a sandwich and ate it hastily in the rear room, ready to rush into the outer shop the moment she heard the door open.

No time to go to dinner with Tom, though he reported faithfully several times a week.

"Look here, woman!" Mary protested, "I'll stand for this neglect if you'll promise to come to Christmas dinner."

She had just come in from a shopping trip. Now she flung her bundles down on the couch and sank exhausted after them. She loosened her hat and pulled off her hat with a sigh of relief. "Thank the Lord Christmas is only four days off. I wouldn't last five. And I'm sure the Chickadee won't. She's out of her head with excitement already. Remember, Ardeth! Christmas eve and Christmas dinner!"

Merry Christmas

"Christmas Day, Mary, but not Christmas Eve. As soon as that front door is locked I'm going to nimble gingerbeg and sleep until it's time to dress for dinner the next day!"

"Th..... I've invited Tom, too."

Ardeth grinned. "Hope dies hard, doesn't it?"

Mary looked guilty. "Well, women have changed their minds before, darling. Even such hard-boiled ladies as yourself."

Christmas eve found Ardeth physically exhausted. She refused Tom's telephone invitation for a quiet little dinner.

Instead she went to a small restaurant near the shop, only to find that she was too tired to eat the meal she had ordered even when it was placed on the table before her. She came back to the shop and fell into a deep dreamless slumber, which her tired body drank up like water.

Ardeth had looked forward to this quiet peace but now she found smothering loneliness falling upon her. She tidied up the shop; she did the hundred and one odd jobs she had been too busy to attend to lately. She cleaned the rear room, washed out collar and cuff sets, frowned anxiously as she examined her small supply of silk stockings for runners.

She made elaborate tissued and ribboned packages of Mary's and the Chickadee's presents. She played for a while with Tom's present, an expensive little radio set in an exquisite Oriental cabinet.

White Violets

And all the time the lonely ache was increasing in her heart. She found herself envying Ah Ling—Ah Ling, who at that very moment was impartially celebrating both American Christmas in her Chinese home.

Ardeth found herself wishing wistfully that she had been able to send gifts to Pan and Paul. But she did not know where they were living now and she did not want to ring up Neil and ask. In some odd way the mere fact of remembering her cousins would have helped. Something about having one's own people at this time of year..... Just to know you belonged to someone..... If she only had Kan.....

It was as though her thought summoned him..... A rattle at the front door and there was a figure with a large square box. Even before she lifted the cover, Ardeth knew it came from Ken.

Large double white violets. A fragrant mass, crisp and sweet and somehow smelling of the brown wet earth. No word with them.

When Tom came to drive her out to Mary's she was waiting for him with her wraps on, and there was a bunch of white violets pinned to her coat collar. Tom's watchful eyes saw that she had been crying. It was a quiet drive out to Mary's.

Impossible to be sad at Mary's house, a cheerful glow of candlelight and holly. With Fred, tall and grinning behind his rear pipe, with the Chickadee ecstatically embracing everyone's knees and incoherent with delight.

"If the child hasn't become an idiot through sheer excitement I'll be thankful!" Mary explained as she carried Ardeth away to the bedroom to lay off her wraps. "She was too little to get the idea of Christmas last year, but I think it will take her until Easter to recover—"

Ardeth was altogether lovely today in a maroon crepe which flung her tender throat and face into warm re-

"I Will Never Be Without It"

MRS. LEOLA POTTER

"A succession of colds and grip left me in a badly run-down condition. My energy seemed completely drained and two or three times in the course of a morning's work I'd have to lie down and rest. My food disagreed with me, my sleep was restless and there was nearly always an awful pain across my back. Sargon restored my appetite, my digestion is perfect, I am strong and full of energy and sleep the whole night through without the slightest disturbance. I've gained six pounds in weight, and I never intend to be without Sargon again. Sargon Pills stimulate my liver to healthy action and completely overcome my constipation."—Mrs. Leola Potter, 158 Balsam Ave., Hamilton.

Sargon may be obtained in Belleville at Dolan the Druggist, Front Street.

lief and made a flame of her tawny hair. A long string of carved ivory beads and the white violets added the necessary contrast.

Mary spoke, the words having an odd reluctance, as though they were dragged from her against her will.

"Ardeth..... did you know that Ken and Cecile have separated?"

Eyes suddenly large and dark in a white face Ardeth turned to face her. "Why—why—No. Are you sure?"

"Cecile's mother told Mrs. Hawkins. They're thicker than thieves, you know. Ever since that day thing came out Cecile's been a demon."

Ardeth's hand had crept to her throat, frantically twisting ivory beads.

"It was just a couple of days ago," Mary went on. Then, bitterly, "Much good it will do! Not for Ken nor you —oh, my dear child, don't look so!"

Ardeth Ponders

With a soft rush she rose, took the girl in her arms. "I told you, Ardeth, so you wouldn't hear it from someone else and be startled. But it means nothing, darling. She won't give him up legally. She's too selfish, too spiteful. She has him in a cul-de-sac, Ardeth."

Mary felt the slender body trembling. Ardeth's voice came hoarsely. "Where—where is Ken now?"

"I don't know. At a hotel I suppose. From what Mrs. Parker told Phil's mother, the break is final." Mary lifted her head sharply as new voices filtered into the bedroom. "The Ames have come! I must go. Pull yourself together, Ardeth child and come out and join us."

When she was gone Ardeth moved to the window.

Ken had left Cecile..... What did that mean? Mary was right—Cecile would never give Ken his legal freedom. Things were unchanged for herself.

OBITUARY

W. R. TAYLOR

William Reity Taylor, resident of this city for many years, and a valued employee of the Canadian National Railways, died at his home 20 Bard Street after a lengthy illness early today. He was born in this Province 82 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor. At an early age he entered the employee of the old Grand Trunk as a shopman and after serving his apprenticeship went to firing and after several years qualified as an engineer. For many years he was in charge of a yard engine and was well liked and highly respected by his fellow employees. He served with the railway for 42 years and shortly would have been placed on the retired list.

The deceased took an active part in civic and social affairs being especially prominent in fraternal circles. He served for some years as a member of the Board of Education for Bleecker Ward. He was a valued member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and his advice was eagerly sought on matters vital to the order. Fraternally he was associated with Moira Lodge No. 11 A. F. and A. M. for many years and was also a member of Quinte Friendship Chapter No. 227 R.A.M. The deceased was a member of Camp Rob Roy, Sons of Scotland, and in religion was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Left to mourn his loss is his widow formerly Miss Elizabeth Clarke, two brothers, Alfred Taylor, Gananoque, and Fred Taylor, Michigan, also four sisters, Mrs. J. Hume and Mrs. J. P. Pratt, Toronto, and Mrs. Frank Lucas and Mrs. Earl Armstrong, Hamilton. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon under Masonic direction.

PHILIP BYRON FOSTER

His body arrived in the city yesterday afternoon and was taken to his late residence by the Belleville Burial Company, from where the funeral will be held this afternoon with interment in Foxboro cemetery.

11 BROKERS ARE AGAIN REMANDED

Toronto, May 2— CP— Eleven men, representing all but one of the mining brokerage houses raided under the direction from the Attorney Generals Department, some time ago appeared before Magistrate Robert Browne in a special sitting of the police court today, and were further remanded. Bail in all cases was renewed, a reduction of thirty thousand dollars being allowed in the case of Malcolm J. Stobie of firm of Stobie Perlong and Company, which made voluntary assignment following attorney general's action.

LETTERS to the Editor

NATURE'S ARISTOCRAT AND RITUALIST—THE RED MAN

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

In the red man endowed naturally with a finer sense of etiquette and good manners, with a finer dignity and ritus, than the white man! He undoubtedly is. In the old fourth reader a writer describes him in his council chamber or camp. A fire is built in the center of the lodge and in a circle around it sit the chiefs and elders and there men we call savages teach us lesson upon lesson in etiquette and good manners and ritual and what true aristocratic breeding really means to our shame. After preliminaries when they get down to business each man arises with an air of quiet and sincere dignity and has his say till all have spoken, no interruptions, no excitement, no wild excitable talking and gesticulating, etc., like we often see and hear in our council chambers. These are nature's aristocrats, nature's noble men, although often their lips and teeth and gums are stained by the berries upon which they are subsisting. They do not live in castles and are not civilized yet our aristocracy can't excel them in that dignity and lack of levity in the councils chamber where business is supposed to be conducted with dignity and sincerity.

An instance of the superior aristocratic instinct of the red man over the white man was witnessed in the Red rebellion. Our superior military officer approached the Indian Chief to shake hands without first removing his glove. The Chief drew himself up to his supreme height and with a look of scorn refused to take the white chief's hand till he had removed his glove. Think of it, a savage chief having to teach the meaning of etiquette or good manners or good breeding to a white man of the upper strata of civilized society.

Now from the above I wish to show the citizens of Belleville and Hastings County the rank injustice and insult thrown at our red men here when we changed the Indian name of our river to please a white aristocrat. The Indian had given our river the beautiful name of SAG-O-NAS-KA and we changed it to the plain name of Moira. The time is now ripe and at hand when we can atone for this slight, this insult and injustice because when our new bridge is built we can call it the Sag-o-Nas-Ka bridge and thereby change the name of the river back to where it originally belongs.

If the war veterans decide to put their Memorial Arch on the bridge they can call it The Sag-o-Nas-Ka Memorial or Victory War Veterans' Bridge.

I noticed last summer when going from Stirling to Frankford along the east side of the Trent River the Ontario Government had named that road The Iroquois (Era-quay) Trail, showing the desire of Mr. Ferguson's Government to do justice to that noble race of free men who have in the past been not only slighted but insulted by the white men. Our Indian is the most dignified and aristocratic bearing of all the races on earth and thereby demands our profound respect and admiration.

Yours truly,

D. H. ACKERILL, V.S.

P.S.—Mr. prime object in writing the above communication is to show the necessity of naming our new bridge The Sag-o-Nas-Ka Bridge if we would atone for the insult to our brave Indian allies who fought with us side by side to preserve Canada to the Empire when the U.S. was trying on several occasions to annex us. If we do this the present name of our river can stand as it is. We have simply got to square ourselves with the Indian.

TORONTO LEAFS ARE BATTLING FOR 2ND PLACE

Home Runs Assist Boston Braves to Defeat Pittsburgh

Baltimore, May 2.—The Toronto Leafs open a three-game series with the Orioles here today with second place hanging in the balance with the league leadership a possibility.

While the Oriole attack carries a world of power the weakness so far has been the uncertainty of the mound corps. The Birds have maintained their position near the top through the force of their stick work and a fighting spirit that flares up just at the moment the team is apparently doomed to defeat.

These courageous threats are not always successful but it takes a lot of pitching to stop the Orioles when they set off their fireworks, which usually come late in the game.

Reading, May 2.—Buffalo pounded five Reading pitchers for 22 hits to take the second of the series from the Keystones by 17 to 8.

Home runs were hit for the herd by Tucker, Sax and Hawks, while George Quellich drove twice for the circuit for Reading.

Sax hit safely in each of the first four innings, driving out two triples, a home run and a single.

Manguin pitched the route for Buffalo.

Jersey City, May 2.—Maurice Bream excelled in a brilliant pitcher's battle with John Berly here and as a result of Bobby Veach's double in the eleventh frame and Wera's single Jersey City defeated Rochester for the second consecutive time, 1 to 0.

Berly suffered a split finger while catching a ball thrown by the catcher in the ninth inning and was relieved by Derringer, who was charged with the defeat.

Newark, May 2—Montreal made it two straight victories over the Newark Bears behind the excellent pitching of Marty Griffin, who allowed six scattered hits. The score was 9 to 1.

Harry Layne's fourth homer of the season produced the only Newark run while the Royals battered Fischer and Pritchard for ten hits, including homers by Gautreau and Hesd.

American League

Philadelphia, May 2.—Lefty Grove limited Detroit Tigers to seven scattered hits here today, while his fellow Athletics were on a batting outburst, and the A's won by, 19 to 2. Two singles and a walk in the sixth, followed by Rice's single, scored the only Tiger runs.

National League

Pittsburg, May 2.—Two home runs by Berger and another by Neun helped the Boston Braves defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates in the first east-west game of the season, 4 to 3. The loss shoved the Pirates into second place behind the New York Giants, who were idle.

Berger and Neun each hit homers in the seventh and Berger floated another in the eighth. The Pirates rallied in the eighth, scoring two runs. Charley Engle's recruit infielder, lined out with men on third and first.

Larry French pitched good ball for the losers, until the seventh inning being removed for a pinch-hitter in the Pirates' half.

The Braves' nine hits were distributed among four players, Neun getting three, P. Waner got three hits and Adam Comorosky got two for the pirates.

Harry Siebold was in good form except in the eighth when the Pirates reached him for four hits.

"Y" Alleys

The Wins'e Winkles and Hack Diamonds played an exciting and interesting match in the intermediate league. The Black Diamonds started well and took the 1st game by 27 pins but fell by the wayside in the next three to the ladies to win by 157 pins also the 3rd game by 34 pins therefore annexing three points to Black Diamonds. I. V. Wheeler won high single with the good score of 271, also best 3 string 720; other good scores were rolled by D. Belnap 192, H. Reddick 202. For the boys D. Wrightsteer had high single 265; C. Smith high three string 572, rolled as follows 189, 191, 192, very consistent eh, what.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 2 — Floodlights casting forty million candlepower of illumination were given final tests last night in preparation for America's first official league night baseball game, which will be played tonight.

The Des Moines Club of the Western League will meet Wichita in the game that initiates night play, all reserved seats for the contest having been sold.

K. M. Landis, commissioner of base ball, will be one of many national baseball figures who will see the game tonight and the play will be broadcast to radio listeners over the N.B.C. network. The game will start at 8.30 p. m., C. S. T.

TO PLAY AT FALLS

Preston, May 2.—According to the information received, Wilbur "Dunk" Bowman will leave Saturday for Niagara Falls where he will play hockey next Winter.

Bowman, a native of Preston, is still under the junior hockey age limit and has played an important role on Preston's junior and senior hockey clubs for the past few years.

The loss of the services of Bowman will be a severe blow to the hopes of Preston's senior hockey club for the 1930-31 season. Bowman will also be missed in the baseball circles.

Tea Business Is Affected

new tariff. "We manufacture machinery for the pulp and paper business," he stated, "and after looking the list over carefully I cannot find any mention of our particular branch at all. Scrap iron, Mr. Wilson stated, was not brought in from the United States, but was purchased in this country.

G. A. Freeman, of the Stephens-Adamson Company, confessed that he had had no opportunity to study the new tariff carefully, but after looking it over could see nothing that would affect his company either one way or the other. Considerable material is imported from Chicago and from Pittsburgh, but the duty on this has not changed from last year.

Share Sales Tax

Mr. Jamieson Bone, manager of the local branch of the F. O'Hara Company of stockbrokers, when questioned by a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer regarding the effect of the new budget handed down by the Dominion house yesterday on his business stated that the consensus of opinion among the majority of brokers was that the budget will have no effect on trading in general.

Strengthen Industry

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, proprietor of the Belleville Creameries, when interviewed today regarding the budget as brought down by Hon. C. A. Dunning in the House of Commons in regards to his own industry was noncommittal. "Certainly, said Mr. Robertson, the farmers will be benefited as they will receive a higher price for their milk and cream and this will encourage the production of butter fat. As regards the increase on tea I can say better from one to four cents a pound will make for a better local market.

Howard Clarke, manager of the Clarke's Dairy, stated that Canada had always under the old tariff to compete against the world in the matter of butter and the new tariff will certainly be a benefit to the trade. The increase on New Zealand butter will greatly strengthen the industry here and the home market will advance in consequence.

Miller's Worm Powders are complete in themselves. They not only drive worms from the system, but repair the damage that worms cause and so invigorate the constitution that it speedily recovers from the disorders of the digestion that are the result of the work of these parasitic intruders. They do their work thoroughly and promptly and soundness follows their use.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

A particular friend of mine was dissecting a shrike. This shrike is a bird about the size and colour of a blue jay, known to a great many people as the butcher bird. I said to those standing by, "He is a bad one; always shoot him on sight." My friend stopped for a moment and said, "Beg your pardon, Jack, but you are wrong; this is not the big northern shrike you have reference to." "No, no, my dear fellow," I replied; "I mean the very one you are skinning, and again I say, shoot him on sight." My friend smiled and replied in a kind, cheerful manner, "Jack, I am surprised as you." Now, dear reader, here were two natural born naturalists right opposite each other, one advocating the protection, the other the destruction, of the same bird. I had watched this shrike in Ohio when I was a kid. I had often found his nest and knew what he fed his young upon. I have caught dozens of them, right in the act, in Canada, and they are always searching for birds, chiefly the small fly-catchers. Well, we dissected this fellow and found two little birds' legs, and they were not mates. Last fall I saw a shrike follow a snow bird fully five hundred feet high but the snow bird won out.

I said to another man, "The crow and bronze grackle take the robin's eggs." "Why," he said, "I don't understand that; there is a robin's nest within a rod of my door, and the woods are full of crows." Why, bless your life, that is just the reason why the robin built there, it simply came to him for protection.

Now first of all we must not lose sight of this fact: That there never was but one perfect Manager shod on this earth, and He put these creatures all here. So let us roll back the pages of time and take a look at nature before man interfered. Likely you have read the history of America; I haven't but I doubt if there is any account known of the clouds of birds that once hovered over this continent. The settlings in the bottom of the little artificial pond near my house caused from the wild goose and duck droppings, are exactly of the same material that we find in our marshes, and which is from three to ten feet deep in the average marsh. I will not attempt to mention the number of birds I have seen in one day, because the average boy of the present would not believe it; but I will say that I firmly believe I have seen more birds on one day before I was ten years of age, than the average ten year-old-boy of the present day has seen in all his life. Time and time again during my life have I seen a wounded bird lag behind as the flock flew to cover; and often have I seen a hawk dart at them, and he never failed to get the wounded one. And some wounded quail have been stolen from me by hawks before I got to where they lit, and if it were not for the snow I wouldn't have known what had happened as I did not always see the hawk.

Once in my life I had a flock of about thirty young wild ducks. There were two little runts that appeared to want to die, but I rebelled and kept patching them up. Finally one took with a sore eye disease, and in a few days the other little scab had it, and both died, but not until they had introduced these sore eyes to the rest of the ducks and all my nice, healthy ducks started drooping. When I eventually got this disease checked I had only seven ducks left. Now, according to my own experience, if a hawk had come along he would have picked up the weak ones and prevented this disease. So, after all my life's study I am fully convinced that these cannibal birds were put here to destroy the weak and sickly and prevent contagious disease, letting the strong and healthy survive But man had interfered. He has paid all his attention to the destruction of the food birds and has almost annihilated them and let what we now call their enemies go; or, in other words, we human beings have combined our forces with the food birds' enemies.

Now Point Pelee Marsh is about fifteen miles from where I am sitting. Point Pelee is the most southerly part of mainland in Canada, and the hawks cross there by the thousands every fall yet I never knew of a hunter going purposely to shoot them. But if there were twenty-five ducks in a pond down there and twenty-five men knew it to-night, there would likely be fifty guns there tomorrow morning. Yet, I honestly believe there are as many hawks and owls in America to-day as there were thirty years ago.

Last fall, when the hawks were migrating, in October, they started roosting in our woods, and in less than a week there were thousands upon them, and coming there. So I took a flashlight and the .22 rifle and went down and I am sure as high as twenty-five would fly out of one little tree every time I shot. It was a bright moonlight night, and they soon took the hint, and I only killed fifteen or twenty. But to hear their wings as they hovered around, over the woods, would cause one to wonder where they came from and where they were going. How ever once was enough; the rest took the hint for the next night not one was seen going there. So don't let us blame the Great Provider; it is man's mistake, that is all; we have gone wrong.

"Oh, but say, Jack Miner, do you pretend to say that there were once birds enough in America that the old and delicate, crippled, sickened and diseased would supply all these hawks and owls with food?" Yes, that is just exactly what I want to say, yet I have no proof of it. I only know that the hawks will take a cripple every time and let the strong and healthy go. "Well," you say, "how about a flock of little ducks? He could take any one of them." Not so easily. Wild ducks at six hours old will have like a lot of frogs, but a delicate one cannot; he will possibly just put his head under, and his body will stick out like a bloated toad. Yet, I believe that less than one hundred years ago there were more of the above class of birds for the hawks, each year, in America, than there are altogether, now. So, after having a life time of experience raising birds, instead of doctoring the sickly ones and petting the droopies and sore-eyes, I just take the hawk's plan and destroy them.

While I would not like to see these cannibal birds become extinct, yet I would be pleased to see them decreased the same as other birds have become during the last forty years.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST YOUTH

Clarence Jackson, aged 21, of Shilony Township, will face a serious charge when he appears in one week at the Belleville Police Court. He was arrested by Provincial Constable Hammer yesterday at his home in Sidney township, information being furnished by Inspector T. D. Huston, who investigated the charge before it was laid. The young man is charged with one of the most serious offences under the criminal code and when up before the magistrate today the young man seemingly did not consider the position he was placed in. He listened to the charge with an absent stare on his face and Constable Hammer before he had a chance to speak asked for a remand of one week as the Crown was not ready to proceed. He will be held in custody without bail during the period of remand.

RESPONSIBILITY OF PRESS CLEAR

Prestige of Dominion, Says Col. J. H. Woods, Depends Upon It

Toronto, May 1.—Sounding a warning that relations with the United States and with Great Britain were gradually becoming obscured and dimmed, Col. J. H. Woods, past president of The Canadian Press, Tuesday before 500 members of that body and the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association called upon the press of Canada to exercise the strength it holds and, by expressing itself with calmness and clearness, wisdom and moderation, to build for the Dominion a stronger position among the nations of the world.

In the Royal York Hotel ballroom Canada's leading newspaper publishers and editors met together in annual banquet under the joint chairmanship of W. B. Preston, president of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association, and John Scott, president of The Canadian Press.

They were the listeners when two remarkable addresses were given by two outstanding Canadian figures, Rt. Hon. Sir William Mulock, K.C.M.G., Chief Justice of Ontario, and Col. Woods, pioneer journalist, editor and general manager of the Calgary Herald and leader in the early formation of the Western Associated Press which ultimately established the Canadian newspapers co-operation news-gathering service and equitable press telegraph rates.

The audience was composed of the finest in Canadian newspaperdom. Owners and editors of the leading dailies from the Atlantic to the Pacific met to solve the problems which face newspapers throughout Canada. Their applause to the two addresses evidenced the warmth with which they were received.

Sir William Mulock was greeted thunderously. His address clearly showed the interest and attention with which he had watched the growth of Canada's daily press and held a note of high endeavor to which he called upon all publishers to strive.

Col. Woods spoke from a background of nearly 40 years in Canadian newspaper life; from the days when $10 was a princely salary and jobs were hard to find and harder to keep; when a reporter who "hadn't a hope" in a hard game of poker in the Canadian Rockies would have found it hard to get along; from the days when dazzling little western dailies met in conference to protest against high press telegraph rates and from their meeting evolved a new service for western Canada.

TERN FLIES 9,000 MILES

A common tern, member of the gull family, was banded in northern Labrador by Oliver H. Austin, Jr., in July 1928. Fourteen months later it was seen and examined at the southern tip of Africa on the Indian Ocean, 9,000 miles away, which is thought to set a record.

The tern, or sea swallow, is usually smaller than the gull. Its bill is more slender, its feet not so strong, and its flight more graceful and dashing. The common tern is pure white with a cap and mantle of bluish gray and is sometimes hunted for its feathers. The all-white species live on Pacific islands; those with darker coats are widespread.

WILL RESCUE CREW

TOKYO, May 1.—The freighter Lisbon Maru en route to Yokahoma drifted on the rocks near here today when her engines became disabled during the storm. Steamers attempting to rescue 39 members of the crew were unable to approach owing to the high seas.

MONCTON WILL ESCHEW "K"

Change in Spelling of City's Name Ratified by Council

Moncton, N.B., May 1 (CP)—Moncton, to all intents and purposes, is still Moncton. Despite a recent resolution of the City Council, which unanimously approved alteration of the spelling of the city's name to Monckton, nothing has been done to put that version on the statute books of the province, and public opinion seems opposed to the change.

The railway town's name was changed from "The Bend" to its present form about the year 1850, apparently in honor of Lieutenant Colonel Robert Monckton, who, one hundred years earlier, had driven the French from Fort Beausejour, near what is now the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border. But, according to Dr. J. Clarence Webster, of Shediac, an authority on the history and bibliography of the Maritimes there is no official record in existence in which the contrary exist "k" appears. The slipshod spelling of the time is held responsible for the error by Dr. Webster, who believes there can be practically no doubt that the town was named for the Victor of Beausejour, the only Monckton who had any active part in securing Eastern Canada to the British crown.

A study of the Monckton family for 600 years, says Dr. Webster, reveals only one or two occasions when the name was spelt without the "k".

The difficulty of altering all business documents, letterheads, postal regulations and so on has resulted in keen opposition to the change. The City Council has already requested the City Council to rescind its motion and no action has been taken to authorize the change through the Legislature at Fredericton. The Geographic Board of Canada, which has the final say in these matters, has not yet been approached in this instance.

The Board, however, has already agreed that the name should be spelled with a "k", having considered the matter some years ago. But owing to various developments the spelling was never made official nor applied to postal documents.

Dr. Webster believes that an act of the legislature changing the spelling would have to be ratified by the Geographical Board, and that in the last analysis the Board could affect the change on its own responsibility, quoting the change from Annapolis, N.S., to Annapolis Royal as a precedent for this course of action.

LEATHER FROM WHALES

Seeking to turn every part of the whale in profitable use, Norwegian whalers, with the aid of a Swedish chemical engineer, have perfected a process of converting the hugh mammal's intestinal membrane into a tough, almost indestructible, and cheap leather for gloves. Ships now sent to the whaling grounds are float ing factories, equipped to extract the whale bone, flens and bring back the edible part of the beeflike meat and turn the rest of the carcass into fertilizer.

Don't make YOUR ENGINE
FIGHT HARMFUL GUM

If you want a fast, clean, smooth engine—don't make it fight harmful gum.

Use Koolmotor Gasolene—a powerful, clean burning motor fuel from which harmful gum has been removed.

Inferior or carelessly refined gasolenes deposit a sticky, gummy substance on your valves. When you step on the gas for more power, your valves have to fight to get free—your engine labors—valuable compression is lost. Through extra refining and rigid supervision—known as the Cities Service mini-gum process—the gum content in Koolmotor gasolene has been reduced to a harmless minimum. Valves are kept clean—power kept at its maximum—your engine responds promptly to your desire when you use Koolmotor—the original high test, anti-knock green gas.

Don't pay the impending penalty of gum in gasolene. Keep your tank full of Koolmotor Gasolene. The nearest Cities Service station or dealer is waiting to serve you.

CANADIAN GEOGRAPHIC JOURNAL

A new magazine has arrived, one for which there is a real place in the reading of Canadians. It is the Canadian Geographical Journal, the first number of which has just been received. It is issued by the Canadian Geographical Society and is distributed to members of the society. The Journal will be a monthly publication.

Those who know the British and American Geographic Journals realize what a field there is for a Canadian magazine of this kind. Its aim is to make the resources of Canada, economic as well as aesthetic, better known both at home and abroad. It will publish from time to time articles devoted to various phases of exploration or travel or economic geography in other parts of the world by competent writers. Its ideal is a magazine which will combine an accurate, authoritative and readable text with the best obtainable illustrations, a text that will be authentic but not stodgy, popular without being puerile, and with illustrations that will tell their own story and not be merely pretty pictures.

The first number, that of May, contains graphic stories by Dr. Banting, and Sir Francis Younghusband, one of the world's greatest explorers, an illustrated story of Viscount Willingdon on his West Indian tour, illustrations of Canadian birds in color, an article on flora of the Arctic, and an article on aerial mapping.

MASEFIELD

Will John Masefield become poet laureate of England, following the late Dr. Bridges, Alfred Austin, Tennyson, and others of the long line which began with the Father of English poetry, Dan Chaucer?

Masefield of all modern writers is close to life. Coming of an aristocratic family, he early left home and saw the rough spots of life as he tramped the world and sailed the seas. Endowed with powerful poetic imagination, he yet is a realist. Life is not too rough at times for his manly touch and there are few exquisite moods which he does not adorn.

Whether Masefield in the role of laureate would write with the same freedom as when inspired by humanity and nature as he has been would remain to be seen. But he is a supreme artist with a rich content of thought. If made laureate he would be free to seek his own inspiration, that much is assured for the office has gone beyond the stage where commands are all. One would like to read some work of his in the new office. There are mighty themes to be written in this age, such as Masefield appreciates. If Masefield never wrote another line he has written what could be called laureate poetry. He is a patriot if ever Englishman was.

SAGONASKA

Whether it is possible to give a name to a bridge across the Moira River as is suggested by Dr. Ackerill, is worthy of consideration by citizens, in order to perpetuate the association of the Indians with this part of Ontario.

Sagonaska was the name of the river Moira and Dr. Ackerill would have the new bridge named with this noble Indian appellation.

Canadians cannot afford to lose old Indian names. Spots associated with early history in the Dominion at the time when Indians and whites met freely are being marked by mounds by the Government. Why then should not a name such as the old name of the river be preserved in some form whether in the bridge or not.

Hundreds of years from now generations will know with interest of the association of the Indians with pre-white civilization in such names lend a richness to the language and they pay tribute to the great friends of the white Canadian, the Indian tribes which had lived in the country before the white came.

Dr. Ackerill pays a worthy tribute to the Indian who has much to teach us in nature lore, in love of the great outdoors, in symbolism, in religion and in so many ways. Indeed the debt the white owes to the red man cannot be repaid. But appreciation might be indicated by preservation of as many Indian names as possible in these parts, in roads, streets, villages and buildings.

MORE THAN A BRIDGE

A new bridge across the Moira River is more than a new bridge across the stream.

It is a bridge of thought which carries public attitude on municipal matters across into a new realm of public attention. It bridges the old and the new.

Bridges are not suddenly built. They are years in coming. Progress demands stronger and wider bridges; the council realizes that a new era has come.

The new Moira bridge means more than a way of crossing the water. It is a symbol of city growth, of a new time, and of a new public spirit.

MAY AND THE OUTDOORS

Strive as one may one cannot help thinking in these days of early May, of woods, and open spaces.

Human psychology tells why the coming of fine weather drives so many motorists out on the King's Highways.

Human thoughts are expanding at this season of the year with a sense of freedom which only spring can generate.

SIDELIGHTS

QUITCLAIM

I have said good-by to a handful of gray farm acres.
The deal is finished, a binding payment laid down.
They will move in at once, next week, they hasten to tell me.
Twenty years on that farm—and tomorrow I go back to town.

What do I sell them? What are they buying from me?
Land and a farmhouse, crops and ten hives of bees,
In releasing all this how am I taught the poorer
For the memories I keep are somehow more than these.

Now, who could purchase my daily joy in these acres?
Sunrise, March brook, garden and tree and vine,
Flowers I planted, white hives that I tended—
Leaving them, still they are mine.

No one might comprehend this in shaping a dull deed.
Should ever a casual buyer hope to see
How the little, intangible, lovely joys of this holding
Have entered into the heart of me?

I have said good-by to a handful of quiet acres,
Someone has purchased a farm, as I give up my home,
But foundations laid, and the hopes and the joy
I have set there,
Are mine; mine to take with me, wherever I roam.

—Frances Crosby Hamlet.

NEW PHONE LINK FOR TWO CITIES

Belleville And Oshawa Tied Up With New Direct Communication

Belleville and Oshawa have just been linked by a new long distance circuit giving direct telephone communication between these two cities.

Construction work was completed within the past few days and the new voice path is now in operation.

Speaking to a representative of The Ontario Intelligencer today, J. A. Cokers, Manager of the Bell Telephone Company here, stated that this new direct talking channel has been opened to meet the demands of an increasing use of the telephone now made over this route. This new facility was provided as an important part of the telephone company's 1930 construction program, which is to involve an outlay of close on $30,000,000. Of that total, in the neighborhood of $7,000,000 will be expended this year for increasing outside long distance equipment such as the new circuit opened here.

Six Candidates Offered Selves For Ministry

Rawdon, April 30 (By Mail)—On Sunday afternoon at Mount Pleasant Mr. A. W. Garrison of Mount Pleasant gave a very full and interesting report of the Presbytery held in Napanee last week. Six candidates have offered for the Ministry, two of them being sons of our pastor, Messrs. Right and Kingsley Joblin, one speaker told of the gospel being preached in twenty eight languages and said eight thousand Finnish people have recently settled in Canada. He said he felt absolutely sure that Canada would be one of the foremost nations of the world. The speaker also eulogized the work of the W. M. S. Mr. A. H. Bailey voiced his appreciation that he heard gave him the privilege of attending and said he enjoyed the Presbytery very much. The pastor gave a brief message dealing with religion from three angles (1) necessity (2) business (3) luxury. The choir sang "If Jesus goes with me I'll go."

Mr. Jim Reynolds who has been spending the winter in England has returned to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McMaster and family spent Sunday with Mr. Fred Cook.

Miss Sarah Johnson read the following address and several songs and speeches were given with Mr. Will Donald filling the chair. Mr. Johnson and bride will be living at Codolphin where the groom will follow his profession as cheesemaker. Dear Creighton and Edith:

We, your friends of Minto, felt we could not let this momentous occasion of your marriage pass without showing in some tangible way our respect for you. Creighton you have by your gentlemanly conduct and your steady habits won a place in all our hearts. Edith, we have not known you long, but we assure you that you will always receive a warm welcome in this community and we wish you both a happy voyage on the matrimonial sea.

In conclusion we wish you a long, prosperous and happy wedded life, and ask you to accept these gifts as a remembrance of your Minto friends.

The year old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. MacConnell died at the home of his grandparents and the little child will be greatly missed. Little Robert Bruce never fully recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia and although two nurses did all possible, his little life simply wafted away to be with Jesus. Rev. Bunt conducted the funeral service and Mrs. Sid Mason sang a beautiful solo. Lovely floral tributes were in evidence. Deep sympathy is extended to the parents and grandparents.

and the past twenty-four hours were relegated to the world of nightmares; there was no Spanish house with a patrol and a fountain, there was no ivory satin dress and quilted wrap richly furred, there had been no dinner, no burglar, no police investigation. It had all been a dream!

She begged off from going to the movies, and helped Ma with the dishes and was so sweet and gentle and helpfully considerate that she seemed ten years older, in her watchful mother's eyes, at least, than the girl of yesterday.

"It's love has done it to her!" Mrs. O'Hara thought, going off with the little girls and Pat for their regular Saturday night's entertainment. Tom, lumbering and superfluous, and not invited to share anyone's plans, had disappeared, so that Mary Kate and Cass had the kitchen to themselves.

For awhile they sat close, at the table, his arm about her, her shoulder turned against his breast, her elbows on the table, so that when she lifted her face to speak to him, or look into his eyes, her bright silky hair brushed his cheek, her thick long lashes were but a few inches from his own. Fragrant, slim, crushed like a soft cool rose in his hard embrace, newly gentle and weary tonight —— that was Cass's girl, that was Mary Kate.

"My cousin Mamie Terry was talking about you yesterday, Mary Kate. She said 'you were the loveliest girl she knew. She said you always reminded her of a little girl."

"She doesn't know me!"

"Oh, doesn't he?"

"You know her husband's two sisters and her brother and his wife, and their husbands, and all the children, always come and have dinner with Mamie on Tuesday nights. And she wants you to come Tuesday."

"You told, her?"

"I gave her a pretty strong hint." He looked concernedly down at the bright crushed hair that dropped suddenly on his shoulder. "Why? Mad?"

"Oh, no, dear. Only— I don't know, sometimes, that I'm good enough to be anybody's wife!"

"Wake over!" Cass said, with a joyous explosive laugh.

She sighed in infinite content and weariness, resting against him, without answering.] And presently she dismissed him, and went upstairs, to light the gas, and unpack her bag, and put away brushes and powder, and the peach-coloured night dress that had figured in last night's horror and fright.

Then she got into a fresh gown, brushed her hair, washed her face thoroughly, and knelt down, with her soap-fragrant hands looped over her face, to say her prayers. She turned down the little girl's bed neatly—and was reminded of Mrs. Peters, putting the guest room in order last night, and falling heavily into sleep the minute she got into bed.

Suddenly Mary Kate visualized Chris. A pang, sharp and piercing and completely unexpected, went through her heart. She would never never see him again.

His tall, lean figure in the comfortable tweeds, his long, lean hand holding a cigarette, his bronzed face that somehow remained fair under all its burning, and the loose wave of his fair hair very bright against the Indian forehead, all these were suddenly before her eyes.

Fever devoured her. Thirst made her filing her head back, breathing hard, like a person dying for air.

Oh, Chris——Chris! Oh, loose tweeds and brown hands and leisurely, casual voice so full of securenss and authority!

Trembling, hardly knowing what she did Mary Kate lowered the light to a bead, and lighted the special, greenhooded jet that hung above her couch She flung a book on the bed, stepped out of her slippers, established herself comfortably on her pillows.

It was no use. She could not resist. She must hear his voice, she must see him——talk to him again.

She threw the book aside, and put out the light. Only the tiny bead over by the bureau burned on, to guide Tom and Regina when they came upstairs. And from the sky outside—sign on Geary street, long streamers of light came into the shabby upstairs bedroom, swelled on the wall, stood still, were gone, and swelled again.

Mary Kate's heart was beating and her mouth was dry, her veins pulsed with unaffordable longing and despair. She lay awake in the crowded shabby darkness of the bedroom, writhing, breathing deep, forcing herself to quiet smitten with resurrend misery, and covering her face once more with her hands.

CHAPTER XXVII

Mary Kate's long nightmare to Mary Kate. She went through the usual routine of rushing to early Mass, returning to leisurely breakfast, a minute inspection of the voluminous morning paper, and a comfortable, luxurious, formal toilet, like a woman under a spell.

In the first place, there was the horror of fear lest her name be connected with the story of the Steynes burglary. The evening papers had had more outlines of the story. This morning's to her infinite relief, had little more. A young house-breaker had been shot in the Seraglio hacienda at Burlingame, by Christopher Steynes of New York, who had rented it for two months for the summer. He was not held; the thief, one Tony Moody, was in the City and County hospital not expected to live. He was supposedly one of a gang that had been ravaging the Peninsula homes during the past three months. Steynes whose original plan had been to sail on the Asama on the eleventh, might be delayed until a later steamer. That was all.

In another part of the paper Mary Kate found a social item. Countess Katya Yarnowska, and her daughter, Countess Marka, were leaving for New York and Paris today. The two Russian noblewomen, distant cousins of the late Tsar, had been much entertained during their short stay in San Francisco.

She asked Tom, when he came home from "Mi" to bring her the other morning paper. In it she found practically the same account, and the sick fear in her heart abated a little. But in the second paper was a picture of Chris, in polo regalia, with a pony's head looking over his shoulder, and the agony of her feeling for him, her jealousy ,her longing, her hunger to see him and hear him, rushed over her in a deluge. A trembling restlessness seized her, for the entire day.

Cass came, and was wonderful, and they walked in spring sunshine again, and again looked at empty apartments Mary Kate heard and saw nothing, except the echoes in her own heart. The tones of a spoiled quick arrogant voice were ringing there, the memory of a sun-burned face under fair hair, of a long brown hand with brisk, aristocratic fingers, was always before her eyes.

Sometimes she wanted to hurry Cass along ,They ought to get home; some one might telephone. At other times she lagged languidly beside him, hoping that every man whose figure came into view, up or down some quiet vista of Sunday streets, might be Chris. Oh, to meet him—

"Do you like it, darling?"

"It's lovely."

"And can you see yourself in a kitch en apron, giving your old man his coffee, in this little breakfast alcove?"

She looked, unseeing, from a window in the empty kitchen that smelled of pipes. The street below—persons walking there—an angle of the Marina, and the bay. And beyond the bay, the green outlines of the Sausalito hills, and the benign heights of Mount Tamalpais.

"Ignaline looking out at a bay from your kitchen window!"

"You like this, then?"

Cass was eager, happy. Mary Kate thought that it was already four o'clock they would surely be home at five. And when they arrived there Mother might say that someone had telephoned: "It was a man, Mary Kate." Or Chris would come tomorrow morning into Gordon Rountree's office, where they had first met.

Supper was a dream, the evening only vague shadows. But during another long night Mary Kate was wide awake, tossed and tortured by a pouring river of thoughts, half finished, half assimilated, crossing and recrossing each other like thoughts in delirium.

She could not touch her breakfast; the morning in the office was long expectation. Chris did not come in.

Gordon Rountree did, that afternoon, at about two o'clock.

"Everything all right?" he asked, ignoring the senior Delaney, who was painstakingly making entries in a ledger.

"Oh, yes, thank you!" Mary Kate answered, in a subdued voice. Her face had flushed a deep red.

"Mr. Steynes hasn't heard anything more of the affair," her employer said, significantly. "Won't, probably. He sails next Sunday.

Next Sunday. Six days. The whole world went black. Her heart began to hammer painfully. Chris would be gone forever in six little days, and she was powerless to hold him.

She looked at the telephone. Where could she find him, at half-past two o'clock on a sunshiny Monday afternoon? He might be playing polo or golf, or he might be driving somewhere in the spectacular Sernso with the 4 noted horn. He was rich, he was popular, filled with plans in which she had not, and never could have any part.

When four o'clock came, and five o'clock, Mary Kate thought she would die of sheer loneliness and heart-sickness.

She dragged home. Dinner was ashes plaster of Paris and sawdust again. Voices were vague in her ears. Her heart beat hard, her senses hummed she was restless, impatient, wanting to break her cup frantically, instead of placing it gently in the saucer, wanting to get up and scream, instead of answering the family questions in her usual tone. After dinner she stepped, dazed into the backyard and looked up at the early stars. Her two hands she pressed frantically against her heart.

"This is awful!" Mary Kate said, panting. She thought of the telephone, inside the house behind her. What number should she call, to get Christopher Steynes? (The need of his voice tore at her, the hunger for his presence made her feel sick and weak. She imagined herself at the telephone.

"Hello. Is Mr. Steynes there?"

"This is he, speaking."

"Oh, Chris, this is Mary."

He called her "Mary". It sounded like a new name different from any other name, as he said it, Mary, It was a beautiful name.

Then what would he say? What else could he say except, "Did you want to see me?"

And what else could she say but "No?" It would be dangerous to see him., Mother, Mart, Cass would all be puzzled by her following up any such friendship .

She quivered from head to foot. She put her hands over her face, and bowed her head. Any hackney and ferried more the soft spring night sky, her breath whistling in it came and went. Her mouth was dry, and her hands cold.

"I can't stand this!" said Mary Kate She had a longing to tell her big brother, to be "said by Mart," as she fondly always was.

Then a telegram from Mart, received that day, had said "Having fine time, home Wednesday or Thursday." No hope there.

And Chris would sail on Saturday. Cass came out, laughing, to find her raising the empty barrels and clothes lines, and put his arm about her.

"Hello, sweet! Whatcha doing out here all alone?"

"I——looking up at the stars, Cass. It's so lovely out."

Correct Manners

—Mrs. Cornelius Beekman—

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have just become engaged and neither my parents nor my fiance's parents know each other. Both have extended invitations to visit the other (My) parents invited his first though. My fiance's parents claim that my parents should call on them first.

P. C.

No; it is the other way about. As soon as the engagement is consummated and the fiance tell his parents the good news, they should go at once to call on the girl and her parents. This is a most important visit, and should be made, to be strictly correct, within twenty-four hours after the young man has informed his parents. Naturally it is a significant visit, this visit of welcome of the girl into the family of her fiance and naturally she expects that the visit will be made immediately and with high enthusiasm.

Folly, in a silver dress
Danced by candle light,
And all the gossips in the town—
Here and there—and up and down—
Said it wasn't right.

Folly, in a silver dress
Broke her heart their story,
And all the ribbons on her dress,
Torn and frayed with loneliness,
Faded and blew away.

Folly in a silver dress,
Danced by candle glow—
But all the gossips in town—
Here and there—and up and down—
Really didn't know!

—Mona McTavish, in The Chatelaine.

DEAR READER:

May Day has made a fitting entrance with warm sultry weather but was celebrated with no great stir. Save for the lovely Springtime shades reflected in the costumes about town there was little to remind one of the colorful ceremonies that used to mark this important day.

In former days May first was celebrated throughout Great Britain and to a lesser degree, in France and Germany, with festivities which now only survive in a few rural districts. They are the direct descendants of the ancient Roman Floralia, and of the Druidic feasts in honour of the god Bel.

In Tudor, England the custom seems to have been for the people to go into the woods in the night, gather trees and flowers, and return with them at sunrise to decorate their houses. There was the crowning of the May Queen, who held away for one day over her court. All who wished danced around a maypole decorated with flowers and ribbons.

Sometimes one sees in English papers and periodicals pictures of children dancing around the Maypole and the sight is a charming one.

But these gay festivities are almost forgotten, and the way most women celebrate May Day is in an annual event that is a necessary function, has culine opinion notwithstanding. This event is Spring housecleaning. If you regard this operation as bringing Spring into your home you will find that it loses some of its distaste. Yet, Spring housecleaning is not exactly distasteful considering the zest with which most women enter into it. Mops and pails, brushes and brooms are busy busy at work, to say nothing of the versatile vacuum cleaner. And then with paint and varnish to make dull corners glisten the house is made truly lovely with brightness and cleanliness.

If that is how you spend May Day, dear reader, we hope your efforts meet with gratifying success.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Since nobody ever died of failing hair or baldness, the illustrious medicine profession of past years didn't turn its scientific eye upon these matters. But times have changed. There are capable medical men who handle such cases. Often complete medical examinations are made, blood tests and everything. The health of the hair depends upon the health of the body, proper assimilation, proper elimination. Nervousness depletes the glue from crown. Loss of sleep and worry have a bad effect upon it. Samson had a lot of wool, and are what a big, strong boy he was!

Poor sleepers wrinkle early in life. The body repairs are not going good. Tissues wear out, and sleep makes new ones. There is such a thing as getting so exhausted that one can't rest comfortably. Every woman should on one night a week, go to bed at an early hour, read a nice drowsy book, and click off ten hours of sleep.

Mothers who would have small daughters develop a normal body framework must give the youngsters plenty of sunshine and fresh air. If possible, the air should be free of atmospheric impurities. life in the country is likely to be better for a child than city existence, much of course depends upon proper feeding and general hygienic attentions.

Tonic to remove dandruff: forty-eight grains of resorcin, one fourth ounce of glycerin, diluted alcohol to fill a two-ounce bottle. Apply every night.

Roofs Torn From Houses at Marmora

UNESTIMATED DAMAGE WHEN 60 MILE GALE DESCENDS ON MARMORA

Houses Barns Suffer in Storm Late Friday Afternoon—No One Injured—Motorists Forced to Seek Shelter.

(Special Correspondence)

Marmora, Ont., May 3.—A sixty mile an hour gale accompanied by a torrential downpour of rain wreaked unestimated damage in the village of Marmora and vicinity yesterday afternoon.

Roofs were ripped from several houses, telephone poles were torn completely down, crippling communication, trees were uprooted and fence poles flung from their moorings. It was a miniature tornado, one of the worst storms experienced in the district for some time. Other areas in Hastings County, while the scene of similar devastation, did not suffer to the extent that this district did.

Shortly after four o'clock the village was shrouded in darkness and within a few minutes the storm was at the height of its fury. The wind ripped the roof completely off the large brick residence owned by Mrs. William Hotson near the outskirts of the village depositing it on the lawn. Part of the brick work was also flung to its lawn. Flower beds and gardens at the same home were covered with the debris.

Next door at the home of Sanford Lawrence the hurricane tore down a number of trees which crashed to the verandah, damaging it beyond repair.

Barn Roofs Crash

Mrs. W. Grant who also lives in the village saw the roof of her barn crash to the ground while the metal roofing on the home of Mr. George Wellman was buried off.

Chas. Cooke a farmer, four miles west of the village, suffered a heavy loss when his barn, a large frame structure, was separated entirely from the foundation and toppled over. Fortunately the few head of stock quartered in the barn were unhurt. Lloyd Doyle, who lives at Deloro, lost the roof from his barn.

The tornado lashed itself into intensive fury on the Madoc Road and White School House was the scene of further damage.

The rain and hail storm continued unabated for fifteen minutes when the farmers were given an opportunity to take an inventory of the damage done.

Motorists were forced to shelter, as it was impossible to see more than a few feet into the downpour.

Reports of extensive damage in other parts of Hastings County were received but Marmora appears to have borne the brunt of the weather assault.

What's In The Name Sagonaska

Ex-Mayor Walmsley Says It Means Slupgish Reedy River

A letter received from a prominent resident respecting the naming of the new lower bridge, Sagonaska, has brought forth many diversified opinions by other residents. J. E. Walmsley, ex-mayor of the city, stopped a reporter of The Ontario Intelligencer today, asking if he knew the exact meaning according to Indian legend of the word proposed. The reporter confessed that he did not, and Mr. Walmsley stated it meant a slow, sluggish river with reeds and rushes growing in the centre and high bushes on the side.

"Surely Belleville has past the time of sluggish waters. This is a progressive city and although the legend of the first inhabitant should be immortalized, yet a more appropriate name could be found," said Mr. Walmsley.

LIGHTNING PLAYS QUEER PRANK IN W. ONTARIO

GALT, May 3—Alex. Slater, a Sprague's Road farmer, had a remarkable escape from death Friday afternoon when his team of horses was killed by lightning. Mr. Slater was drilling and when rain came on he turned toward the barn, walking beside the horses. There was a flash of lightning, and the two animals were killed, one falling on Mr. Slater. An employee working near by saw Mr. Slater fall and found him unconscious. Medical aid was summoned and the farmer brought to the hospital here. He suffered burns about the chest and legs, and the heel of one shoe was burned off. His condition is serious. Mr. Thomas, May 24 Lightning played strange pranks in this district with serious results. While milking a cow in his under's stable, two miles north of the city, Harold Wilson, aged 16 years, was thrown through the stable chains against the stable wall, fracturing his hip, by the force of a bolt of lightning. The bolt is believed to have struck the stable floor under the cow, which escaped injury. The pail of milk was thrown into the stall, landing right side up with scarcely a drop spilled.

OLD BRIDGE TO BE SOON MEMORY

Rapid Progress In Dismantling of Structure Over 50 Years Old.

The old tower bridge will soon be a memory. The Holgate Construction Company are progressing favorably and Mr. Archie McCreelock, the consulting engineer, is quite satisfied with the progress made. There is a large number of laboring men on the job tearing down the old bridge and by tonight it will be impossible to pass over it. Some of the residents are still taking chances in walking the structure but soon the planks will all be lifted and it will be dangerous to attempt the crossing. It is understood Mr. Holgcroft has disposed of the steel structure to a local firm of junk dealers.

Dewatering the west end of the bridge for the first pier has been a tedious job The cofer-dam was well constructed but unforseen trouble was encountered and the water has not been taken out as fast as expected, in fact the water is coming in nearly as fast as two pumps can take it out. The trouble was located yesterday when with the consulting engineer and the contractor the whole scheme was gone over and the conclusion was reached, that the water was coming in near the main water pipe. Some blasting had to be done on the north end and it is believed the water is seeping in through these crevices caused by the blasting. A cofer dam will be placed through the centre of the present dam and the water located and taken out part at a time.

The Bell Telephone trouble has been eliminated, all the phones put out yesterday are again in working order thanks to quick work by the trouble gang.

POLICE SEARCH FOR $6800 EXPLOSIVES STOLEN AT HALLOWELL

Construction Company's Building Entered—Boxes are Clearly Marked—Police Search General for "Stuff".

A theft of serious proportions has taken place in Prince Edward County and every effort will be made to apprehend those responsible by the Provincial Police. In the latter part of April the Rayner Construction Company placed some dynamite securely boxed in a safe building near Hallowell in Prince Edward County for use in blasting a piece of work for which they had contracted. When they were ready to use the dynamite the building was opened and all the "stuff" was found to have disappeared and a report was made to the Provincial Police.

It is estimated over $6800.00 was lost in the theft. Each box was plainly marked with the name Rayner Construction Company and also the Canadian Industries from whom the dynamite was purchased. A circular has been issued through the Provincial Police headquarters by Inspector W. H. Lougheed and every police officer in the district is keeping a sharp watch on the appearance of this stuff.

Prominently identified with the city's legal, church and military life, the late Judge Fralick was widely known and many will mourn his death.

One of Belleville's oldest citizens, a member of the Orange and Masonic orders, highly respected by all who knew him, the late Judge Fralick was held in greatest regard.

Edmund Baldwin Fralick (Junior Judge, County of Hastings) was born on February 6th, 1841, his father being Thomas Tillotson Fralick and his mother, Hanna Nicholson.

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH TO MARK 115TH BIRTHDAY

Special Speaker, Dr. John W. Graham, Engaged for Services

The Pioneer Methodist Church of Belleville, now Bridge Street United, celebrates its 115th Anniversary, tomorrow, May 4th. The Rev. Dr. John W. Graham, General Secretary of the Department of Education, embracing all the colleges from Newfoundland to British Columbia, will be the guest speaker for the day. Dr. Graham is one of the most gifted speakers of the United Church of Canada. He has favored the city several times when his presence and his many friends in Belleville are looking forward to his messages.

Belleville has kept pace with the times since the first minister of any church came to these parts in the year 1796. Then the settlers were so few that they could be counted on the fin gers yet to these few the ministers of the Gospel found its way. He had to cut his way through the forests, swim rivers, ford streams, endure hardships and privations.

The first minister was Rev. Darius Dunham. In 1815 the first class was formed and the first leader was John Reynolds, who afterwards became Bishop Reynolds. In 1818 the first church was built, and rebuilt in 1831 and enlarged 1847, and again enlarged in 1863.

In 1864 on May 24th, the cornersione of the new Bridge Street United Church was laid by Hon. Billa Flint, who also presented the lot on which the church stands. On May 14, 1865, the church was opened and dedicated to worship. In 1886, January 8th, the church was destroyed by fire. In 1887 May 12th, the church was reopened and rededicated to the Worship of God. During its long history many of the most eloquent and foremost ministers of the Methodist Church have occupied its pulpit. During that time many important church gatherings have been held within its walls.

In 1926 the Conference of the Methodist Church met for the first time here. In 1833 the Union of the four branches of Methodism in Canada was finally and happily consummated.

The churches have always played a very important part in the development of a country and the history of Belleville is surely linked up with the growth of its churches of all denominations. Some of the early settlers of Belleville are represented by their descendants of the present day.

On Monday evening next, May 5th, Hon. E.C. Mr. Drury and Mr. Duff are both graduates of the Barrie Collegiate Institute and attended this institution during the same period.

Judge E.B. Fraleck Passed Away Today

Judge Fralick, who from a boy showed that he was brilliantly endowed with the attributes necessary to a clever man, received his primary education at the Stoney Township public school.

When he was thirteen years of age he entered the Prontenac Academy at Kingston and afterwards graduated in Arts at Toronto. An interesting coincidence is that at that time one junior pupil was Hugh John Macdonald.

Taught School

In 1859 the young man matriculated graduating in Arts in 1863 with honors in all branches. Upon the completion of his Academic course he went for six years to the United States. Returning to his home he accepted the principalship of the Stirling Grammar School, teaching for one year, 1864.

In January 1865, he entered the law office of Ponton and Falkiner, where, after two years, he had his articles transferred to the Honourable Stephen Richards, the Commissioner of Crown Lands.

After receiving his certificate of fitness in law, Mr. Fralick was called to the Bar at Easter, in the year 1868 and was admitted to practice in the fall of 1868.

He took up practice in Belleville immediately and shortly afterwards married Jane E. Judd, daughter of a Stirling merchant.

Upon the formation of the 49th Hastings Rifles he assumed a lieutenancy in Number 4 Company, under Captain Rowe. His successful career was fittingly crowned by an order in council appointing him a Junior Judge on December 28th, 1881.

Member Queen's Council

In 1889 Judge Fralick was elected a member of Queen's University Council, which position he held until his death. At one time an ardent sportsman, he had always been a staunch Conservative and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Members on both sides of Judge Fralick's family for generations back have been famous for their longevity and the Judge was no exception to the general rule.

At one time Mr. Fralick was appointed a revising officer for East and North Hastings. He was a Judge for thirty-five years, twelve years of which was as Judge of the Surrogate Court.

CHEESE BOARD ASK QUARTERS

Don't Not Like Quarters Provided In The City Hall

Regular buyers of cheese were in the city today for the opening of the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade but as few of the factories have started operations for the season, there was no cheese offered. The board met in the auditorium of the City Hall but found it was claimed, the place too noisy for the conducting of business and a resolution was passed by the buyers, that a committee composed of Charles Mumby, president of the board, and Fred Mallory, secretary, be instructed to interview members of the County Council with respect to securing suitable quarters at Shire Hall to conduct their board meetings on Saturday in view of the fact that the City Council had refused the use of the council chamber, which convenience the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade has enjoyed for many years.

Members of the City Council explained today that the City Council chamber was being reserved for council sessions and that the cheese board was no more effected than other organizations. The chamber has been renovated at great expense and council hopes to keep the room reserved. For that reason provision was made in the city hall proper for the cheese board, nurses' meetings and for others. Alderman French, chairman of property committee was present at the cheese board meeting today as it had been complained that voices did not properly carry. As there was no provisional cheese board-ed it was impossible to judge the acoustics of the provisional quarters. Ald. French told the committee that he would bring the matter before the city council. "We do not want to do anything that will hamper the board," Ald. French told a reporter today. He affirmed that the council had not passed any resolution of refusal.

Mayor Reid, spoken to by The Ontario Intelligencer remarked that there had been no motion nor refusal by the council. He thought that the matter might be discussed in council and assured the newspaperman that there was no intention to refuse quarters to the cheese board of trade.

RADIO FANS CORNER

What a relief to be able to say the reception last night was good. I've been dying for the chance to say these few well chosen words for a long time and no matter what turns up for tonight I've had my say. All fooling aside though, the reception last night, was just about all right. A little bit of disturbance in the background but not enough to seriously hamper us in our rambles.

Did I or did I not see you basking in the reflected rays of those fifty million candle power lamps at the ball game last night? Ah I thought so. Rather a novel idea but it seemed to go over big as the crowd of 12,000 testified. I imagine the idea will take as it seems to be the solution of the problem to let the working people see the games. Can't beat Graham McNamee for making an unseen baseball game sound just as thrilling as though you were viewing it from the stands yourself.

Well, I see the Dixie Circus is on the air tonight, must have changed their jokes but who cares if they did? Tonight at 7 E.S.T. over WJZ. This program features Marcella Shields, Phillips Carlin and a clown and circus band under the efficient direction of Ludwig Laurie.

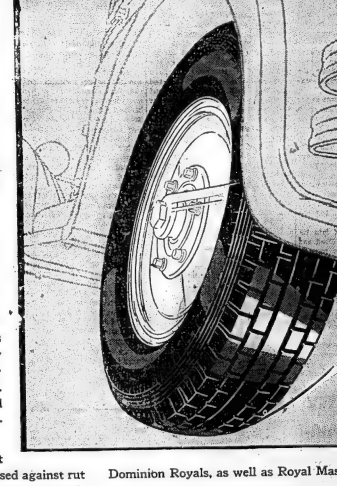
Continuing to peruse the programs for WJZ I find next the Dutch Master's Ministrels at 830 EST over WJZ and WEAF offers Phil Spitalny's orchestra at 8.30 E.S.T. and believe me he has a great orchestra. Ohoh, at 7.30 E.S.T., WEAF the Del Monte program is featuring Miss Marilyn Miller, in her greatest song success "Sally" so no need to tell you to be on time.

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a stomach sweetener, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, chain, Paul Dumont and Al Bernard, and men will be there in all their glory and promise new songs and jokes for us. Carson Robison novely vocalist is featured also.

Rudy Vallee at 11 o'clock, now, an hour earlier for us, WEAF of course. The guest stars on the Paramount Tivoli hour are not announced for to-night, keeping it as a surprise for us. WABC at nine. I'll be seeing you later.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA



Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

B. A. Refe and his Lucky Strike orchestra at nine, E.S.T. over WEAF and following immediately after is the Troubadour of the Moon program with Lannie Ross, tenor.

A LAUREL CROWN FOR SHAW

If Bernard Shaw could only write verse he might be nominated for the poet laureateship of England. But then Bernard is an Irishman and he said some years ago he could write blank verse more rapidly than prose and more intelligently than Shakespeare. He claims that poetry is more easy to write than prose and he promptly wrote a play in blank verse. However it is not likely that the office will be changed to one of prose laureate to let Shaw in.

Shaw as laureate would give England, and even Ireland besides the rest of the world a great deal to laugh about if he produced literature under the office.

GAS ON WEST SIDE

Owing to the dismantling of the lower bridge, there may be noticed on the west side of the Moira River a lowering of pressure of the gas, the pipe of which crosses the bridge but Manager Harden requests patience on the part of the citizens as the condition will be remedied at the earliest possible date. He is not even certain that the pressure will lower but if it does he is certain that the consumers will appreciate that the department will make every effort to keep the service up to a high standard.

SPARE THE FLOWERS

Christian Science Monitor this week has a very strong appeal for the preservation of wild flowers. It will bear repetition:

"Each year comes, flowers fade, and from the cities and towns a gas-propelled army descends upon the countryside, seeking the mystic spell of the wild wood, becoming, rejoicing, finding solace from the return of growing things.

"How perturbed would be these legions of nature-loving adventurers if they should learn that the wilderness had gone on strike—that shrubs and ferns and flowers were no longer to flourish; that the velvet carpet of the forest would no longer bear designs of tender blooms!

"How perturbed, then, must these legions be over the announcement recently made by the New England Wild Flower Preservation Society that each year the society receives word that one of the choicest of spring's offerings, the Mayflower, has entirely disappeared from some new locality where it once grew abundantly, and that in many towns, at the present rate of picking, it will soon be gone forever.

"How willingly, therefore, should they heed the plea of this and other organizations to refrain from recklessly plucking wild flowers and shrubs and also, by refusing to buy them on the streets, to discourage the efforts of those who for profit help themselves to the forest's free gifts.

"Made more easily accessible by the automobile, not only the trailing arbutus but such blooms as the hepatica, flowering dogwood, mountain laurel and moccasin flower alike are threatened with extermination by the very people who claim to hold them in highest regard. However, it seems not too sanguine to expect that the mere announcement of the need will be sufficient to induce the majority of people to forbear from destroying today what they hope to enjoy in future years.

"Although some states and many communities have laws forbidding this species of vandalism, it is, after all, from the good will mankind feels toward wild growing things that the strongest support may be expected. But that response must come soon."

PROFANITY

Under the heading "Senseless Profanity" Hamilton Spectator emphasizes the need of curbing profanity, which is all too prevalent. The editor says:

It is rather curious that long before this the Protestants have not followed the example of the Roman Catholics by establishing an anti-profanity league. The Catholic Holy Name society has for its object the curbing of the human propensity to blaspheme. It is a tendency not confined to those of any particular faith, and the need for reform is just as strong for Protestants as for Catholics or any other denomination. It is reported that a Protestant Virginian clergyman has started a Hallowed Name league, the object of which is described as being an attempt to combat the growing spirit of irreverence, especially as expressed in the semi-profanity fashionable with many who regard themselves as being perfectly respectable members of society. The strange thing about it is that so many people see nothing inconsistent in mildly cursing their way through the week and piously joining in reverent worship on Sunday. Such is the force of habit, that profanity is seldom recognized by those who indulge in it; oaths have become a part of their normal speech, and they slip off the tongue unconsciously. In milder cases custom has sanctioned the use of many expressions which are little suspected of being profane at all. How common is the misuse of the name of the Deity, in all tongues and by all classes. In some countries it is constantly on the lips, having entirely lost its sacred significance. French-speaking people make no disguise whatever, with their 'Mon Dieu', English-speaking people are less straightforward in their utterance, but no less profane. The polite oaths used by our forefathers— odds-bodikins egad, etc.—have been supplanted by even coarser expressions. The extremely mild 'Dear me!' is said to be a corruption of the Italian 'Dio mio.' It would be going too far to expect these harmless ejaculations to be expurgated from common speech. Probably there is no thought of attempting any such thing; but there is plenty of scope for the activities of the new society in dealing with cruder and more offensive forms of profanity. The movement is deserving of the fullest support from all who desire to preserve a decent standard of conversation and manners."

THREE FIELDS.

Field of oats, field of rye, corn-field,—these the three:
Well they yielded, well they throve; the seed-plots tilled by me.

Field of bats, sombre field, with clover down below,
For my horse, my raven horse, 'neath God's fleckling grow.

Field of rye, tawny field, poppy and corn-flower there,
Rye for bread, a bunch of flowers, my child, shall be your share.

Field of wheat, golden field, stalks that bow their crest,
Sparrow ate the half of it, the gentry will eat the rest.

SIGHT OF AN OLD POSTER, done in three colors by an old-time job printer of the day before machine composition wiped the tramp printer from the map, recalled a notable event which took place in Belleville, August 11, 12, 13, 14, 1858, a regatta in which the leading oarsmen of the world took part, Ed. Hanlan, George Bubear, of London, England, Eddie Durnan, of Toronto, champion of world champion Hanlan; J. G. Hackett, Rat Portage, E. Rogers, Worchester, Massachusetts; W. A. Henry, England; J. Haines, England. Hanlan had conquered the oarsmen of the world and after riding on the crest of the wave for a time had become an exhampion but still a powerful oarsman, while the other contestants had names to conjure with in the athletic world. The committee of citizens in charge of the event certainly spread themselves to make it a success, even erecting a grandstand on the wharf to accommodate ten thousand spectators. The event was a success in every way except financially and the deficit was wide and deep. Splendid programs were presented each day, including sailing and canoe races, and one Prof. James Rice gave exhibitions of fancy rowing and walking on the water. This no doubt is the famous Jimmy Rice, Columbia College coach and formerly coach of the Brockville Rowing Club, Detroit Boat Club, etc. Hardy, the Toronto black wire walker was an added attraction. Hanlan won the single scull events closely pressed by George Bubear, at the conclusion of the regatta challenged all comers to row for a purse of $1,000 to $5,000, any place, anywhere. An interesting feature of the regatta was the professional four-oared race between crews representing England and America. The English crew was composed of Bubear, stroke; Gibson, No. 2; Barry No. 3; Haines, bow. The Canadian-American crew was J. Hackett, stroke; Hanlan, No. 2; Rogers, No. 3; Durnan, bow. The English crew won by a length and a half, the course being one mile and a half with turn.

Regatta officials were W. H. Biggar, M.P.P., Harry Corby, M.P., Sheriff Hope, Cameron Brown, G. W. Ross, J. A. Borbridge, C. N. Sulman, H. Campbell, Thos. Ritchie, R. J. Bell, George Thompson, W. W. Pope, R. S. Bell, George Leavens, W. W. Power. Yachts used by the officials were Kismet, Nellie Cuthbert, Curlew, Iolanthe, Norah.

AMONG THOSE who watched the fast trains flash by Sunday at Napanee was Ezra Pringle, one of the oldest inhabitants of that section, who seventy-four years ago walked several miles to see the first passenger train on the Grand Trunk railway pass through Napanee. Then the engine was a small wood burner drawing three coaches. Compared to the immense engines and luxurious equipment for train travel today the little train of seventy-four years ago would seem very small and plain. To Mr. Pringle the thrill of seeing the first passenger train seventy-four years ago would be infinitely greater than any possible thrill of today, in an age so surfeited with surprises that nothing thrills any more.

UPPER BRIDGE is standing up well apparently under the increased traffic caused by closing of lower bridge. Thursday afternoon three buses followed each other over the bridge Toronto bus, Trenton bus and Rawson bus, going west, while the Kingston bus coming east followed close after. With an unroken stream of traffic, autos and busses crossing at once the old bridge is holding up a tremendous tonnage.

NEW PORTFOLIOS CREATED KING INFORMS HOUSE

Separate Minister of Fisheries—Interior Department Abolished

MERGER IS PROVIDED

Immigration and Indian Affairs Under One Supervision in Future

Ottawa, May 3.—Further indication of a nearby election was seen in the House of Commons Friday, when Premier Mackenzie King forecast a cabinet re-organization involving the creating of a ministry of fisheries, the abolition of the interior portfolio and the merging of the present departments of immigration and Indian affairs into a new portfolio concerned largely with Western matters.

Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, is now acting Minister of both Immigration and Agriculture. This, Mr. King pointed out, adding significantly: "I hope it will not be long before we have a separate minister to the future but to have one minister look after these several branches."

Since the appointment of Hon. Robert Forke to the Senate, there has been no Minister of Immigration. The present Minister of Agriculture, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, has been absent through illness many months and it has been confidently reported that he would become Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan. If his department were abolished such might at last be his assignment.

The arrangement, Premier King observed, would not involve any increase in the number of Ministers, whose numbers would be maintained at 16 with portfolios as one — Senator Raoul Dandurand—without.

In announcing the Cabinet re-organization, Mr. King said that so far the name of the nominee for the new fish eries portfolio, but he let no word slip Hon. Dr. J. H. Manion, Conservative, asked if it was to be Dr. Cyrus MacMillan of McGill.

"I would like to take the House into my confidence," Mr. King replied, "but I will have to postpone that to a later date."

"Will it be a Maritimes man?" inquired R. K. Smith (Cons., Cumberland).

"On that question, also, I would like to reserve any expression of my views at the present time," was the Prime Minister's answer.

The brief discussion was precipitated by Mr. King's moving of resolutions regarding the appointment. These were passed and first reading was given the enabling bill.

In presenting the motion, Mr. King stated that in accordance with the recommendations of the 1928 report on fisheries, the Government intended divorcing the Departments of Marine and Fisheries which at present comprise one portfolio under Hon. P. J. A. Cardin. It was proposed to have a Minister of Marine and a Minister of Fisheries, he said.

Emphasizing the importance of the Fisheries Department, the Premier stated that the country in the world had better fisheries than Canada, with her vast ocean and fresh-water fishing grounds. Fishing ranked second in value among the nation's industries.

SINCLAIR'S

FORTUNE FACES 30 BY $3,000,000 WILL

Lindsay, May 3.—Thirty residents of this vicinity are suddenly confronted with the prospect of sharing a $3,000,000 estate left by the late John Whalen, lawyer, of New York.

Allan T. Lacey, local barrister, has received instructions from the trustees of the estate to locate relatives of the dead millionaire, who was born at Vroomanton, a small place 16 miles west of here.

It is understood that after $1,000,000 had been left to Cardinal Hayes for educational purposes the balance of the estate under the will was to be divided among first cousins, none of whom can be located.

Now Allan Lacey is trying to find second cousins of whom some 30 reside in Lindsay or its vicinity. They include, Mrs. Thos. Collins, Lindsay; Bernard McCeough, of Ops; James Callahan, of Reaboro; Mrs. George Murphy, Lindsay; Mrs. Edward Sostello, Downeyville; Mrs. Frank Kirley, of Ops; Mrs. G. O'Connell, of Peterboro; D. Kehoe, of Brechin, and Thos. and William Whalen, of Ops.

WILL PRESERVE HISTORIC SITES

Upper Canada Fortifications to Be Made Attractive

Kingston, Ont., May 3—The burning of the old blockhouse on St. Helen's Island in Montreal harbor last week recalls to the older generation the blockhouses that were to be seen in Ontario until recent years. The one at Montreal was built by Vaudreuil as a protection against the Indians in 1760 the last year the French held Canada. When Frontenac established a fort on the site of the present city of Kingston in 1673 and ending French rule this was built, blockhouses were constructed and were connected by a stockade. Those old blockhouses long since have disappeared, but during the War of 1812-14 the British built a system of blockhouses at Kingston as a protection against invasion from the United States.

The blockhouses were five in number, and at last, which was at the northeast end of Sydenham street still appeared about 1915, just a century after it was constructed. The historical society of the city made an effort to get the city council to purchase it for the sum of $500 as a memento, but the aldermen of that time could not see eye to eye with the historians, and so the blockhouse was razed for the valuable oak in it. The blockhouse had a stone foundation, while the upper was of huge oak timbers. It was originally armed with carronades of six, 18 and 24- pound calibre.

At Kingston Mills, six miles east of Kingston, there is the remnant of a blockhouse which was years ago turned into a residence. It is at the end of the small bridge which crosses over the Rideau canal (Cataraqui river) running from Kingston to Ottawa.

There appears to be a great movement on foot throughout Ontario to preserve what remains of old Upper Canada fortifications and other places of historic interest. Kingston's municipal and local bodies, together with the Historical Society and the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, are sponsoring a movement here to mark historic sites hereabouts and to put old Fort Henry in repair for use as a national shrine. Old Fort Wellington at Prescott has been kept in a fine state of repair and it is regularly visited by tourists. With the tremendous influx of tourists from the United States, Canadian bodies are seeing the value of preserving the nation's historic places.

The provincial highway No. 2 passes right by Fort Henry at Kingston and Fort Wellington at Prescott. Only one block from it in Kingston is the little building in which the first Executive Council of Upper Canada met in 1792 with the Colonel Sir John Simcoe presiding. The highway on turning out of Kingston and heading for Montreal passes right across the site of the fort which Frontenac built in the days of French regime in Canada.

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY

Gladys Johnson

That night, when Ah Ling had left, Ardeth went to the little alley in the rear of the shop.

The quick Winter night had fallen. It was black and cold in there. Tall lofty buildings frowned down on two sides. The end of the blind alley was formed by her own little shop.

Ardeth had left the night lamp burning in the rear room and now she pressed her face to the window pane where the panes had worn thin.

Objects in the room were plainly visible through the pink light. Anyone in there would be recognisable to one watching from the alley.

Just so had Cyril Underhill stood peering in, that night Ken had come down here, broken and lonely. He had watched that impassioned scene. He had seen Ken leave in the early morning hours.....

The girl closed her eyes for a moment and shivered.

The thought was like a snake coiled in her path. She repainted the window panes. She hung heavy curtains before it and drew them close at night. But she could not draw a curtain over that disquieting knowledge in her own mind.

Courage Goes

The venerous attack left her panting self-conscious. She dreaded attending to the store the next day. She flushed when even a customer glanced at her. Something of defiant courage gone from her. She tried to gain it back by lashing herself with self-scorn.

She had told Tom that she was unafraid. Had told that to Mary, and, here she was, in panic at the first thrust of a coward's sword.

She looked at her own white reflection in the mirror with disdainful eyes. That was right—let a lie make her look guilty! Was that the sort of thing pride was fashioned of? Then she deserved to suffer! Whipping up her courage with contempt—hot thoughts seething behind a cold pride, struggling back to a measure of self control.

At four the next afternoon, the phone rang. She found herself mute and trembling at the sound of Ken's voice.

"Ardeth—have you seen this week's Spy? That thing—about us?"

Without waiting for her reply he went on in hot rage. "God, what a rotten thing! If I could get my hands on that beast.... whoever it is! Don't you care, sweetheart! Everyone who knows you will know it's just another of the dirty lies. I'm going down to the printer. I'll find out who that sneak is and he'll print a retraction on the front page or I'll twist his head off!"

She had suddenly galvanized into life. She was clinging to the phone saying in a frantic voice, "No! No, Ken! Listen to me—you mustn't do that! Don't you see—it would only make more talk. It would get in the daily papers—it will be dreadful! Oh, don't you see?"

Ken In a Rage

"Ardeth, do you know who The Spy is?" Ken's tone was grim.

She shook her head violently, as though he could see her. Shook it until the hair flapped against her face.

"No! Of course not! But you mustn't try to find out! Can't you see —to take notice of it would show that we recognized ourselves. Even Ah Ling saw that..... she said that....."

"But I'm not going to let some rank pet away with that! I'm going to find out somehow and when I do—"

"Ken! Ken!" she was imploring now, "you must listen to me. Please —please! Don't you see, you can't get him for what he wrote. Not legally. He said you left here late. It's true. He can prove it. And if you fight him —why it will just set people to talking. They'll think what they please, anyway. Don't you see, dear?"

She was crying in her earnestness.

The man was still for a moment, only singing emptiness coming over the wire to her. When he spoke again the fire had gone from his voice—he sounded very tired.

"But to have to sit helpless while some one stabs us in the back....."

"It's the only thing we can do with safety!"

Another long moment, and when he spoke again his voice was beaten.

"Whatever I do seems to hurt you, Ardeth. I just bring you trouble and unhappiness. It's like the old idea of Greek tragedy. No matter how well intentioned a fellow may be—no matter how he may struggle to go in one direction, he's predestined to go the other way. I'm sorry, Ardeth. It's all I can say. I shouldn't have come that night. A rotten thing to do..... to get you into my own mess. Forgive me."

Mary Is Consulted

"Oh—of course! Of course!" She was crying.

"Well..... Good-by. I want to see you, of course but it's too dangerous. But I had to talk to you. Good-by, sweetheart."

"Ken!" she cried. But the click on the wire told her that he had hung up.

She replaced the receiver. Looked about the room with vacant eyes as one coming out of a daze. Fortunately, there was no one in here.

She went swiftly to the rear room. Washed her hot face. Patted it with the powder puff. She found herself wondering how Ken had discovered the article.

She was not to find out the answer to that until she went out to see Mary Eastwood later in the week.

Fred was out of town on business and Ardeth and Mary had a light and early dinner with the Chickadees in the nursery. It was not until they had returned to the living room—the violently protesting Chickadee having been put to bed—that Ardeth found an opportunity to open the subject.

"You saw The Spy for this week, Mary?"

Indicreet But Human

Mary reached back a lazy tanned arm and pulled the cord of the bridge lamp. The room sank to a warm glow of firelight out of which Mary's rich voice rose scarcely.

"I was wondering when you were going to come to that, Ard. Oh, yes, be sure your good friends dismissed it plenty! Phyllis Hawkins and Maida Durant had a copy when I saw them down at the hairdresser's—the same woman marcels us, you know. Though I will say for Phil that she was pretty indignant. Once she had her own toes stepped on in the same way and it knocked a lot of charity into her."

Ardeth's voice trembled. "It was a cowardly thing! But in a way it's true, Mary. Not of course the way it tried to make out—but—but—Ken did come down....." She told of that visit and Mary listened, the firelight glowing on her steady black eyes.

"Indiscreet but darned human," was Mary's comment at the end of the recital. "Of course it was Cecile told Ken about it. She reads the miserable paper every week, you know."

Ardeth's face went cold. "You think that—that she saw it?"

"Why if I'd been there and Lord what a beautiful rave she must have pulled!" breathed Mary fervently.

I came home late for supper last night, and when the master ex-scorn of pop being still later so they hadent started yet, and by the time pop came in cook, Debora was mad she was tawking to herself and slamming down lids and things, saying, How can a person work 18 hours like cook, a person quite a well werk for a wild tribe of savages and cannibils, no reglar hours, meals one time today and another time tomorrow till a body is distracted entirely.

NAME DIRECTORS FOR ASSOCIATION

Belleville Amateur Athletic Directord to Select Officers

Another enthusiastic meeting of the Belleville Amateur Athletic Association was held in the city hall last night with a splendid attendance. Considerable business was transacted and all indications point to a successful future for the organization. The formation of the association is a new departure in Belleville in the sport line.

The following directors were named at those nominated, S. B. Burrows, Harold Legate, Dr. V. Blakslee, J. B. Ryan, E. V. Illsley, Joe Sheriff and M. F. Duff.

The prime idea in forming the Association is the government of all amateur athletics in the city. Each director will have charge of certain sports, he will choose his committees and all clubs will be under the jurisdiction of the chairman. The clubs will control their own affairs, finances, etc., and the association will more by assist in the different branches.

There appears to be a misconstrued idea in many quarters that the association will handle directly all funds clubs but this is an erroneous view. The parent body will not interfere with the individual clubs in any of city clubs but this is an erroneous sport. It is proposed to sponsor Junior leagues in baseball and hockey in order to give the younger element an opportunity to learn the games for which they are adapted. The Association will administer and assist where clubs are not functioning properly.

Mr. Bryson C. Donnan was in the chair last night while Mr. C. C. Fraleck acted as Secretary. Mr. Donnan said that a membership campaign was imperative in order to put the organization on a successful working bays and various proposals were submitted. The directors will call a meeting short ly to formulate plans for a campaign

Membership cards will be sold for $2.00 which will entitle all holders to privileges of the association,

If the association is to be a success the citizens must cooperate with the directors. Stan Burgoyne will likely be here to coach the local hockey teams next winter and every effort will be made to turn out a first class team.

It was the unanimous opinion of the meeting that association get behind the local baseball club in the Central League. Several suggestions were advanced as to governing sport in Belleville and another meeting will be held shortly to open the membership drive.

LEAFS FINISH DEFEATS BIRDS

Montreal Score Third Straight Victory Over Newark

Newark, May 3—Montreal scored its third straight victory over the Newark Bears in a free hitting contest. The final score was 13 to 9.

Seven pitchers saw service in the lengthy struggle, four for Newark and three for Montreal. The home team outhit the Canadians, 15 to 13, but the Royals made better use of their blow?.

Baltimore, May 3— The Toronto Leafs grabbed some of the Orioles' stuff in the opening game of the series They found themselves knotted in the ninth and proceeded to stage a four-run push to win out, 10 to 6. This was a cruel shock to the birds for they had just recently reached the conclusion that this late-inning rally business was their own stuff.

It was a grand and glorious finish for the Leafs. Cole opened the ninth by dropping the ball in right field for a Texas leaguer and his third hit of the afternoon. Richardson cracked a double and Wertz was rushed to the mound by Fritz Maisel.

And Wertz promptly passed Joe Harris, who had been a thorn in the side of the Oriole receivers all afternoon. That charity filled the bases and Art Ruble was injected into the fray in a pinch-hitting role. Arthur, batting for Petrie, smoked a hit through the box and Cote and Richardson galloped home.

READING, May 3.—Buffalo again overwhelmed Reading, 17 to 3, to take the third game on the series.

For the second straight day the Bisons pounded out 22 base hits. Among yesterday's 22 hits were eight doubles, four triples and one home run.

Heinie Batch hit for the circuit in the ninth with one on base. Three Reading pitchers were pounded for the victory.

Jersey City, May 3—Jersey City won its fourth straight game here defeating Rochester for the third consecutive time by a score of six to three.

ORANGEVILLE QUITS PASTURE

Orangeville, May 3.—Said to relate the famous Dufferins will not be represented in the O.A.L.A. this year, despite much talk for the past two months. There is ample material here for a fast intermediate team, a number of men willing to devote their time to a club but no one has so far arrived with the bag of money and as that is the most necessary part, things pertered out. Idlyeyal Park, the beautiful lacrosse grounds of the Dufferins, is in splendid condition, but still likely be rented for new pasture to pay the taxes. The players who are permanent residents here will likely play with Brampton and Perga.

Owners, New Buyers, Prospects call it Value of Values

The greatest appeal of the New Essex Challenger is dollar-for-dollar value. That is the opinion of owners, new buyers and prospects everywhere.

What Men Say:

"I bought Essex because it stands out in its field with distinctive value, appearance and performance."

"I want a car to be proud of—and Essex is it. In masterful get-away, hill-climbing and road-ability it surpasses everything. And its appearance and economy are as fine as money can buy."

What Women Say:

"My car must be as much a matter of pride as my clothes or my home. Essex satisfies that requirement in every way. For me there is no other choice."

"Just as proud of my new Essex as of the $3,000 car I also bought. It is easy to drive, and in performance and comfort equals any car I ever owned."

You are invited to drive the New Essex Challenger. You will learn why everyone proclaims it the greatest dollar-for-dollar value.

TRENTON AND DISTRICT

TRENTON COTTON MILLS THRIVING

Material is Shipped Mostly to Texas—Costly Machinery

Trenton, Ont., May 2 (Special by Staff Reporter)—One of Trenton's thriving industries of which little has been heard is the Trent Cotton Mills a subsidiary of the Hamilton Cotton Company, and formerly the Dominion Combing Mills. This energetic company has been working steadily for the past eight months, since it was opened as the Trent Cotton Company, and has employed over one hundred men for most of that time. Gradually now, according to reliable information, a night shift will be worked in, until the plant is running a full twenty four hours a day.

Some extremely expensive and intricate machinery is installed in this mill, and of course only skilled operators know how to run the machines, and although others are being taught all the time how to do this, it can readily be seen that this is a rather slow process. By autumn of this year, however, the plant should be running at its full capacity.

The cotton which is made into yarn at Trenton is shipped here for the most part from Texas, although some does come from Oklahoma. It reaches the mill in large bales, and then is put through the machines which comb it into yarn. After the process at the Trenton factory, ot is shipped to Hamilton where it it woven into fabrics. This is one of Trenton's most stable industries, and before long close to two hundred men will be employed there.

NEW PROFESSIONAL INSTRUCTOR HERE

Trenton, Ont., May 3 (Special by Staff Reporter)—Mr. Johnston McCrath, new golf professional at the Trenton Golf Club, has the links in fine shape now for the season's play, and many ardent fans of the hit and miss game have been out already. Mr. McGrath comes here from Hamilton, and seems to know how to care for a golf course, as well as instruct the new players. Last year's "pro" is now at Napanee Golf Club. Some interesting matches are in the offing for the clubs in this district, and the tournaments will likely be starting within the next month or six weeks. Trenton has developed some fine players and this year the club expects to have its biggest and best season.

CADETS PREPARE FOR INSPECTION

Collegiate Boys Out Twice a Week to Learn Drills

Trenton, Ont., May 3 (Special by Staff Reporter)—Captain Webster, of Kingston, who has charge of Military District No. 3 has announced that inspection day for Trenton Collegiate cadets will be May 29th this year. This date is somewhat later than ordinary, but was made necessary by the inclement weather which put back the drill considerably.

Twice a week the Collegiate Cadets turn out for drill and by the inspection date they should be ready to give a good account of themselves. In addition to the ordinary Cadet corps, the Trenton cadets have a fine bugle band of nine pieces, six buglers and three drummers which helps greatly in the drilling. It is likely that the Public School cadets will be inspected on the morning of the 29th and the Collegiate lads in the afternoon.

The Collegiate cadets are made up of one company in command of C. O. John Procter, and Lieutenants John Langdon, M. Aylsworth, G. Weaver and R. Johnston are in charge of the various platoons. R. Langdon is second in command and H. Corbett is Company sergeant major.

FIRE BRIGADE WAS OUT FOR A RUN

Trenton, Ont., May 3—(Special by Staff Reporter)—Trenton's Fire brigade had a run about eleven o'clock yesterday morning at the cottage vacated by Mr. Ross on Scott Street, but fortunately the blaze, which had started between the chimney and the outside frams of the house, had been subdued for the most part before their arrival. The fire fighters made sure that every thing was all right before leaving, however.

TRENTON'S VITAL STATISTICS GIVEN

Trenton, Ont., May 3 (Special by Staff Reporter)—Vital statistics for the month of April in this town are as follows—Births 6, marriages 3, deaths 7. The deaths occurred for the most part among older citizens of Trenton. The marriages all of after the seventeenth of April, there being none after that date, but many are perhaps waiting for the "marriage month" of June to take the plunge. During March there were eight births and as many deaths.

Thirty Graduate from Collegiate

Trenton, Ont., May 3 (Special by Staff Reporter)—May the 19th is the closing day for Trenton Collegiate, and departmental examinations for the Lower School will be held on the 11th and 12th. The Middle and Upper school examinations will commence after the 18th and will continue to the end of the month, so that the majority of students will not be away from the city until the last week of June at least. There are at present about two hundred and fifty students at Trenton Collegiate, with a graduating class of almost thirty.

Home and School Club's Bazaar

Trenton, Ont., May 3(Special by Staff Reporter)—The College Street Home and School club held an all day bazaar in the town hall today, and judging from the crowds which were in the building this morning, it should be a real success. Afternoon tea was served to the guests and all the other things usually found at a bazaar were there.

The regular meeting of the Dufferin Street School Home and School association will be held at eight o'clock on Monday evening next, and a fine program has been arranged. It is expected that a large number will be in attendance.

WROTE HER WORK UNDER HANDICAP

Albuquerque, N.M., May 2. — The body of Norma Mann, who wrote the novel, Dark Star, a best seller, under the physical handicap of tuberculosis, will be taken to Los Angeles for cremation. She died at an Albuquerque sanitorium.

At one time one of the best-known scenarists in Hollywood, Miss Mann achieved literary prominence about five years ago with the novel—a tragic tale of a girl disappointed in love — the setting of which was laid in Scotland, her native country.

She wrote her book under the most trying conditions—an illness which kept her in bed two out of every three years since she was a child. But her courageous efforts won for her the goal she had determined to reach.

In an interview from her sick bed shortly after the novel was published and achieved by critics, Miss Mann said:

"I don't want people to be sorry for me. Why should I? I find living is a horizontal position for two years after being perpendicular for a year, actually interesting."

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

CHAPTER VIII

Some Things I have Known Cannibal Birds to Do!

Now, dear reader, I am well aware of the fact that my book would be more popular if I left these questions out. I am like yourself, I wish I had nothing to say but good about every bird, for I love to see them. But remember, what I am telling in this book is what I know about nature, so please don't jump on me with both feet for telling the truth.

First of all let me say that the larger the hawk, the more anxious the majority are to shoot him. This is a mistake. It is the medium-sized hawk that is the worst. The sparrow-hawk is still smaller, and he is hard on fledgling birds as bobolinks and song sparrows. Yes, I know they will eat grasshoppers, but these are usually eaten by the young birds; the adult sparrow-hawk lives chiefly on mice and small birds.

When I raised pheasants I always made a "hide" where I could lay for the little chicks' enemies. One day I fed my chicks at one p.m.; when I returned at four-thirty I tapped the tin to call them and only seven out of the seventeen little bearers came and they were on their tiptoes, shy and frightened. My first thought was, "a weasel," but when I saw Mrs. Hen turn her head sidewise and look up, I called to my boy to bring the shotgun and a couple of loads of No. 6. I soon was in the "hide," and the boy had scarcely got in the house when I heard the old hen say "k-i-i-i-i," meaning "die low," so I took her advice, and in about five seconds a sparrow-hawk came down out of the heavens like a bullet—too fast for me. Before I could get the gun on him he was on the ground. He saw me and missed his bird; and when he was about four feet in the air again I just lifted him with a load of shot. The next morning we went over to the woods and destroyed the other old one and the young, and found remnants of some of the young pheasants. Now this hawk killed and carried away ten of those little chick pheasants in less than four hours. These little pheasants were about ten days old. After pheasants get to be the size of a small quail or mourning dove, sparrow-hawks will not take them. Many a small hawk have I fooled by taking a little dead pheasant and running a wire through him, standing up in a natural position on a steel trap, letting Mr. Hawk come down out of the air and help himself. I have often caught owls in this same way.

I could go on and on, relating such experiences that you got hungry. But remember, the sparrow-hawk is only one. The worst are yet to come, the Cooper's, the sharp-shinned, and the goshawk; these three are just like bullets in the air. But while the pheasants are tiny the sparrow-hawk is the worst, because it is more numerous. To any person who might think of raising pheasants for profit let me say that unless you first study how to destroy weasels, barn rats, stray house cats and cannibal birds you had better give up the business a week or so before you start. Remember, when hawks are driven to it by hunger they will kill and eat each other, and owls will do the same; I have known dozens of cases of this in my life.

There are two large hawks I never destroy, the Red Tail and the Red Shoulder. They are too big and clumsy to be very destructive on our birds. When these two varieties get in my traps I usually label them with an aluminum band and let them go; but strange to say, I have never heard from one of these in my life. I know they will kill a clumsy barnyard fowl or rat, and they will also kill snakes; so I say of them as Pilate said, "I find no fault" with these fellows.

I spend a lot of my life burning brick and drainage at night, and during the summer months it is very interesting to see the toads come before the light of the fires and catch insects. The snakes that these big-hawks eat, kill the toads; and I don't like snakes, even if they are not in my boots.

Now this innocent-looking little screech-owl! Just last summer I went over to the martin house one morning to see what was wrong with them, and here were three or four helpless fledglings flapping on the ground, and the old ones hovering at the house as if it were a bear pest. Well, to be brief, we killed nine screech-owls in less than two weeks, but not until they had killed and driven all our martins away for that year. At a screech-owl's nest I once found my hat-full of remnants of blue jays, young robins' wings and feet, one quail, one sparrow and English sparrow feathers. In another case a screech-owl went through the two-inch mesh wire netting and killed a dozen pheasant hens for me and ate their throat out. This owl only weighed three and one-half ounces. A doctor in the town of Leamington once called me in to see what had killed his golden pheasant hen that was setting on twelve eggs. The pen was made of two-inch mesh netting. I at once said it was a screech-owl and showed him how, I knew. He then told me he harbored screech-owls in and around his barns to kill the English sparrows. Another man I knew kept a screech-owl in his barn to kill the sparrows, and he was puzzled to know what killed his tame pigeons.

The screech-owl is just a miniature horned owl, both in looks and habits. But I have never had my wits tried more with any bird than I have with the Great Horned Owl. On one occasion one of these winged brutes came and apparently just got his toes pinched in a trap; and night after night he sprung the traps and took a hen pheasant. This went on until he had taken twelve. Then I put on fur overcoat and hidden a bed of robes out in the "hide" which I always kept ready in the enclosure; and there I lay in that bright moonlit, stinging-cold, zero night. At last I saw an owl hovering over the ground, and fortunately for me he got fooled; he came to examine the decoys near me and while his attention was riveted on them I raised up and fired, and he never knew what hit him. When I went to the house it was three a.m. I usually catch twelve to fifteen of these owls every winter.

Remember, when he comes and gets a bird he will eat what he wants of it and come back the following night for a new one.

But now these cannibals locate other birds for miles and miles across the country is a mystery. Yet if we go down in the field and find a beef on a hot summer's day, the turkey buzzards will be here in less than one-half hour. Where did these vultures come from? You perhaps have not seen one for a month. How did they know you were killing a beef? This question may be just as much in place as: How do the hawks and owls find their prey?

The great horned owl nests in the winter or early, early spring, building in a cavity of a tree or a crow's or hawk's nest. They lay two pure white eggs, round like a turtle's eggs, about the size of an ordinary barnyard fowl's or a shade smaller. I have got the nest as early as the first day in February, when old Mrs. Owl was setting. The female horned owl is larger than the male; she will weigh about four pounds and as a wing-spread of fully fifty inches.

Now I know there are a lot of people who protect these cannibal-birds because they kill mice. Yes, they do kill mice. But it takes cruel cuts and dozens of our industrious and weed-destroying birds to raise one owl. I claim that the good one robin or quail does, in one day, overbalances the harm a dozen mice will do.

Now we come to the crow and bronze grackle, the largest blackbird. These two birds raise their young chiefly on the eggs of other birds. Why this is, I won't pretend to say, nor will I attempt to throw a ray of light upon it, but will frankly confess I do not understand. Possibly it has come about through man's interference with their natural habits.

The crow was the first bird I hunted in earnest, as we thought they pulled our corn. I went to the woods and located their nests, and soon I became sure enough to imitate the call of the young; then I had Mr. Crow beaten. I would first destroy the young if possible, then hide in the green bushes and caw quietly as I had heard the young do, and dozens of crows have brought their food to the wrong baby. Yes, I have even gone so far as to call them right down into the small trees so as to make a very light load of ammunition do the work, as it cost money to buy powder and shot in those days. Now comes more of what we don't want to hear. What were these crows feeding their young on? Crawfish, pollywogs, small frogs, grubs, etc.; but seventy-five per cent of their food that these old crows would vomit up as they struck the ground was eggs. It was these old black rascals that taught me what to raise fledglings on, and it is just as easy for me, now, to raise a young bird on custard as it would be to raise a row during a political campaign.

I am going to tell you some pitiful things. I have seen young, unhatched robins spued out of a dying crow's mouth, and the little things were still alive. Whether the eggs were broken in her throat before I shot her or not, I do not know, but they were broken when thrown up. Yes, they will take blackbirds' eggs just as quick as they will the robins', and other, weaker birds' if they have the opportunity; but the robin does seem to be their choice, possibly because he does not conceal his nest better. Yet I was hunting the crows because they pulled our corn! In all my life I never knew a crow to bring corn to her young. Yes, I have shaken as high as seven little, unhatched birds out of a gasping crow's mouth, and any one of these creatures, if left to Nature, would do as much good as a crow. If you want to trap a crow use hens' eggs for bait, but bear in mind he is cute, and you must conceal the trap very carefully.

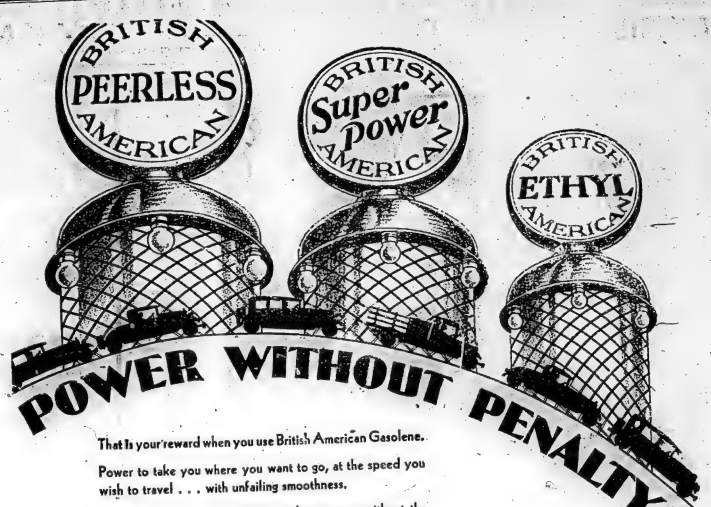
GREAT ORCHESTRA LEADER NOW BROADCASTS HIS ART

Walter Damrosch, the famous conductor of the New York symphony orchestra, and now with the National Broadcasting Company, has probably done as much as any other man in America to introduce good music to this continent. He is now in his sixty-eighth year, and his voice has become familiar to music-lovers throughout the continent through the medium of the radio. He believes that the radio is working miracles because it carries the best music to every home in America and to the schools.

The famous conductor, however, did not throw his taste for music over board when he began to broadcast, and he is severe, sometimes, in speaking of some of the so-called music that comes over the ether waves.



Much of it, he says, is not music at all. It is merely trash. This type of music he thinks, will go the way of jazz. Mr. Damrosch thinks that good music has not been popular in America because it was not understood. Classical music, he says, has been looked upon by the masses as not being understandable, and with that idea in their minds the common people looked askance at the beautiful productions of such composers as Bach, Beethoven and Handel.

Mr. Damrosch is not an American by birth. He was born in Breslau, his father being a physician who had taken to violin playing. And the elder Damrosch had more than ordinary talent, for he played under the baton of the immortal Liszt. The mother of Mr. Damrosch was also musical, taking a leading part in Wagner's "Lohengrin". The son of such parents, Walter soon became interested in art, and once thought he would go in for painting. But the call of music was too strong, and while still a boy studied under the great masters of Eur ope.

As a conductor and composer he has probably no equal in America. When he began his career good music was only for the rich and sophisticated of the United States, and he got his support chiefly from the wealthy New Yorkers who lived on Fifth Ave. But his genius was recognized, and with each year that passed his followers became more numerous and the appeal of good music spread farther afield. The name of Walter Damrosch became associated with the name of good music in every form, and with his help splendid symphony orchestras sprang up in the larger cities of the United States.

Now these great orchestras are able to broadcast their music, and it is fitting that Walter Damrosch is at the controls which release the new and broader stream. It delights the old master to know that the best musical productions of the ages are being wafted to the farm-houses of America, as well as to the mansions of the cities, and it is peculiarly fitting that his voice should introduce, to the masses, the lovely musical productions that have been his pride and joy during the past forty years.

"The polo players, who shot a burglar the other day?"

CHAPTER XXIX

She had forgotten that. She had forgotten every thing but Chris. Her heart leaped with inanimate fear, but she answered carelessly enough:

"That's the man."

"And you met him in the office?"

Mary Kate's head jerked an assent as she shielded her shoulder.

"What'd he do? Try to make love to you?"

"No; he never touched me. He merely said a word——like that, I mean."

"O-h-h?" Cass said, in a different, a lighter, tone. Whatever dawning suspicions he had entertained were allayed. "How often did you see him?" he asked.

"Three times," Mary Kate answered after a moment's considering. "Twice in the office,' she thought, 'and once more to cover all that other time."

Cass laughed.

"You saw him three times, and he never said a word about love," he sum marized it.

"Well, yes—he did say something about love," she remembered. "He even said something about—well, falling in love with me. But it was only in fun. It was sort of—about how funny it would be——something like that."

The man ruminated upon this for some moments, and Mary Kate, closed her eyes again She heard Christopher's voice saying that her guess was grand, that she was a swell——

"Mary, Mary, Mary—" It was a beautiful name. It had a hundred times the dignity of "Mary Kate."

He might come, into the office to-morrow; he might stand there, looking at her, smiling at her. They might have five minutes talk. It was all that she wanted, all she needed——

"And you go to a sort of crush on him?" Cass ahed, sm.oothly.

"I suppose that's it."

"But you don't know one thing about him, Mary Kate!"

"I know."

"Look. You might hate him."

"I might." There had been moments she remembered—when she had thought that she already hated him.

"But then what makes you think you have a crush on him?"

"Me——why, I feel Cass," Mary Kate said earnestly. She tried to tell somebody, she couldn't tell anyone else. "If I hadn't met him, I'd think I was sick," she resumed, with a shamed laugh, "because most of it is just feeling sick—hot and dry and cold and shaky——well, just made to wild sentiments, all the time. I'd not think it had anything to do with——with him except that it's worse when I think of him——the way his voice sounds——the way he looks——"

Cass had squared about to face her in the dark. Now he said, in an altered voice, a speculative, deliberate voice,

"Say you have got it!"

"I've got——something," Mary Kate confessed, with an unhappy laugh.

"You've felt like that before?" the man questioned.

A silence. Then she said simply:

"Never in my life before."

Cass fell silent now, too. He got up from the davenport, and went to the light, and turned it higher. A flickering half-haunted illumination wavered on the ugly walls, shabby chairs and curtains. The man lighted a cigarette.

He came back to the davenport, but sat apart from her now, twisted about to face her, the cigarette in his fingers.

"Listen Kate," he said. "I had thought I might have had trouble like this before in high school."

"I never did," she perplexed steadily.

"Mary Kate," Cass said, in what, considering his young confidence in his masculine power to handle all her problems as well as his own, was a new strangely uncertain voice, "you didn't——I meant when we were so happy last week—when I was so crazy about you——as God knows I am now——you didn't feel that sort of feeling then?"

Her passive hand lay in his; she rais ed her troubled eyes, spoke apathetically.

"I think that's what I'm trying to tell you, Cass."

"That's the way I felt about you," he said humbly.

"I know," Mary Kate's voice was al most inaudible.

"Every telephone means you to me," the man went on.

"Oh, I know!" Oh, voice of Chris, somewhere out in the spring night, where were you now? Her heart began to hammer again. He must not wait next Sunday, until she had a chance to talk to him, once—only.

Cass was speaking. She could hear his voice, but not the words.

"Where's he staying, Mr. Steynes?" "I didn't hear you."

"Is this Mr. Steynes, or whatever his name is, staying in San-Mateo?"

"Burlingame."

Then there was a long silence. Mary Kate had closed her eyes again, and was leaning back, looking spent and limp. But there was a sudden narrowing, a sudden speculative light, in Cass' eyes.

Cass and Mary Kate followed the wooden path to the side fence, and hung there, staring at the side street. The great cigarette sign loomed and flashed and faded, off to the north; and the footsteps and the chatter of pleasure-by were sharp in the motion plane and silence. Some were hurrying of church, for Lenten services, and some moving even faster toward the flaring rinks and dance pavilions of Butter Street. A movie theatre, a few blocks away, sent banners and darts of red light up into the dark, and at the drugstore corner a little serpent ran tirelessly about an illuminated pastile and mirror.

Mary Kate could remember leaning on this old fence ever since she could remember anything, tonight. Cass put his arm about her. She stirred uneasily under his embrace.

"Something the matter tonight, dear? Cass was frantic. Suddenly every thing fell to pieces; she could not hold it, it had to come.

"Oh, Cass——I have to tell you. We can't —I don't want to be married dear! Listen. I like you—terribly. But I don't want to get married——"

She spaced the last words, giving them emphasis. She had turned to face him now, and had put an imploring hand on his shoulder.

CHAPTER XXVIII

They could not see each other's faces; they stood so for perhaps a full minute. Then Cass said,

"Well, that's all right, dear. You didn't have to marry me."

Mary Kate laughed excitedly.

"You do understand don't you?" "Why of course I understand! Cass's kind, big-brotherly voice said. "I kind of rushed you, last week. And I knew that what you had wasn't promises; I knew something was worrying you!"

"And you understand?" she repeated feverishly, in the pause.

"Of course I understand. You don't want to be rushed.

"No; that's it. I don't want to be rushed. And you see——" Her voice dwindled away inconsequently. She fingered his coat lapel. "I like this suit——" she began again, swallowing tears, "it's my old brown suit."

"I know." Her words gathered momentum. "But I like it—I think I like it better than the blue!"

"Mary Kate!" he said. "Ah, darling don't!"

"Mary Kate" he said. "Ah, darling don't!"

For she was crying bitterly, in his arms.

delicious joy youth and freshness "I-I-don't know why I'm so-so-co-coing this way, like a ba-ba-baby!"

"You're all upset," Cass murmured, rubbing the top of her head, that smelt and the odd delightful fragrance that always clung to Mary Kate's blazing hair.

"I don't know why ——" she gulped, trying to laugh, clinging to him.

She never had done this before. Cass tightened his arms.

"Maybe you missed your good-for-nothing beau, while you were away?"

"Yes, I did." She withdrew from his arms and fumbled for her handkerchief straightening herself up shaking herself into composure and order. "I'm crazy!" he confessed on a wet, shaken note.

"You're tired. Let's not go anywhere tonight, Mary Kate? Let's go into the front room and talk."

This would keep Tom out of his bed in the adjoining dining-room. But she was so tired! And with the children doing homework, and Mother setting rats in rolls, they could not sit in the kitchen.

They slipped quietly through the dining room, and Mary Kate lighted a bead of gas in the front room. It smelled very close in there and Cass opened the windows. The room was revealed as shabby and small, with an upright piano backed against one wall, and a parlor furniture set consisting of a deep davenport, two gild arm chairs, and a table, almost completing the furniture. A photograph of the late Thomas O'Hara was on a mock-mantel, a great bunch of limp purple ribbons decorating one corner of the frame.

"Tom has piano were scores of careless ly massed sheets of song music. Sometimes a guest slept on the davenport but there was no sign of its night use now; it was shut up, and embellished with two silk pillows.

"Cass, have you got two quarters for four bits?" Mr. O'Hara called from the kitchen.

"I think so!" the boy shouted back, in haste to his secret.

"I'm going to run upstairs, Cass, and wash my face!" Mary Kate went by him in the dimness and Cass went into the kitchen.

She came back to the dim parlor fifteen minutes later, cool and refreshed. At she was still very quiet. She had changed to a soft old house dress, and had assumed comfortable slippers; her hair was damp, brushed childishly off her face, which was quite free of artifice.

They sat down close together on the davenport, and Cass pulled her head to his shoulder, and they both rested her back, their feet touching, stretched out before them on the rug. The gas-bead burned low; occational flaps and angles of light crossed the room from passing motor-cars in the street. The somewhat dingy curtains moved slowly in and out, over the sills of the opened window. From the kitchen came the occasional murmur of the children' voices, Mrs. O'Hara's grave methodic tones in reply, and the clatter of pans and oven door.

"Now let's talk it over," Cass said comfortably. "How about not marrying me?"

Suddenly she was in rebellion again. Her tears, and the application of fresh cold water and soap to her hot face, had rested her. But once again the fever raised her.

"It can wait——" she said deliberately, a tiny edge of her voice.

There was an alarmed note in his, a hurt, reproachful note.

"How do you mean it can wait?"

"Oh, I only think I'm tired," Mary Kate breathed wearily, closing her eyes, tightening her fingers on his.

"But honey, don't you want me when you're tired? Evrhs to me——"

"It's only," she interrupted, "that I dont like to think of myself as engaged."

"Well, as long as you'll marry me next month——" he conceded, in good natured daring.

She was still for a while. Then the tears began to run rapidly down her face, and she whispered without stirring.

"Oh, Cass I'm so unhappy!"

"Ah, dearie, I'm sorry! I've never seen you like this before."

"I've never been like this before." Their heads were lying back against the top of the davenport, their eyes closed in the comforting dark. Cass hardly moved as he said soothingly.

"Well, never you mind. You just lift here with me and cry, if you want to!"

The telephone in the dining room rang, and she was alert, tense.

"Who is it, Regina?" She was halfway to her feet.

"It's a wrong number, Sis!", Mary Kate subsided again, and again there was peace in the stuffy little parlor.

"Like to get on the beach trolley car, and go all the way 'round?"

A long sigh.

"Cass, I'm too tired!"

"All right, then, darling, we'll just sit here."

He was so kind, so gentle. The recognized in herself the unreasonableness of her own impulse to hurt him.

"Who'd you think was telephoning, Mary Kate?"

"What?" Anything for time——

"Who'd you think was at the 'phone, then?"

"Oh? Oh, I was kind of drowsy, I think.",

Smells of dust, upholstery and shabbiness came out of the furniture, and the sweet night breezes through the open windows moved them about, and blew them away.

"Cass——" the girl said suddenly. "I have to tell you. I may get over it, but ——something's the matter with me. It's making me almost crazy. I——ster and over again, of everything he could say to me, or I to him. Everything——terrible, Cass. Everything——bitter. It makes me sick with misery, and yet I wouldn't give it up——"

"What are you talking about?" he asked her again. But without the con

Mary Kate was very still. After a while she said, in a chilled voice:

"Well—I was probably just as bad," Cass said. But as the girl resumed her hurt silence, he added, in a slightly more conciliated and sympathetic tone, "Tell me about it."

"It makes everything wonderful——the streets and the bakeries and the fog, and going to bed and getting up," Mary Kate patiently said, in a dreamin voice. "It marks me want to think——ster and over again, of everything he could say to me, or I to him. Everything——terrible, Cass. Everything——bitter. It makes me sick with misery, and yet I wouldn't give it up——"

"What are you talking about?" he asked her again. But without the con didn't tell me now, and in a rougher tone

"I'm trying to tell you!",

A pause. Then Cass said in a puzzled tone.

"Who is he?"

"He's a New York man," Mary Kate answered unhesitatingly. The joy of speaking of him flowed through her fevered heart and soul like the waters of a cool river.

"Say listen, are you kidding me, Mary Kate?"

"Kidding you!" she echoed, in patient scorn. She was silent a moment. "No, I'm not kidding you," he said simply.

Cass twisted about, to try to see the face that was on her face, But she rosm was too dark.

"Where'd you meet him?"

"In Mr. Rounireee's office."

"Who is he?"

"His names is Steynes. Christopher Steynes."

TOURISTS pick the concrete roads because.....

They help take strain and expense out of motoring

Reduced tire-wear . . . fuel economy . . . safety . . . pleasant driving. No wonder motorists relax . . . and contentedly welcome a stretch of concrete highway.

From the taxpayer's angle, the modern paving is just as desirable. It ends costly upkeep; attracts the tourist; traffic facilitates communication between localities.

Each concrete mile is a permanent mile . . . the communities standardizing on this type of paving are able to devote each year's budget almost en bloc to needed new mileage. Advocate concrete paving . . . and wider highways . . . at every opportunity.

PERMANENT CONCRETE HIGHWAYS

CONDITIONS IN RUSSIA TOLD BY "RED" SOLDIER

Says Communists Are Robbing Peasants on Every Hand; Intend Move

Winnipeg, May 3 (CP)—In the "Ukrainian Voice" weekly, dated April 23, 1930, is published the following interesting letter, written by a soldier in the "Red Army" to his parents:

"I have received lately from the authorities here a letter, already written on the machine, which I had only to rewrite and sign my name to it. In that letter, sent to you, I was compelled to write about the things about the life in the "Red Army", but now I am sending my own letter with request that you may not believe the contents of my former letter to be true. All letters, written by the 'Red Fighters' are false and written not by their own hands.

"Please, dear parents, do not put in the ground next spring not even one more grain than you really need for yourself, neither plow any more land than you really need to. All what you have, bring it tidiously into nothing, for whatever remains—the city-workers will squeeze out of you.

"If you won't put in more grain than you really need for yourself, you will cause the city-workers to go hungry and they, being hungry, might change their attitude toward the peasantry. Communists are planning to take from the peasants everything they have, and this is called by them, 'to shear the rams with their skin'. Let us, peasants, shear ourselves with out them; if we lose wool—our skin at least will be whole, and let the communists shear the workmen, but not the peasants.

"Once here in soldier barracks every thing is being transformed into peasant manner; even the workers start to go against the communists and going with them hand-in-hand. The city begins also to raise its head and to think as we peasants do, so I think we won't have to suffer long, though presently we can not do very much, because the communists are withholding our amunition under the lock and give it to us only during the training hours. In barracks are still reigning for a favorable incident, which probthe communists and we have to wait ably is not far distant."

PREMIER'S NAME ON PATCHWORK QUILT

Toronto, May 3. (CP)—An interesting sequel to the visit of Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald to Toronto has been learned. Mrs. Hamilton, who lives at 21 North Sherbourne street, is a native of Lossiemouth, Scotland, where the Labor Premier was also born, and was acquainted with him and his family in earlier days. At the reception in the Royal York Hotel, Mrs. Hamilton was present. She is actively interested in the Women's Association of Central Presbyterian Church, and with a friend, Mrs. O'Thompson, of Leyden street, was preparing a quilt for raising funds. The method was to obtain names which were sewn on the patches. Taking one of these with her, Mrs. Hamilton invited Miss Isabel to sign her name. The latter put the piece of cloth in her handbag and said she would send it by mail. True to her word, the patch came back to Mrs. Hamilton, bearing not only the lady's signature but in the centre of the cloth was the signature, "J. Ramsay MacDonald".

REPORTERS ATTEND B. OF E. GATHERING

Toronto, Ont., May 1—The general practice in Ontario cities is for newspaper representatives to attend the meetings of standing committees of the board of education. This is disclosed through an enquiry completed by Canadian Daily Newspaper Associations, Toronto, results of which have been promulgated for the information of members. In four or five cases the question of reporters attending does not seem to have been raised. In these cities the press does not attend, but obtains information from the committee chairman of the board.

GENERAL MOTORS OF CANADA, LIMITED, OSHAWA, ONTARIO

GENERAL MOTORS OWNER SERVICE POLICY

FUNDAMENTALS of General Motors OWNER SERVICE POLICY

1. A warranty of 90 days or 4,000 miles (whichever shall occur first) against defects in material or workmanship. This applies to every part of the car, including all original equipment, except tires.

2. Replacements under the warranty are made without any charge to the owner. This applies to labor as well as to material.

3. During the period of the warranty, the owner may change his residence to, or travel in, any part of Canada and the United States—and still enjoy the provisions of the warranty.

4. The owner will be given a free inspection and adjustment, by the dealer from whom he bought his car, at 500 miles, and another at 1,500 miles, providing this mileage is reached before the expiration of the warranty period.

5. After the expiration of the warranty period, an owner requiring service is protected by the use of genuine General Motors parts and a system of flat-rate charges which are fair and reasonable.

GENERAL MOTORS of Canada, Limited, has always realized that no matter how much value it builds into its cars, the final satisfaction of their owners depend upon the service provided by factory and dealer.

Inspired by this realization, General Motors of Canada, Limited, has consistently led the way in broadening the scope of owner service. It pioneered in the establishment of service schools for dealers' mechanics, in the inauguration of "preventive service", and in other equally important developments.

The service leadership of General Motors of Canada, Limited, has never been more evident than in the General Motors Owner Service Policy—the most complete ever made available to Canadian automobile purchasers.

This policy is now in effect for the benefit of buyers of General Motors cars. Not only does it anticipate the quality of service an owner expects after he has bought his car, but it combines with General Motors' standards of sound engineering, rigid supervision and thorough testing, to completely protect your investment in a Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Marquette, Oakland, Viking, McLaughlin-Buick, LaSalle or Cadillac.

As exemplifying this broad service policy, one provision in particular merits the attention of all prospective new car purchasers: It is the clause entitling every owner to the free replacement—by any dealer in Canada or the United States handling the same make of car—of any part (except tires) that proves defective in material or workmanship, within 90 days after delivery, or 4,000 miles of driving, whichever may occur first. This applies to labor as well as to material.

The policy itself takes the form of a written and signed agreement, presented to the purchaser by the General Motors dealer, when the car is delivered. It states in plain understandable language, the definite service to which the owner is entitled. Back of this policy, and assuring its successful operation, is the most complete and efficient service organization in Canada.

There are more than two thousand authorized General Motors parts and service outlets throughout the Dominion. Parts distributing warehouses are maintained by General Motors at Oshawa, Saint John, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver. No matter where you travel in Canada you are not more than a few hours away from a General Motors parts depot.

ONTARIO CLINIC SERIES PLANNED

Condition Appalling at Queen St. Institution Say Officials

Toronto, May 3.—Establishment of a series of clinics throughout Ontario or next Fall to examine all inmates of mental institutions to determine whether by scientific treatment they may regain a place in society and at the same time receive clinical treatment, was announced by Premier Ferguson at a banquet that closed the second annual Canadian conference on social work at the Royal York Hotel last night.

Mental institutions in Ontario house a vast population for which the provincial government should not be responsible and an investigation into immigration methods will be conducted to prevent mentally defective people from entering the country, Premier Ferguson stated.

"Conditions in the Queen street mental hospital in Toronto are appalling," he said. "There are today in that institution 850 to 60 people who are awaiting deportation and who should never have been allowed to enter the country."

If the same proportion is consistent throughout all mental institutions the province is saddled with an annual expenditure of at least $500,000 in support of such persons, the premier continued.

Referring to the Queen Street hospital the Premier said: "There are people there who within a period of two or three years after coming to this country became patients in the hospital and charges on the province. The history of many show they were patients in institutions in the countries from which they came, and there are some who had criminal records in the country from which they emigrated.

"We are going to see whether it is a governmental agency, railway, or steamship company that authorized their entry and we will see that it is stopped."

TRAFFIC HEAVY ON UPPER BRIDGE

The closing of the lower bridge while construction work is going on has increased the traffic at the Upper Bridge that it is with difficulty that pedestrians may cross from one side of the bridge to the other. Coleman street has also come in for its shares of increased traffic and cars are continually passing up and down the streets in an unending line. With the opening of the tourist season the traffic at the Upper Bridge will no doubt increase even more than at present. "No parking" signs have been placed along Coleman street on the right hand side approaching the Upper Bridge and these will no doubt help a great deal when the traffic gets heavy.

STEEL OFFICIALS QUITE PLEASED

President W. C. Franz, of Algoma Steel Co., Quite Satisfied

Sault Ste. Marie, May 3—A spirit of optimism pervade among officials of the Algoma Steel Corporation in connection with the progress of revision of the tariff on steel, though sufficient information has not been given in the city to give them definite information as to the extent to which it will affect the corporation. For this reason they are reticent tonight, but President W. C. Franz and Vice-President and General Manager J. D. Jones both announced that they would have a more or less lengthy statements to make in the morning.

"The situation looks very favorable indeed," Mr. Franz said, "but I am unable to make a statement as to the effect the proposed changes will have on the industry until we have the rates which we expect completed during the week. The rates will have to be gone over carefully and a checkup made. It looks to me as though the steel industry on this side of the border will receive impetus through the proposed tariff, but to what extent I am unable to say, until informed as to the rates. The announcement today makes us very optimistic."

Mr. Franz said that immediately upon the arrival of the schedule he would be prepared to make a detailed statement.

When the proposed reduction of sixty per cent in the construction of a new mill," Mr. Franz was asked.

"A new strip mill has been proposed," Mr. Franz replied, "and it has been discussed at meetings of the tariff board but, as I say, more definite information must be available before I can comment further."

SAYS NOVA SCOTIA LADY OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. Geo. Weatherbee Suffered With Kidney and Bladder Weakness

Greenville, N.S., April 28 (Special) — "I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble," writes Mrs. Geo. Weatherbee, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. "Before my first baby was born I was troubled with kidney and bladder weakness. One day I read in Dodd's Almanac about Dodd's Kidney Pills so I purchased four boxes and they certainly helped me. I can recommend them to all who suffer as I did."

That Mrs. Weatherbee's trouble came from her kidneys is evidenced by the relief she got from Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are purely and simply a kidney remedy. Many women suffer periodically with backache, and as middle age approaches, the pain increases in severity. Rest may give temporary relief, but Dodd's Kidney Pills do much more than this. They strengthen the weak kidneys and remove the cause of the pain.

COWBOY EXPRESSES DISDAIN AT 'GROUP OF SEVEN' EXHIBIT

"Shorty" Campbell Finds Out All About Group of Seven

MODE OF EXPRESSION

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

Toronto, May 3.—"Shorty" Campbell high-hatted and sneered, canada'ds into this city the other day showing signs of great perturbation.

"What's all this fuss I hear about that Group o' Seven?" he said.

"Oh, just a little flurry. The usual thing in Toronto," I replied.

"But why all-fired het up. Do you want to know the gang?" "Gosh, no! I've been hearin' enough chatter on the train from the foothills an' I'd though I'd butt in for more information."

"Better come along and visit the Grange—that's the Toronto art gallery."

"Holy Smoke!" exclaimed Shorty, with a sweeping gesture of his big hat as he stepped inside the central gallery. "Never seen so many pictures in my life before. Was drawed to this neck o' woods by the Group of Seven, who did you expect"

"I dont blame them critics much, if that's the best that seven-up could can do," came back Shorty quickly. "From what I can make from lookin' at 'em, the best way to settle all arguments is to have a bunch of wild horses through this hall. That 'ud fix 'em, eh?" and Shorty laughed delightedly.

"You're travelling altogether too fast." I told him. "These pictures and this whole gallery exhibit performs useful service. Recently Miss Wilson, the official demonstrator for the Grange was explaining the pictures to a fourth form class of forty pupils."

"There is something back of it all," she told me. "The pictures you see here are but fragments of the treasured collection that is ever increasing throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

"For many years the better class of our Canadian artists have sought some mode of expression for the multitude of scenes and types of human subjects which are abound.

World's Fat Suffice

"To have gathered the out-standing efforts of European painters of the older schools of art there would not have sufficed. No establishment of known would serve to describe the tremendous improvements which come with travelling through the forests, in my life before. "To have gathered the out-standing efforts of European painters of the older schools of art there would not have sufficed. No establishment of known would serve to describe the tremendous improvements which come with travelling through the forests, from the older forms of painting. They know that progress in any line demands its price and sacrifices. But they were proud enough, and strong enough and bold enough, to stand together for the artistic principles which they saw quite clearly.

"Open your eyes, and see the whole of Canada, then a part, and still again its people and their ways of living, and the illimitable opportunities that surround us," they advised.

"Sounds mighty good to hear you say it," declared Shorty. "But what about that picture of a bare, burned stump on a barren rock. Where does that goofy-lookin' object creep in on what you been a' saying?"

"Nothing to it," said I. "Do you remember that little pen sketch that Charlie Russell, of Great Falls, drew of the lone cow and her newly born calf, with three hungry wolves sitting on the patchy snow around them?" "Sure I do," said Shorty, in an air of pride at the association. "That was some picture," I continued. "Certainly, anyone could tell that the dead cow is dripping from the biggest wolf's mouth; and that the bony young mother cow was weak from a hard calf, with three hungry wolves sitting on the patchy snow around them?" "Sure I do," said Shorty, in an air of pride at the association. "That was some picture," I continued. "That picture sure told a tale of a hard winter," Shorty interjected.

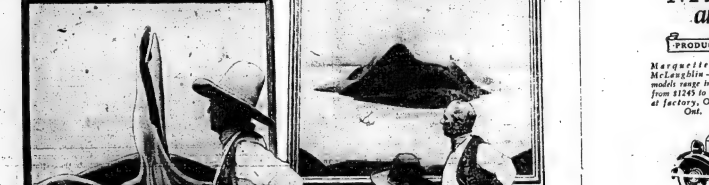
"Of course, and then to put a real kick into the message that paer, unsolicated Charlie was sending to his boss, he made the mother cow look full of fight, shaking her head, and glaring back at the wolves. Then to cap it all he printed at the bottom of the picture, "The Last of the Herd."

"You bet," shouted Shorty in agreement. "And the old Senator in the east who owned the ranch sent for Charlie and put him in school, an' made him the greatest cowboy artist the west ever knew."

"Right. "And that's just the point in that picture of the lonely stump there.



"Each and every one of the Group of Seven have proved just such pictures as Charlie Russell's masterpiece. Every member of the group has spent years studying art on this continent and abroad. Now, they could drop down from the skies among any class of finished artists anywhere, and teach one such as his touch and paint with the best of the world today. Every man of the Group of Seven has a great love of his native land, each barb of the bush whacker, the prospector, the hunter, and the pioneer. They have paddled, portaged, tracked and broke up camp, sleeping under the stars, with a sketch box ever handy. They have lived up to the physical demands that our wilderness makes upon those who would attempt to conquer it."

"Then I suppose all the rest of them pictures yonder have their own story to tell, if a fellow only study 'em enough to understand."

"Yes, that's just about the size of it," was the reply. "The painters of every country and period have their followers and styles."

"Them painter guys sure ain't kiddin' us, is they?" was Shorty's concluding reflection. "Not yet all." I told him. "Nothing could be farther from their thoughts. And take a good look at the pictures and you will be able to see and judge for yourself.

COWBOY IS STUMPED BY "GROUP OF SEVEN" STUMP AND MOUNTAIN

Shorty Campbell, Alberta cowboy, brought his rope and riding togs to the "Group of Seven" exhibit, which is causing so much comment, at Toronto, but was himself "roped in" by what he saw there. LEFT, "Holy Smoke," exclaimed Shorty, aghast, "which part of Canada did that kind of tree grow in?" RIGHT, "She's shore some lonely mountain," said Shorty. "I'd hate to ride a barefoot broncho over that ice and rock. Guess I'll git back on the train an' head for the foothills again."

INSPECTION OF FRUIT SHOWS A BIG INCREASE

Govt's Method at Shipping Point Insures Recognition of Quality

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)—The shipping point inspection service of the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture last year handled 25,760 cars of fruits and vegetables, an increase of 23,000 cars in the past five years, and 9,500 cars more than were inspected in the 1928-29 season. Hundreds of thousands of tons of perishable fruits and vegetables now pass from producer to consumer through this new system of established-quality marketing and the government certificate of inspection has placed trading on a basis of confidence.

"The maintenance of a rigid but uniform inspection service at the point of shipment, and sale on that basis, producers, shippers and the trade alike concede will assure Canada a place of importance in the race of competitive supremacy in the market of these products," states C. E. McIntosh, Commissioner of the Dominion Fruit Branch.

"The shipping point inspection service has probably been the greatest single factor in establishing trade and consumer confidence in the quality of Canadian fresh fruits and vegetables." Mr. McIntosh asserts. "It is on the basis of quality that Canadian growers must compete with other producers in the domestic and export markets and the key to the successful merchandising of these products is represented by the uniformity of 'our grade standards.'"

The shipping point inspection service now rapidly growing in popular favor was instituted as a voluntary service to producers to provide a neutral determination of quality standard between buyer and seller, and the government certificate is prima facie evidence of the real quality of the product. In operation it is an important merchandising service for which a small fee is charged. It is optional except for export shipments of apples or pears, and in respect to these it is compulsory except in the province of Nova Scotia.

At the special request of growers and shippers the inspection service has been made compulsory with respect to all shipments of fruits and vegetables from British Columbia and for all table stock potatoes from Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. Important areas in Quebec and Ontario are rapidly extending the application of the service each season as its benefits become apparent.

The government inspected certificate has created trade confidence in product quality. It has eliminated the element of expediency and it has developed the uniformity to such an extent that governments inspected fruits and vegetables have become exceptionally popular on certain markets during the past season and in the export market in particular premium prices have resulted.

SUSPICIOUS OF MAN CRUEL TO ANIMALS

Melbourne, Australia, May 1—"I am always rather suspicious of a man who drives a horse that is dead lame," said Lord Somers, Governor of Victoria, recently when officiating at an animal clinic here. "I feel that I can safely accuse such a man of wife-beating," the Governor added. He explained by saying that the kind of person who would leave his pets without water during a week-end would in all probability habitually disregard the feelings of his fellow beings. On the other hand, those who loved animals could be counted upon to love their fellows. Lord Somers expressed the hope that the animal clinic would help to remind the people of Melbourne of their duty to animals.

It is considered by some authorities, that one horse-power is equal to the power of eight men when exerted for short periods and to that of twenty men when exerted over long periods.

HEAVY PROPERTY LOSS IN STORM

Telephone and Telegraph Communication Cut Off By Tornado

CMAHA, Neb., May 2.—A number of lives were feared lost and heavy property damage done by a tornado which swept a path of destruction through nearly a dozen Northeastern Nebraska towns late today.

Telephone and telegraph communication was almost completely severed and as darkness descended over the stricken area the complete toll of lives and property was a matter for speculation.

The funnel-shaped wind cloud, striking near Homer and cutting a swath 100 yards wide, charted a jagged course that included the towns of Jackson, Winnebago, Pender, Bancroft, Walthill and, according to unconfirmed reports Tekamah.

Flint reports received here were that three persons were killed and scores injured at Tekamah and that the town had been almost demolished. Tekamah had a population of more than 1,800 when the last census was taken.

Pender, a town of 992, also was reported hard hit. Airplanes were immediately despatched to the storm area from Sioux City, Iowa.

Many of the lower animals are such cannibals that the mothers often eat their own young.

Mr. Downing is a native of Forest, Ont. and has been manager of the Newmarket Branch for two years. Date of the transfer has not yet been announced.

Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal-Conservatives will select a candidate to represent this riding in the election expected this summer. A convention will be held in the Parish House, Picton, on May 22nd, for that purpose. Mr. John Stubbs is the present representative for this riding in the House of Commons.

A Mastodon Congress is to be held in Picton United Church over the week-end. Monday evening a special young people's meeting is to be held.

The Badminton season is over for another year. Winners in the various competitions were: Men's Doubles for James D. C. Hepburn Cup—Dr. C. B. Slack and C. S. Hall with M. W. Reeve and Ronald Church, runners-up. Mixed Doubles for Colin Hepburn Cup—Mrs. E. B. Vandewater and Ronald Church with James Inrig and Mrs. E. A. Adams, runners-up.

The cup given by Miss L. Barker for ladies was won by Mrs. Vandewater with Mrs. C. B. Slack, runner-up.

All dogs in town must now be kept under control and police have issued a warning that canines found running at large may be captured and killed and the owner is liable to a penalty. Dogs during the spring season do much damage to lawns, gardens, flower beds, etc.

Mr. Teddy Rose has accepted a position at Belleville.

A pea viner is being erected at Solmesville, by the Associated Canning Company of Desoronto. This viner is located on the William Kennedy farm and will be much appreciated by the farmers in that district.

Baseball Practice

Picton's Intermediate baseball team held their first practice Tuesday evening. There is plenty of material to choose from and Picton should be able to pick a good team for this season.

There will be no softball in Picton this season. The town league last year was very successful but as Picton is playing baseball this year, no softball league is being formed.

CAPES AND PEPLUMS BREAK LENGTH OF NEW GOWNS

After raising the waistline and lengthening the skirt, fashion found that the long silhouette needed breaking up, so capes and peplums were called into use. Children Cry for it

Children hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and harmless as the recipe reads. (The wrapper tells you just what Castoria contains.)

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, use it to keep the system from clogging. Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your child is grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a boy in his teens. With this special children's remedy handy, you need never risk giving a boy or girl medicine meant for grown-ups.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

ANNA CHRISTIE

As there seems to be a difference of opinion on the merits of Greta Garbo's [illegible] picture, "Anna Christie," which is playing one of [illegible] houses in the large cities, and will produced here this week, it may not be inadvisable to give the opinion of [illegible] who have already seen it. Any way, from the hints and hands out most movie critics have been handing out, Anna Christie" as printed in the current issue of the Star Weekly, [illegible] Garbo in the immediate future [illegible] of Greta Garbo in [illegible] "Anna Christie," in [illegible] Eugene O'Neill's screen star makes her silent debut, talkie has, in the past, had a peculiar psychological effect on her audiences and, while many people have found themselves unable to appreciate her, many more have set her up on a pedestal of adoration. Whether she has been able to understand the other, but after seeing and hearing her in "Anna Christie" I think the verdict will be unanimously for her.

"Anna Christie is a sordid story told in terms of stark drama characteristic of O'Neill. The lot gets of the rejection of a young Swedish girl who, having fallen into a life of shame, succeeds herself by coming to live with her father on a New York coal barge, where she falls in love with an Irish sailor. It isn't a nice content by a long shot, but it has been beautifully handled and there is no offence in the telling. To those who have lived by the sea the realism of the waterfront scenes will bring back poignant yearnings—there are scenes when you can almost smell the fog and fish and the sharp salt tang of the ocean.

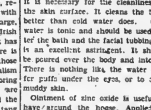
The tragedy of the blighted life of the young immigrant girl gives Greta Garbo a wonderful opportunity to display her talent and she makes more of it than you can possibly imagine. Her voice is low and mellow, not unlike the famous Berrymore voice and from the minute she enters the waterfront bar-room with "gimme a whiskey—ginger ale on the side—an' don't be stingy, baby" until the final fade-out you will be as enthralled by her voice as by her personality.

The role calls for an accent and so it is hard to say how much of Garbo's accent is real. I do not think, however, that accent will be say detriment to her in any future roles. I was never keen for Greta Garbo until I saw "Anna Christie," but from now on number me with the devotees of "the big Swede."

"A very fine performance is contributed by George Marion, who plays Anna's father, a role which he created in the original stage production and in the silent screen version. The peculiar character pictured in O'Neill's imagination lives at the hands of Mr. Marion.

"In the role of Marthy, a wharf rat, Marie Dressler appears in a new guise. Like all comedians, Miss Dressler has nursed a secret ambition to play tragedy and after 40 years of clowning she now gets her chance. Her ambition is justified and apparently she has put the pent-up desires of those 40 years into the part and it is magnificently done.

Charles Bickford plays Matt the Irish sailor who drifts into Anna's life out of the fog. I am not used to using superlatives and my stock has run out so I'll dismiss him by saying he is on a par with the rest please don't think I am talking his performance."



THE BEAUTY BOX

[illegible] a smooth lining the forehead [illegible] flattering. They improve the appearance of any woman who isn't the strictly tailor-made type, she who shudders at the sight of a ruffle, wears necktics and skins her hair back so tightly that her eyebrows are lifted. The average woman adores curls. Go down the average line, especially if they happen to be on the sacred tete of his best girl. In the coiffure design they contribute the decorative element. Very popular, too, at this particular moment.

The jaw is a drop bingo. Unlike the cheeks, the nose and the ears, it has the power of movement. If it is pulled in often enough it can create double—aye, even triple—chins. The whiner who goes about with a bang-dog air ruins the character of her chin, which grows soft and pouchy. The woman who snaps her teeth together like a bear-trap gets a mean-looking chin. Chins should be weaned.

Warm water is a solvent of grease and atmospheric dust, and that is why it is necessary for the cleanliness of the skin surface. It cleans the teeth better than cold water does. Cold water is tonic and should be used after the bath and the facial tubbing. It is an excellent astringent. It should be poured over the body and into it. There is nothing like the water cure for puffs under the eyes, or to clear muddy skin.

Ointment of zinc oxide is useful to have around the house. Applied to light scars, it will do away with them. Rubbed onto the rosy nose, it acts as eruptions. Pushed under the finger a mild blushing agent. It heals facial nail sores, it removes stains. Very-yer nettle in its beauty services.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

A brief review of the many new whims and whims which Lady Fashion has introduced within the past few months might not cause amiss at this time. It seems hard to believe that within the short period of six months the world of fashion has become entirely revolutionized, and that skirts of yesteryear are as decidedly out of date as the hoop skirts of our grandmothers. And the new fashions are so varied; jacket frocks, double-date frocks, frocks with pleats and frocks with flares are all equally popular. In coat fashions, tweeds are as good as ever, broadcloth has made a successful debut in the every popular black, capes are universally acclaimed, and belted models enjoy great favour. Your hat you may choose either with a brim or without, according to your fancy. It is true that on the whole the headgear has become more feminine, the use of lacy straws giving a summery touch, but on the other hand you may purchase as trimly a tailored hat to match your suit as that shown last year. The latter models are made of baku, panama and panamalac straws. From the above it can be seen that milady need not worry about selecting her particular style of frock or coat on every Mary, Ann and Jane, but may rest assured that the styles are so varied that her clothing will retain a semblance of exclusiveness.

The blouse, which for many seasons past has been almost unknown in the realm of fashion made a triumphant debut this spring and it now occupies top position in the dress field. The materials used are many and varied ranging from checked gingham to dainty chiffons.

Blues and dots twinkle and dash through the mode in an enchanting manner, Navy blue chiffon with white and navy satin polka dots is lovely, while navy blue Crepe de Chine sprinkled with tiny white dots is decidedly new and smart.

The hat is of the utmost importance this year and one clever designer had a bright idea when she put on her counter changeable hat trimmings. The hats are of baku and the trimmings three differently colored sets of pique hatbands which can be attached or detached in a jiffy.

I could go on for column, dear readers, telling of the many delightful changes introduced by Dame Fashion, but space is limited, so hoping to continue at a later date

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

I HAVE MY BOOKS

Out of sea-wind cloud fell down here
Fog to blind and make a path queer

"Stop," said feet, "and let the fog go."

"Nay," said courage, "to give the day so."

Words said, "listen for the fog-bell!
Follow certainly and walk well."

"Lead," I said, "pursue, and come by Line of hedge and my own gate's eye."

"When I list-h again my door-lock
Let fog beat with its soft gray-knock:

"For on fell still queerly bind it;
I have my books I shall not mind it."

—Myrtha Webster Merriehew.

Those of you who have read with keen enjoyment the works of the young Irish writer, Denis Byrne, whose untimely death through a motor accident two years ago caused interest and sorrow in literary circles, will be interested to know that the story of his life is told in an excellent manner by Mr. Thornton Metcalfe in "Denis Byrne: Bard of Am Aranach." In a brief resume of his life "The Bookman" says he happened to be born in America in 1890 because his parents were on a visit there and when the [illegible] years of Dictionary of American Biography were putting him in their [illegible] he could not find it was born in New York and lived there, in my twenties, Ireland is my home." He was doing hack-work on an Encyclopaedia and a Dictionary for a livelihood when one had in 1914 Joyce Kilmer shewed him a cheque for twenty-five dollars which he had received from Smart Set, for a short story, and saying to himself "If he can do that, I can," he promptly wrote his first story, "Bastile", sent it to the same magazine, and to his surprise and delight received by return of post a cheque for fifty dollars.

"Very few writers," adds Mr. Macauley, "have had the luck to sell their initial opus to the first editor who read it."

That was his real beginning, but he had to face, and faced cheerfully, the disappointments that usually await the free lance writer, before success came to him.

He laid down as his own ideal that the novel should be "frank as necessary and not a word franker. There must of necessity be realism—but it should be tinctured with spirituality and romanticism. Above all there must be a story—even if art has to be sacrificed to that end. For the people want a story, and a story you must tell them. Let 'art' go if it must. We have had too damned much art, and too little literature." He practised what he preached for there is a story in all his novels, yet most of them are both art and literature.

—Penelope.

Fashion Fancies

Fabrics Unite for the Ensemble

Millinery and dress fabrics have signed a fashion pact to insure costume harmony and unity for the Spring season. The success of the plan is already keen in the late Spring models, where hats and frocks, and even bags are often developed of the same material. This is true of both wool and silk. Tweeds carry out the fabric ensemble theme with sartorial smartness and among the silks, flowered prints and dots are popularly combined in this manner.

A galaxy of current style trends are revealed in the sketch today, including that mentioned above, embroidery as a decorative idea, pale pink and black as a color combination, and taffeta as a Spring fabric of importance. Here the ensemble of hat and gown is fashioned of black taffeta, embroidered in pale pink coin dots. The dress is finished by a gilet of pink flat crepe with a soft ripple collar and jabot. A novel detail of the soft hat with the rippling back rim is the narrow ribbon tie attached at the back and tied about the neck to simulate an original and chic necklace.

TRACES LINE OF ENGLISH NOVEL

E. C. Kyte, Librarian of Queen's Traces Fifty-Year Period

Mr. E. C. Kyte, of Queen's University, in his address Thursday to the library reading group at the Belleville Collegiate Library, traced the line of novelists from Scott and Austen to Dickens and Thackeray.

He likened these two pairs of great writers to two poles bearing wire or cable, the line sagging between the poles, indicating the lesser writers in the art of novel-writing. This period was a stretch of about fifty years as had been the stretch from Fielding and Richardson to Scott and Austen. The period from Dickens and Thackeray to Meredith and Hardy was also about half a century in length.

Theodor Hook

There was a long droop in the art from the time of Scott to Theodor Hook, who stood half way to Dickens. Hook made the novel treat many subjects; he did not use archaic speech, but used cockneyisms, and showed how interesting were the lower classes. He showed Thackeray and Dickens what could be done with any subject. "Sayings and Doings", published in 1820, was a regular mine in which the two great novelists delved.

Ainsworth and James

Then came the pair, Ainsworth and James. They made Scott easy to understand. James made the mistake of using historical figures in his works because historical figures cannot be made unhistorical. Ainsworth had great power in handling the occult, his "Windsor Castle", "Tower of London" and "Lancashire Witches" being worthy of reading. He did not explain the supernatural. He was a greater writer than G. P. R. James and showed a combination of two schools, those of Radcliffe and Scott.

Lytton and Disraeli

Bulwer Lytton and Disraeli were the next two treated. Lytton was solid but had not sufficient genius to be really great. His "Caxtons" and "Haunters and Haunted" are worth perusal. Disraeli put politics into the novel but is unconvincing. He however, did show the middle class the way of development.

T. L. Peacock and Capt. Marryat were treated together. Peacock was the conscious literary artist. His "Misfortunes of Elfin" is good reading seeking its origin in Mort d'Arthur and modern tales of fantasy of Morris and Norman Douglas. There is definite swing to Marryat today. He presents the simple life of simple men of the sea, a class which has largely passed away.

Galt

Galt, a Canadian and Scotsman, in "Annals of the Parish" and "The Entail" wrote understandingly of scenes in Canada and Scotland as well as Barrie could have done. Michael Banim told of the Irish peasantry and smuggling. He was a vehement writer, thoroughly Irish in his expression and his treatment.

"Frankenstein", by Mrs. Shelley, dating back to 1818, was a task too great for Mrs. Shelley. This work of the school of terror had, however, had an amazing influence.

Other authors noted were Mrs. Crowe, "The Night Side of Nature", Mrs. Trollope, "Vicar of Wrexhill", Morier, "Hadji Baba". A remarkable four de force of the Orient. Michael Scott "Tom Cringle's Log" and "Cruise of the Midge" and Sam Warren "Ten Thousand a Year" and "The Diary of a Late Physician."

Dickens and Thackeray

Then came Dickens and Thackeray. Dickens without much education, had a complex—the blacking factory, which had seared deep into his heart. He was under the influence of Smollett yet he was a man with many feminine virtues. Today Dickens has a tremendous popularity in Russia in movie and on the stage. His creed is good nature and his subject the common man. "How Jolly," cries Dickens where other writers exclaim, "How sad." "How terrible". Dickens builds a character of one quality and vitalizes him, so that men say of one of his characters, "there go I". Dickens hated nothing he created nor can the readers.

Dickens made the poorest people give the most. He made the novel real with characters of flesh and blood. He informed the world forever of the many fantastic activities of ordinary life. His faults are sentiment sometimes sloppy, he is fantastic at his worst and some of his crusades were doubtless misjudged.

Thackeray was a slow starter. Kindly, lazy, he wrote for years before he discovered what he was meant to do and he at last surprised himself. He wrote in the Victorian age which brought success in life to the point of a formula. The age centered about character and law. The general attitude was that the social order which had come out of the Napoleonic wars must not be upset by a too close acceptance of the spirit of Christianity. Dickens found refuge in Christ, but Carlyle preferred Odin. Thackeray tries to solve the difficulty by appeal to chivalry and devotion. The Founder of Christianity was hardly understood by the Victorians.

Wealth

Thackeray's people are all occupied with gold. Apart from the comfortable paradise of the Victorian Heaven beyond the church, he knew nothing little but the joy of wealth, yet Vanity Fair than that was the age of it and better still, the equipment to fight for wealth.

Thackeray is a very uncomfortable writer. His ideal human being is an [illegible] gentleman. His women are simple, honest, loyal and pure. If the cynicism and pessimism of Victorian life did not smother the soul, there was behind a real ideal—a loyalty that abides.

Mrs. Massey expressed to Mr. Kyte the thanks of the group at the close of the address.

Council Stages Verbal Battle on Parking

WORDY BATTLES IN CITY COUNCIL TODAY ON SEWER, PARKING

Council Orders Water Service Laid On Parker Street—Ald. McMillan Defends Parallel Parking Markings and Bylaw Carries.

Although the special meeting of the city council held today was of short duration yet considerable business was transacted and verbal barrages were thrown over the floor of the council on a couple of matters. All was peaceful sailing respecting the letting of the contracts for equipment of pure water filtration plant with Mr. Storrie, consulting engineer of Montreal, Mr. Core, Nasmith and Storrie in attendance to explain the different contracts. Two concise reports were given by Mr. Storrie and both were accepted by council in toto without discussion.

Waterworks Storm

The storm came when the question of Parker Street sewer came up or was brought up by Alderman F. R. Wotten, chairman of waterworks. The matter of placing water on Parker St. has been before the council on several occasions and at the last meet up the council passed a recommendation with orbing the connection of the same Ald. Wotten and manager of the waterworks department Mr. Ted Austin felt that the revenue derived was not worth the expenditure and the work has been held up.

Ald. Wotten produced figures at the meeting showing the construction to be $2,000.00 and only $22.50 will be derived in revenue each year. Mayor Reid did not consider it could be discussed as the matter was already dealt with by the council but Ald. Wotten wished to have put through a recommendation to reconsider the matter. Most of the members were of the opinion that irrespective of the expenditure residents on Parker street were entitled to water if a sewer was laid, which has been done, and that the work should be proceeded with at once. A verbal barrage took place between Mr. Austin and the Mayor, the final ultimatum being that work should be started by Thursday of th's week on the water service.

Mr Austin took the view that the waterworks department should not have to foot the bill for the water mains as probably a mistake was made when the sewer was laid but council stood firm on the original recommendation and ordered the work proceeded with

Fire Hazard on Parking

When the order of passing of bylaws came, the council went into discussion on the feasibility of the parallel parking. An alderman wished to know who authorizing the marking of the street for parallel parking when the bylaw had not been passed another lo'ng the work and this brought a sharp rebuke from Alderman J. D. McMillan, chairman of Public Works.

A chairman of public works is appointed and using h's own initiative does some crk and the council turns topsy turvy at the first opportunity. A recommendation was passed authorizing bylaw to be prepared for parallel parking ring working under that assumption that the by-law would be passed some of the work was proceeded with. I was the one that proposed the parallel parking as chairman of Public Works, but if the council wish to run that department it is alright with me, said Ald. McMillan. T'h's remark brought several aldermen to their feet all stating they did not wish to interfere with the chairman of the different departments but they wanted it understood they had a right to criticize or countermand anything done by any chairman. The by-law passed through the several stages and became law.

Front Street "through"

Later a motion was introduced that Alderman McMillan, Ald. Walker, Mayor Reid were appointed a traffic committee with power to act in conjunction with the Chief of Police and City Engineer respecting the controlling of traffic within the city. It was suggested that the signal light at Bridge and Front street be done away with during the period of construction of the new bridge and that Front street be made a "stop" into Front, Bridge street east, to be a "stop" into Front street and that no left turns be allowed on Front street at the intersection. The action arose upon the ground that the statement of claim disclosed no reasonable cause of action and that the action was frivolous and vexatious

MERCHANTS WILL TALK OVER EARLIER CLOSING

President Charles E. Hanna has called for tomorrow morning at nine thirty a meeting of the Retail Merchants Association of Belleville, at the Y.M.C.A., instead of the Chamber of Commerce on account of the large number of men who are expected to attend to discuss the momentous problem of a change of daylight saving. The subject is a warm one and there has been much discussion and tomorrow's meeting promises to be a lively one.

Mr. Hanna told The Ontario Intelligencer today that the Daylight Saving question had taken two forms here. Some wanted general Daylight Saving and others favored opening shops one hour earlier, and closing one hour earlier. The first of these methods seems prevented by the December vote of the electors who voted Daylight Saving down. However merchants could open at this earlier hour.

The proposal of some of the merchants for the Wednesday half holiday throughout the year is another matter in addition to come up for discussion. It is decided to close shops throughout the year it will be an innovation for the citizens has been for the summer months hitherto

COUNCIL AWARDS CONTRACTS FOR FILTER DETAILS

Canadian International Filter Company Awarded Several

FILTER SAID TENDER

No Award In This at Present Time on Engineer's Report

Mr. William Storrie, consulting engineer on the water purification plant to be constructed, appeared before the city council today with two concise reports, one on the awarding of the equipment contracts and one on the employment of a resident engineer and an inspector of construction. In the matter of equipment tenders those of the Patterson Construction Company were the lowest but Mr. Patterson forwent the receiving of the contract in that he did not receive all of the light. The Patterson Company would have to be bonded for the whole amount who in turn would have to bind the Canadian International Filter Co., Ltd. The first recommendation passed was "that the report of Mr. William Storrie, consulting engineer, submitted to this council re equipment tender for water purification plant be adopted by this council."

The report of Mr. Storrie with respect to the hiring of a resident engineer and inspector was also accepted by the council. "A committee composed of Alderman Wotten, Mayor Reid, Ald. Woodley and Mr. Austin was given authority to deal with any matters concerned with the erection of the new filter plant that may arise during the construction and have power to act. Mr. Storrie told the council tenders aggregated $1,800,000 and even with unforseen expenditures the plant will be erected within the estimate at $2,000,000.00 given the council at the beginning.

The council also passed a by-law authorizing the borrowing of $25,000.00 for finishing and improvements to the gas plant. This money will be raised by debenture.

May 3rd., 1930.

His Worship the Mayor and Members of Council of the City of Belleville, Ont.

Gentlemen:

Re Water Purification Plant
Resident Engineer and Inspector.

In connection with the construction of the water purification plant it will be necessary to appoint a resident engineer and one inspector to supervise the construction work.

The position of resident engineer we are recommending to you the appointment of one of our assistants, Mr. W. Argo, who is an honour graduate of Toronto University and has been in this office for several years. He is thoroughly familiar with this class of work and has been engaged from the start on the preparation of the detailed plans and specifications. Mr. Argo would be entirely under our supervision and responsible to us in every way and would be on the work all of the time. His appointment and the conditions under which he would work are familiar to Mr. Austin, because in every respect to the appointment of Mr. McDonald, who was resident engineer on the laying of the new intake pipe and extension to the pumping station. The fee to be charged for Mr. Argo's services would be the same as that charged for Mr. McDonald namely $256.66 per month, which includes everything complete so far as his services are concerned.

Since all of this work depends very

ARCHBISHOP O'BRIEN CONFIRMS LARGE CLASS AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Discussing School Tax Asks For Fair Treatment

APPEALING SCENES

Visiting the parish of Belleville yesterday for the first time, officially, Most Reverend M. J. O'Brien, D.D., coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston, confirmed the Sacrament of Confirmation on three hundred candidates at St. Michael's Church.

Crowds of parishioners and citizens gathered at the church for a glimpse of the distinguished visitor. The entrance to the church was banked with evergreens and above the door were the Papal colors of yellow and white, draped about the coat of arms of the Archbishopric and a scroll on which were the words: Gravisi sum ego disciputi vos Domini". Papal flags and colored lights decorated the Presbytery.

Procession to Church

At ten o'clock the procession of candidates from St. Michael's Academy to the church was formed and girls in pure white with flimy veils and the boys in dark suits with arm bands of white satin. At two-thirty Rev. Grace the Archbishop left the priest's house for the church preceded by a guard of honor composed of Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus in their regalia, altar boys, and attendant clergy. The bright sunshine touching the deep scarlet of the Archbishop's robes made a brilliant picture as he made his entry into the church. The ringing notes of "Vivat Pastor Bonus," sung by the choir were heard as he proceeded to the sanctuary and took his place on the throne. On the pillars of the church were shields bearing the emblems of his episcopal office, the background in each case being the bishop's color, green.

Address to Archbishop

Rev. Father Baker celebrated Mass, during which there were selections by the choir. After Mass an address of welcome, on behalf of the parishioners, was read by E. J. Butler, K.C. and members of the Knights of Columbus who acted as guard of honor came forward to pay their respects to Archbishop O'Brien.

The address follows:

"To His Grace the Most Reverend M. J. O'Brien, D.D.,

"Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston,

"May it please Your Grace:—

"The members of St. Michael's parish of this City of Belleville desire to extend to you their sincere and joyous

DAIRY PROSPECTS NOT TO BE BRIGHT

Ninety-five per cent of the cheese factories in the Central Ontario region have begun operations within the past few days. It is expected that by the end of the week or early next week the other five percent will have fallen into line. Nevertheless, J. L. Irwin, dairy produce grader, stated that the prospects for the year were not nearly so promising as last year. "Although we cannot be certain so soon," he said, "nevertheless I do not like the way things are shaping up."

On Saturday last there was not one cheese offered on the Belleville market and on Friday in Picton, the same conditions prevailed. Only two or three cheeses were offered on the Napanee Board on Saturday.

Rev. Dr. Russell, of India, Affirms Situation Not So Bad

BRITISH RULE PRAISED

Present conditions in India se not as bad as the newspapers would have us believe, according to the Rev. P. H. Russell, of India, who has spent thirty six years of his life as a mission ary in that great country, and was the preacher at services at John Street Church yesterday morning. "The newspapers," he said, "are prone to ex aggerate troubles over there. The situation is nothing like what it semines the history of India, especially in making such passing reference to the difficulties that beset the government, but one cannot help but feel that there is a great deal of interested about the present trouble."

These statements of Rev. Russell on the eve of the news late last night that Mahatma Gandhi, leader of the insurgents and would-be martyr, was arrested and will remain in goal for an indefinite period is interesting. The arrest has been made necessary, press

FRONT STREET'S MARKS PARALLEL

Department of Public Works Prepare For Parallel Parking

Promptly at twelve o'clock last night, while most citizens were peacefully in slumber, seven city workmen under the supervision of Mr. Henderson, city traffic police superintendent, and Mr. Charles Mott, city engineer, started the work of marking off pavements on the new parallel parking system. Front street was the first to receive attention and a good portion was marked off. Many motorists have its advantages giving a 30-foot drive in the centre of the road instead of a 24-foot road as formerly, and they should will have no exercise care in parking and allow enough space between cars to extricate themselves without bumping their neighbours' fenders. A ten foot space has been left unmarking at all hydrants, and no markings have been made in front of public buildings and gangways The marking slows a space eight feet wide for parking. Parallel parking was instituted today.

Nicola Fratiecli Faces Charge of Wounding Compatriot

FOUND ON STREET

Crown Advises Fratiecli To Obtain Services of Lawyer

A fight, allegedly caused by intoxication, took place at the home of John St. John, 19 Emily Street, the result of which was the alleged stabbing of Joe Calasses by Nicola Fratiecli, a compatriot, in the early hours yesterday morning and the young Italian, Fratiecli appeared in police court today before Magistrate Mikel, charged with wounding by stabbing. B. G. Donnan appeared for the prosecution and requested a remand for a week as Calasses is unable to appear. The Crown Attorney informed the youth that he should receive the benefit of a solicitor as he intended to prosecute the case to the limit. "No one can run around this city stabbing citizens, no matter of what class," said Mr. Donnan.

The party started some time late last night and continued till the early hours of today. The police received information that a man was lying on the boulevard near the Belleville Creamery and Constable Shaw on arrival found the man in an alleged intoxicated condition and his one trouser leg saturated with blood from the wound in the hip he had received. The ambulance was called and the man interrogated as he was taken to the hospital. Calasses stated he was at the party at the home of St. John's Emily Street, and that an altercation took place with Fratiecli and that the accused pulled a knife and stabbed him in the left hip. After admitting the man to the hospital the police went to the home of St. John and found the accused enjoying himself and in an alleged intoxicated condition. He was placed under arrest and brought to the police station.

Two young men, Earl McLellan, Nova Sco'a, and Wilfred Hedger, of this city, 'mitating the gypsy by living in the open, had their holiday brought to a close by their appearance in police court today, each separately charged with vagrancy and McLellan also for illegal fishing. The youths were found sleeping in an old wagon at the rear of Boyce's Garage and after foraging for food to the best of their ability, McLellan, to make an odd dollar, was grappling in the river and reeling, it is said, the produce of his labor. To the charge of illegal fishing, McLellan pleaded guilty and was fined $10.00 or seven days and he took the time on the hill. A meeting was held in Belleville Orange Hall to arrange for the organization of an Orange Young Briton Lodge here.

Mess. Wor. Bro. A. L. Geen, Grand Chaplain of British America was chairman and opened the meeting with the National Anthem.

Rt. Wor. Bro. Jas. Algie of Brockville, Grand Master of O.Y.B. addressed the gathering. In his remarks he gave an outline of the origin and principles of the association and its relation as a Junior Department to the Orange Lodge.

Rt. Wor. Bro. C. May, Harmonist of Ottawa, Deputy Grand Master, also gave an address and followed up the subject of the Grand Master by outlining the organization work and the part its members took in the work of the order.

Both are energetic young men and they gave very fluent addresses, which were much appreciated by those present.

The chairman gave a short address and told the young men the need of service to such an association which took the Bible as its foundation.

The Lennox Bros. gave several violin and piano selections which were as usual well rendered and received with a hearty applause.

Wor. Bro. L. Soule presented the Grand Master with the Warrant of O.Y.B. Lodge No. 6, which was organized in Belleville in 1871; also a list of the charter members of the former lodge.

A list of former charter members of the original lodge follows:

Jas. B. Byrne, Charles Gillen, Robert Lowery, Samuel Robinson, William Templeton, John Bullen, Mark Bottoms, Arthur McGinnis, Robert Artis, George Copeland, Abe Finkle, Lorenzo Hinch, Wm. Downer, John Smealon, John White.

3 CALLS FOR FIRE BRIGADE

Little Damage Caused by Blaze On Saturday Afternoon

The fire department was called out three times in the week read to ascertain small fires. On Saturday afternoon flames broke out on the second storey of the City Hotel and the fire fighters found a stubborn blaze to tackle. Prompt and efficient work soon had the fire under control although some damage was done by water. On Saturday night the department was called to the home of Mr. Hubert East Bridge street, from which ledged in the roof started a fire, Mr. Jones had started a fire in the grate and he was home within a few minutes later that the roof was ablaze. The flames were subdued with the extinguishers. On Saturday afternoon a grass fire on North Front Street near the Northrup property necessitated attendance and the department soon had it under control, Little damage was done. Fire Chief Lynch has requested that citizens exercise precaution when burning refuse and debris.

ABBE SUDDEN STRICKEN

CARCASSONNE, France, May 5.—(CP—Abbe Sibaurent attached to the Episcopal administration, of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Montreal, died suddenly here. It was erroneously reported in Sherbrooke despatch, yesterday that Father Sibaurent was killed Thursday in automobile accident in France. Cables from France now reveal that he was the victim of a sudden seizure of heart disease.

500 LIVES LOST

TOKYO, May 5 — CP—Death toll in the typhoon, which swept the southern portion or Saghalien Island and the northern coast of Hokkaido reached near 1r two hundred in reports to the Rengo News Agency from Odomari. Messages said bodies of 94 victims had been recovered and that hundred others were missing.

The chief need of the day —Confidence!

Timidity and over caution should have no place in Canadian life. Canada is too richly endowed for her people to allow any temporary slowing down of industry to sap her self confidence.

Preparation for the next upward swing of business—certain to come—should be made now by individuals, business houses and municipalities.

There is as much money in the country now as ever there was. Those who have it should not be over cautious in employing it at this time.

We repeat a remark from our previous advertisement: "What we do is more important than what we say. Let us buy and sell—build—go ahead—plan and work—keep the wheels turning to the utmost of our ability as individuals."

DR. GRAHAM DISLIKES SUPERIOR COMPLEX, HE TELLS CONGREGATION

God is in St. Peter's, and in All Churches, Says Preacher

115TH ANNIVERSARY

Another milestone in the history of Bridge Street United Church was passed yesterday, with the celebration of the 115th anniversary of its founding. How true those pioneers laid the foundation was in the enthusiasm and surroundings that the present congregation has today.

Large congregations attended both sermons and were instructed by two impressive sermons given by Rev. Dr. John W. Graham, a high officer of the United Church. The choir, under cation could be seen in the commodore Professor Hunt at the organ, gave a number of fine anthems and individual members of the choir gave solos.

At the evening service an anthem was given with Mrs. Stobie taking the solo and rendering it in excellent style. The anthem, a quartet of Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. Stobie, Mr. Sprague and Mr. Houston, was also greatly appreciated.

Rev. Charles W. Bishop, of Albert College, with the pastor of the church, Rev. A. H. Bell assisted, with Dr. Graham in the services.

In the evening Dr. Graham preached from the text, "In My Father's house are many mansions". "In this passage," said Dr. Graham, "Jesus was referring to His impending death but I wish to deal with the passage in another angle. Christ was a true philosopher, lived a divine life and was the perfect circle. If you know the way to God the turns will take care of themselves and I will try and interpret the meaning of Christ literally. The word 'house' best means where there is habitation and God is everywhere, in the mighty roar of Niagara and one can see the beauty of countenance in the spring of nature. I think everyone should have a church home and be at home every Sunday, but we should not say we are the elect and all outside the pale of these walls are eternally damned. God is in St. Peter's in Rome, in St. Giles in Scotland, and in the Plymouth Tabernacle in England."

"The house of God is in queer places also," continued Dr. Graham, "and some of the finest hiefory of the Old Book was written in prison. In physics there cannot be a perfect vacuum but I do know there are no empty houses in God's sight. I believe the Jews were the chosen people of God to a certain extent, but they have no monopoly on that love." He referred to the building of the great British Empire, and believed that the hand of God guided those who worked so hard for the true structure all through the ages, but Dr. Graham stated he believed a superior complex. He praised the United States and the British Empire for their gesture to World Peace, they being the two largest nations of the world. "We hear a lot these days of the Second Coming, but what of the first coming? God is here and it behooves us all to prepare for the second. A man does not have to die to have heaven on earth. Heaven is around us if we will only heed," he said in closing.

SOLICITING TOURISTS MAY BE OFFENCE

Toronto, May 5.—"Impor unning of travelers on highways"—a practice which was taken exceedingly seriously by some members of the Toronto City Council when it was being discussed last year—is once more in the legislative limelight. Says Gandhi's Aim Not Yet Apparent despatches from India state, by the violence of his followers.

"What," asked the speaker, "is the purpose of the movement? If one examines the history of India, especially that of the Hindus, one will recognize how the present trouble came through various influences. India is divided up into a large number of races and sects. If it had not been for the occupation of India by the British it would be impossible for Indians to call themselves a nation. The English have made it possible for them call themselves (the people of India) a people. If Britain should with draw from India today it would mean the breaking up of the people and the reduction of the country into hopeless chaos."

Mahatma Gandhi, the speaker asserted, out of a total population of three hundred and thirty millions of people in India had not a following of three millions. "One cannot," he said, "be too thankful for that."

"We must, said the Rev. Russell, have a great admiration for Gandhi. We must admire him for his spiritual sacrifice, but we must critigize him severely for the path he has taken in the past three months. I believe Gandhi's real purpose is not his apparent one. I think he is one of that peculiar mentality that will present a distinct menace so that self government will be given to the people. I do not feel that these movements do a great deal to affect the situation."

Middle Class Barrier

Turning to the work of the United Church, Rev. Russell stated that that institution carried on a great work in India. The lower classes, the untouchables, and the educated upper classes, these two have taken to Christianity. The great middle classes, however, have not been touched. "These middle classes," the speaker said, "are the real barrier to the Kingdom of God in that country. In all parts of India we face a crisis with the "untouchables" because they are making great demands for social uplift. The church is falling down in the face of these demands. Whenever we preach the gospel we get groups of people who make demands we find it impossible to fulfill."

The Indian peoples, in the Rev. Russell's opinion, do not want the British system, or even the Christian Church. All they want is Jesus Christ.

Canadian Firm Makes Largest Shipment of Home Laundry Appliances Every Made in Canada in One Day.

From their Hill St. plant, Fergus, Beatty Bros. Limited shipped two solid trainloads of home laundry equipment, the largest shipment of its kind ever made in one day in the history of Canada. Three years ago this firm made history by shipping the largest trainload of hardware to Western Canada. The two trainloads left the Beatty plants on May 3rd. for distribution throughout Eastern and Western Canada, and were the third and fourth trainloads shipped by Beatty Bros. Limited during the past five years.

Beatty Bros. Limited was founded, in, 1874 over 56 years ago. Their plants new c... 10 acres. Since 1921 the Village of Fergus has enjoyed exceptional prosperity through the activities of the Beatty factories. There has not been a day lost to the workmen in the Beatty plants and during the past winter they were exceptionally busy. In March, more Beatty Electric Washers were manufactured, than in any month in the history of the firm.

The two trainloads of Beatty washers shipped on May 3rd. indicate the demand for electric washers by the women of Canada. Evidently the Beatty enjoys an enviable reputation. This reputation is very pleasing to Canadians, as this firm is Canadian throughout. Management, capital, employees, and inventions are purely Canadian. Practically every part of the Beatty washer is made in the three Beatty factories at London and Fergus, Ontario.

More than forty of the firm's branches across Canada give service to Beatty customers and dealers. The two trainloads of electric washers will be distributed in nearly every city, town and hamlet in Canada.

The two trainloads consisted of more than 4,000 Beatty washers, and over 4,000 sets of Beatty laundry equipment, which are given with these washers. This labour-saving equipment will lift the burden of washday from the backs of thousands of Canadian housewives from coast to coast.

LATE JUDGE E. B. FRALECK

One of the outstanding figures in the life of the Bay of Quinte section will be seen no more after a life which was nearing ninety years. Judge E. B. Fraleck who adorned the bar and the bench of Hastings for so many years, and who took so prominent a part in many activities of this country, has passed to his reward.

Strongly marked characteristics stamped from his youth the late Judge Fraleck as a man who was destined to fill a position of importance to his age and generation. His career at the bar, his qualities of sincerity, his outspokenness, his gift in weighing evidence, and his sound knowledge of human nature with his thorough knowledge of the law made his career as county judge outstanding.

He touched practically every phase of the life of this section in his day and generation. Even in his latest days when most of his former associates had died, he kept alive a deep interest in all the activities of his early life. He was interested in the militia and his record of service was a proud one as befitted a man who came of Loyalist descent. He was a true sportsman and he had within the past few years appeared at the Parliament Buildings in Toronto in defence of every means to preserve the game and fisheries of this province. He knew the hunting field and the haunts of the wild deer, he knew where the game fish were to be found but he was a sportsman who loved sport so much that he was quite fair enough to give it chance. He was interested in every material development of this country. This was but natural in his younger days in the rapid developments in this country occupied a great deal of attention. In his early days he was a teacher and principal of Stirling Grammar School.

The late Judge Fraleck possessed character. Age did not wither the many social qualities, the keen wit nor alert mind.

He has passed but no one who knew him can ever forget the colorful virile figure who adorned at so many points the life of this province in the past seventy years.

SKYLARKS IN CANADA

From letters recently received by an interested citizen, of Victoria, B.C., it is now established beyond doubt that Victoria is the only spot where the English skylark is to be found, not alone in all Canada and on the Pacific Coast, but also on the whole continent of North America. Communications from officials of the Smithsonian Institution, United States Museum, of Washington, D.C., as well as from Dr. Frank C. Chapman, editor of Bird Lore, which is the official organ of the Audubon Societies, and also from Mr. W. S. Baker, State organizer of the Oregon Audubon Society, supply the evidence that proves Victoria's unique preeminence as being the only home on this side of the Atlantic of this popular songbird of the British Isles and the continent of Europe.

There has been some uncertainty as to the possession by Victoria of this monopoly of bird song. One of the most recent of the gird books is "The Birds of Eastern North America," by Dr. Frank M. Chapman, the latest edition of which in 1912 had the following memoranda: "The skylark (Alauda arvensis, Linn.) has been introduced several times into this country (i.e., the United States). In 1887's small colony had become established near Flatbush, Long Island, where a nest with young was found. After a supposed extinction, a singing bird and nest were observed in July, 1895. According to Brasilin (in the year 1907), the bird is still present at Flatbush, where it may be heard singing from March to October." The latest official record hitherto of the Long Island skylark has been therefore no nearer than twenty-three years back.

The skylark constitutes an inestimable asset of Victoria, but one which is hardly appreciated by its citizens. It is an alluring charm which is already drawing visitors. Last summer a company of fifty tourists spent most of their short visit there in seeking out the skylark on the meadow of the Hudson Bay farm on Cadboro Bay Road. A gentleman from California wrote an official of the museum that to see and hear this songster was worth the whole trip. The satisfaction established that nowhere else is he to be heard should deepen Victorians' appreciation of their English friend, as it will no doubt render him still more attractive to the inflowing tide of tourists.

CONFIRMATION

Sunday saw one of the most appealing of ceremonies that the eye can witness when the young are confirmed and take upon themselves the full responsibilities of church life. It was also the first occasion of the visit of the coadjutor archbishop, the Most Rev. Dr. O'Brien to this parish.

May is a fitting month for such a rite when nature is so much alive, it is the youth of the year and human hearts are open and susceptible to influences for good.

Poets have spoken of the confirmation and the first communion as among the most precious occasions of life.

The strength of St. Michael's parish was emphasized by the outspoken warmth of the welcome extended to the coadjutor archbishop, antedate the founding of the university.

BREATH OF EMPIRE

Where goes the pioneer, where blows the seed
From that bright flower of the cradling East?
Breaks he forever from the well-set feast;
Loosened on wind, he goes as one whose need
Leads him unhindered toward the stranger's land.
Peace had he plenty, but the tide swept west;
And distances were home-fire to his breast.
And heaven beyond the hollow of his hand.
Stand up, you pioneers, and catch the breath
Of empire here it bears your brotherhood
West toward that sun whose going down is good:
Whose going down is kingdom beyond death,
In that last country where the seed takes root.
Breath of an empire, you have nourished fruit!

TRAFFIC PROBLEM is acute and will become more so as the summer advances and tourist travel increases. The City Council will grapple with the problem tonight and propose for south bound traffic, with Pinnacle street to make more room for traffic in the centre of the street. Through a letter to the editor column a Belleville citizen who has occasion to use the streets daily all over the city suggests a plan which should receive consideration. Briefly it is this: Make Front street from the upper bridge to Dundas street a one way street toh south bound traffic, with Pinnacle street a one-way for north bound traffic from upper bridge to Dundas street. Make Coleman a one-way street for north bound traffic with Cedar street a one-way street for south bound traffic. Substituting curb parking for angle parking may only be a complication of the problem and certainly does not go far enough. It is to be hoped that the City Fathers will reach some adequate solution at their session tonight in the interest of safety, comfort and convenience.

MAY DAY is a moving festival in Montreal where all house teases expire May 1. It is estimated that fifty thousand householders moved to new locations in Montreal, Thursday, and many were the modes of moving as caught by newspaper cameramen, including dogs hitched to small wagons, donkey carts and carts drawn by man power as well as horse power. Montreal has many quaint and interesting customs and this is one of them.

NIGHT BASEBALL has geen introduced in the United States and proven an initial success. Fifty million candle power electric lights flooded the ball park in Des Moines where the first game took place and the crowd taxed the capacity of the grounds. So bright was the grounds that flies to the remotest field were captured easily by the fielders and there were no cases of sun-in-the-eye alibi. Midnight baseball will save a lot of lying about funeral engagements and sick wives and mothers-in-law.

"UTTERLY CRYIT DOUNE AND NOCHT USIT," was the edict against the game of golf passed by the English Parliament in 1457 when the staid old beef and beer addits viewed with alarm the rapid spread of this "peculiar" pastime. If their thoughts at that time were so measured by their words they surely were some tangled and suggest a brand of liquor with wobbly tendencies. However, golf lives and grows younger day by day, and that the young folks are taking it up so strongly. St. Andrews, Scotland, is a name highly honoured in golf circles as the birthplace of the ancient and honurable game, and here will be decided important amateur golf chamlionships beginning May 16, with the whole world expelting for the Walker Cup. As St. Andrews will be much in the public eye presently here's some information which will be of interest:

An ancient and dog-eared gazetteer contains the following interesting information about a town that will be more or less in the public eye in the next few weeks:

"St. Andrews, Scotland; a seaport and royal burgh thorty-nine miles nogtheast of Edinburgh on the east coast of Fifeshire. It contains the ruins of a splendid cathedral, a medieval castle and a Dominican monastery. It is the seat of the University of St. Andrews, founded in 1411 and the oldest university in Scotland. There are 116,000 volumes in the university library. St. Andrews is a fashionable watering place and is also noted for its famous golf links."

Possibly, a more modern gazetteer would begin its description of St. Andrews with a prominent notice of the famous golf links and end with a brief reference to the ruined cathedral or to the number of volumes in the university library.

As a matter of fact, golf can claim precedence over the oldest university in Scotland, The University of St. Andrews was founded in 1Ibl, if the evidence at hand is trustworthy. Golf was discovered, invented or contrived in the same "seaport and royal burg." In time, it spread through Scotland, seeped into England and penetrated Ireland. By 1476 the game had disturbed England to such an extent that Parliament passed a law that golf be "utterly cryit doune and nocht usit." It's safe to say that it took more than half a century for the village pastime of St. Andrews to become a national menace and thus the beginning of golf would

BEAUTIFUL RIVER

Belleville, May 5th.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,

Perhaps if Mr. Walmsley investigates he may find that the name Bagot has meant "beautiful river." That is what our river really is with its high, rocky banks and it does not seem reasonable to suppose the Indian would call our river a muddy, weedy and marshy creek.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

THE TRAFFIC PROBLEM

Dear Sir,—As a motorist who uses the streets of Belleville every day as much or more than any one else I know of, I am deeply interested in the traffic problem which is getting worse all the time. Coleman street with one-side parking is almost impassable at times and Front street is getting to be an adventure. In my opinion curb parking as a substitute for angle parking is no solution to the problem, just a temporary relief with worse evils to follow in its train. After giving the matter much thought, the following appears to afford relief if not a complete solution, and this is respectfully offered to the City Councillors for their consideration.

Three-quarters of the traffic on Front street is south bound, therefore make Front street a one-way street, south bound, from the upper bridge to Dundas street.

Make Pinnacle street a one-way street, north bound, from Dundas street to the upper bridge.

Make Coleman street a one-way street for north bound traffic.

Make Cedar street, a one-way street for south bound traffic.

There are objections of course, such as the possibility of the fire apparatus having to go against the traffic, but I submit that the equipment at the upper fire hall would only have to go a few yards to hit the right traffic stream, while No. 1 station equipment could use Pinnacle street better for most of the calls. Parking may also be cited as an objection but I do not see where that need be insurmountable. Make one-way parking, if desired, and have still more room for traffic.

Trusting that this suggestion may be of some use, I am,

Yours for Safety,
M.D.

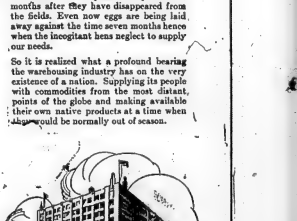
of the Canadian Terminal System, Limited, operating a chain of diversified public service enterprises throughout Canada

Canadian Rail and Harbour Terminals Limited, Toronto



COMMERCE is recognized as being the very life blood of nations. On the efficient interchange of merchandise depends the prosperity, the comfort, even the existence of the people. The products of Canada cross the seven seas to supply world wide demand. Likewise the commodities of the whole earth flow into this Dominion to minister to our needs. To accomplish this, fleets of smart liners and rusty, salt-incrusted tramps ply the seas.

Warehouses have always been an essentias link in this vast chain of international trade. Modern warehousing, performing as it does functions impossible to the older type, assumes a place of greater importance than ever before.

The great warehouses of the Canadian Terminal System, Limited, are the largest in Canada, and equipped and managed in the most modern manner. Here the commodities of the earth are brought together; fruits from the torrid tropics and furs from the frozen north; spices and silks from China and raisins from Smyrna are efficiently conveyed to our doors by water, rail and motor.

Here, too, quantities of domestic fruits, vegetables and meats are stored through the seasons of plenty until the stress of winter, when they are required. Strawberries and raspberries may be found months after they have disappeared from the fields. Even now eggs are being laid away against the time seven months hence when the incogitant hens neglect to supply our needs.

So it is realized what a profound bearing the warehousing industry has on the very existence of a nation. Supplying its people with commodities from the most distant points of the globe and saving available their own native products at a time when they would be normally out of season.

BUNGALOWS BURN MANY HOMELESS

82 Summer Bungalows Go Up in Smoke on Staten Island

New York, May 5.—Hundreds were homeless today and scores of communities counted losses mounting into millions of dollars as a result of fires in the eastern seaboard states. The most disastrous fire destroyed the southeastern section of Nashua, N.H., where more than 500 persons were made homeless. New York was scourged by brush fires which burned summer cottages, imperilled communities and taxed the forces of the "re department.

On Staten Island brush fires destroyed 82 summer bungalows and damaged two hundred others. An area hundred miles square on Long Island was dotted with brush and forest fires which spread clouds of smoke over the island. One fire, starting in a cabbage patch, Amityville, burned a path ten miles long and three miles wide. At Patchogue, a warehouse, three cars, an automobile, storehouse and garage were burned.

welcome, on your first official visit to them, and to tender to you their earnest congratulations on your appointment to the exalted office to which it has pleased His Holiness to promote you.

"Dwelling so near the County of Peterboro, we have been privileged to your successful administration as Bishop of that important Diocese, and we feel assured that in this somewhat larger sphere you will be blest in the exercise of your known and splendid talents will be offered you, and we assure you this will be the prayer of the people of this parish. We hold in loving memory the zealous efforts of our former Pastor, His Grace Archbishop Spratt, and send to him, through you, our prayers and best wishes for his welfare.

Parish Priest's Work

"Our present Parish Priest, the Reverend Charles James Killeen, is, we regret to say, at present not in robust health, yet he has borne the heavy burden here for many years, and the numerous works of this church and the construction of the commodious Separate School will ever be a monument to his untiring zeal and labor on behalf of his people and will mark his name above the need of further eulogy; and to the Reverend Father Kinlin and the Reverend Father Ballmer, we wish to mention our appreciation for the self sacrificing labour they are doing amongst us).

"Let us repeat to you our earnest wish for a long, successful and happy administration of your high office, and that it may be one of glorious service and its memory ever a benediction in the Archdiocese of Kingston.

"On behalf of the Congregation of St. Michael's Parish."

May, 1930.

Archbishop's Reply

Archbishop O'Brien ascended the pulpit and responded to the welcome expressed in the words of the address and touched briefly on questions of particular importance to Catholics today.

"My dear people," he said, "I wish to thank you most sincerely for the beautiful address read in your behalf and to tell you that I am delighted indeed with the reception I have received this morning. Especially gratifying to me were the crowds who attended Holy Mass this morning. After all, Mass is what really matters; when we find people devotedly assisting at Mass, one feels that the spirit of faith is solid in that parish.

"I bring best wishes and greetings from Archbishop Spratt who lies ill. And it seems to me that the only note not in harmony with this eventful occasion is that your revered pastor can not be here to see the children, whom he baptized, receive the Sacrament of Confirmation. I earnestly recommend to your prayers the welfare of your good pastor.

Priest and People

"When a cordial relationship exists between priest and people the situation is ideal. Without such relationship in your parish it would not have been possible to erect such a church as yours. It is a model and gem of architecture. It is a picture to behold this very minute, filled as it is with worshippers. You have made your House of God a model of beauty, placing in a great measure the parish churches of many parishes. After all the beautiful spirit of religion is shown in the monument erected to religion. But the first monument is in our own souls. It is a monument of virtue, showing not only the practice of churchgoing, in prayers and receiving of the Sacraments, but in a practical way adhering to the ideals which Holy Church holds up before the Christian people.

Spiritual Monument

"Raise up in your soul a spiritual monument more beautiful than any monument or temple raised by the hand of man. Beautiful as your church is, much more beautiful is the soul in the state of Divine grace. You must not only believe in God, but love God, give Him your whole heart and soul, try to live up to the teachings of Holy Mother Church.

"We are here this morning for the Sacrament of Confirmation which it given to strengthen faith in souls. We are living in a world, a very wicked world of challenge, a world that questions faith. The meanest and hardest opposition is to deals with faith, for in the whole substructure of religion collapses. Confirmation is given so that not one of us need ever be unfaithful.

New School

"I saw your wonderful school being erected under the guidance of your zealous pastor, and I marvel at its splendid proportions, and the wonderful opportunity it will afford your children. What is education? Is it sufficient to teach a child to read and write, to multiply and substract? He will be asked none of these things on the Day of Judgment. The one thing that matters is the kind of religious life he has led. Education without religion only develops the intelligence; it is hardly worthy of the name of christian education. Educationists of all denominations are waking more and more what the Catholic Church has stood for in education for two thousand years. Without religious knowledge one may possess unlimited intelligence, and yet be a stranger to God's law. Or these may be known and yet the will not bent towards their observance. So we want our children taught the knowledge of things secular and religious.

Separate Schools

"I can not help but tell you what a pang of anguish strikes me when I pass our Separate schools when I see how unfairly Catholic schools are treated in this province. In Quebec there is an equitable division of taxes. In England there is also. In England there are not only two sets of separate schools, there are three distinct classes of separate denominational schools. So when someone cries 'one language, one flag, one school' he is not being British, nor is he loyal as the very best traditions of England herself. In England those of the Anglican religion, the Catholic religion and the Non-Conformists have schools of their own, lower, high and normal, all supported by the general levy of taxes, not as Anglicans, Catholics or Non-Conformists but as citizens who pay taxes to support the schools where they desire to have their children educated, and paying for it as we pay for public utilities here.

Asks Fair Treatment

"In Quebec there are two separate school divisions controlling their own school systems, of Protestant and Catholic lower, high and normal schools which, are supported by a proportionate distribution of taxes. We come to Ontario and find that the separate schools which have exactly the same foundation, the minority, in Ontario as in Quebec, are so condemn the privileges that you would think they were an appendage tacked on our Constitution with the result that a very good Protestant citizen can not to believe that separate schools are more than Catholics should ask for."

Archbishop O'Brien concluded his remarks about the distribution of school taxes by giving examples of how the system is at fault.

"We people of Canada," he said, "own the Canadian National Railway. We Catholics form 40 per cent. of the population; therefore we own 38 or 40 percent. of Canadian National Railway. Do you get 40 per cent. of the taxes of the Canadian National Railway, here in Belleville You do not get a dollar, because the law of the Province of Ontario won't allow it.

"Is it fair? It is certainly not British. I think the time has come when there is a fair distribution. If each one will study the school situation, talk it over with your friends, I firmly believe that the matter will come to a fair adjustment."

Archbishop O'Brien also conferred the Sacrament of Confirmation on the candidates, and gave his blessing to the congregation. Before the mass was Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament.

Archbishop O'Brien was accompanied to Belleville by Monsignor Nicolson, Vicar-General of the diocese.

LEAFS DIVIDE WITH ORIOLES

Montreal Made Clean Sweep of Newark Series

BALTIMORE, May 5—Twelve thousand fans were on hand at the ball yard here to celebrate Ike Danning day and bid the Toronto Leafs farewell.

There was a double header and the spoils were divided equally, the Leafs winning the opener, 5 to 2. Then the Flock pounced on the Canadians in the nightcap to hand them a 10-to-0 shutout.

The popular Jewish catcher celebrated his day by accepting a travelling bag and a purse of money presented by friends and immediately singled to centre, driving in a run.

The Leafs celebrated by winning one and the Flock likewise. About the only one who failed to get something out the day was Sam Gibson. Sam of course could did get something but he would rather not bring that up.

Newark, May 5—The Montreal Royals made a clean sweep of the five-game series with the Newark Bears, pounding out 19 hits to take the final conflict by 16 to 6.

Five Newark pitchers labored through the long contest and the Royals combed their offerings for five home runs.

Jersey City, May 5.—Rochester took the final game of the series from Jersey City by a score of 7 to 5

The Skeeters overcame a large Rochester lead, batting four runs across the plate in the eighth inning, in which Lefty Irvin was pounded from the mound. Carleton succeeded him and stopped in the Skeeters' rush.

Reading, May 5.—Reading overcame an eight-run lead with rallies in the eighth and ninth innings here and punched over the winning run in the tenth to defeat Buffalo, 9 to 8, in the series final. The win gave Reading a 3 to 2 edge in the series.

Norman Plitt, relief pitcher, who hurled the final race, won the game when he singled to drive in Krasovich from third. Krasovich opened the inning with a single and advanced on Grace's sacrifice.

On the Sport Trail

Nothing definite was done at the Peterboro Central League meeting on Saturday, but, it is understood, that practical assurance was given that the Petes will be in the loop. Mr. R. A. Elliott, president of the League, has been devoting considerable time to organizing the situation in Peterboro and as a result he has stirred up some interest. The old executive lead by Vic. Hamilton have put their shoulders to the wheel and on the stipulation that cooperation will be given by every club in Peterboro they have consented to take over the reins. Stan Dunning will act as manager if he is guaranteed support.

X X X X X X

It is expected that Mr. Elliott will have something to say on the matter when the local junior grouping gets under way at the Y.M.C.A. tonight. It is expected that Deloro and Belleville and possibly one other team may be included in the local section and that it will give the younger aspiring talent an opportunity to do their stuff. Competent organization of junior ball here has been lacking for some years and it is good to see that definite steps have been taken in this direction.

X X X X X X

"Pop" Woodley, president of the local girls' softball league, has announced that a meeting will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night of this week to arrange the local grouping. Girls' softball has become a popular sport here and several teams will likely function again this year. The Reavers have been practicing faithfully and a number of games have already been arranged with out-of-town teams.

X X X X X X

Trout Fishermen are having their inning these days and according to all reports the finny tribe are biting superbly this season.

X X X X X X

The following notes from the pen of the Wise Cracker, in the Peterboro Examiner, may be of interest to local ball fans:

Well, Mac, as this is written on Thurs., I can't give you nothing definite on the latest developments in the senior ball situation. The last I heard was the old management had come to the rescue and offered to operate a sr. club provided they was given a free hand in picking what players they wanted. That, Mac, seemed to put it right up to the management of the other local teams. If they want a senior ball club here all they gotta do is throw their players into the pool and let the senior outfit pick what they need.

You know, Mac, if it wasn't so darn serious, the present situation would give me quite a laugh. For years now I been hearing folks say that new blood was needed both in the management and the playing strength of the senior ball club here. And yet when the gang that had been carrying the burden for years calls it a day and step out to give a clear field for a new outfit, what happens? Why the whole thing goes blooie. No new organization, no ball club, no nothing.

I've told you ain't the customers often what I think. My idea is that a senior ball team ought to always have 1st, call on the available material instead of having to scramble for recruits with half a dozen other clubs. That may be all wet, but it seems to me that a city of 25,000 people who professes to be a live sporting centre and yet can't maintain a senior ball club is slumping, what I mean. We ought do better than that and if we don't, then we'll hafta sit back and watch other centres forge ahead.

met with the full approval of the council and will be more fully discussed on Thursday night. West Moira at Coleman street will be made a "stop" street. Coleman street becomes the through street and a "stop" sign will be placed at the intersection of North Front street and Moira street at the Bridge bridge. Whether a flash warning will be placed on Front street is left with the discretion of the committee. Parallel parking will be in force from the upper bridge to Dundas street.

Labor on Bridge

The Trades and Labor Council through their recording secretary communicated with the council respecting the labor that was being employed on the construction of the new bridge. The council claimed that laborers were being used for the making of forms that should be done by carpenters and that many men were being employed, not residents of Belleville. The matter was brought to the attention of the mayor on Saturday and that official told the delegation to get in touch with the Chairman of Labor, Ald. Griffin. Today the contractor was interviewed and a census taken of those employed showed there were 30 men on the job, 22 of which were residents of Belleville, for lengthy periods of time and the majority married men supporting families. The council were of the opinion they could not dictate to the contractor as to how the men should be employed, as it was a matter for discussion between the Trade and Labor Council and the contractor and as for the employment of Belleville labor, the council were again of the opinion that the contractor had a god percentage. Some of the seven men employed living out of Belleville, were technical employees that were absolutely necessary.

Indians Cop Third Staight From Red Sox — Athletics Won

DETROIT, May 5. — Philadelphia made it four straight victories over Detroit by winning 7 to 1. Ehmke was the victim and gave up six hits and four runs in the seven frames he worked. He was taken out for a pinch batsman and Wyatt finished, to be nicked for o hits and three runs.

Bill Shores operated for the Athletics and gave the Tigers nine hits, a brace of them being a two-baggers by McManus. The game was even with a run apiece until the seventh when, with the bases crammed, Haas tripled to centerfield bleachers and stowed things away.

BOSTON, May 5.—The Cleveland Indians made it three straight victories over the Boston Red Sox here yesterday afternoon. The score was 8 to 7.

Danny MacFayden was on the mound for the Sox and went into the ninth inning with a five-run lead, but could not stand prosperity. He allowed the Clevelanders to score five runs, which sent the teams into the tenth inning.

Cleveland scored the winning run in the tenth on a double by Averill and a single by Luke Sewell.

NEW YORK, May 5.—A near capacity crowd of 60,000 saw Babe Ruth hit his third homer of the year with a mighty clout in the eighth inning and gave the Yankees their second victory over the Sox. The score was 7 to 4.

Ey Wells pitched shut-out ball for six frames but the Sox got to him in the Seventh and drove him out in the eighth. Pipgras finished up and held the Sox scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Earl Combs kept up his fine hitting Byrd starred in left field with nine with three more safe hits, while Sammy put-outs.

HAMILTON LINES UP STRONG TEAM

Hamilton, May 3.—A squad of close to 30 ball players have been signed by Jess Altenberg, former Toronto outfielder and manager of the Hamilton Ontario Professional League team, in preparation for the training season here on Monday and from this squad the club hopes to select a team capable of taking a prominent part in the league race.

Pitchers will not commence until May 20, when the Hamilton club opens at home with Brantford and while the time is comparatively short, Altenberg is getting a number of players who have filled the Winter in athletic parts and is not worrying over getting them into condition.

Several Toronto players, among them Tommy Noble, who was given a trial with the Leafs, have been secured, and Rene Fournier, Val. Hoffinger and Preddy Faught, members of the Hamilton International League hockey team last Winter are expected to try out. Jack Duncan, former Hamilton hockey kid is another possibility, and the team will be built around capable players from the other side of the border whom Altenberg has secured.

Rates are being paid at the rate of $36.00 per week.

We would be glad to have your instructions regarding home matters.

Yours very truly,
Gore, Nesmith & Storrie.

MOVIES

"Young Eagles"

Another triumph for Charles "Buddy" Rogers. "Young Eagles" the all-talking romance of America's sky heroes which comes to the Belle Bell today for a two days run fulfills everything that hase ever been said about it. It is one of the finest all talk theatre fans are some of the cleverest bits of flying since "Wings". "Buddy" is the lovable war ace that flies as daringly as the rest of them but all on account of this German ace that is harrying their lines he can't get his orders to leave for a vacation in Paris where the one girl in his estimation lives. He promptly takes the German aviator, Paul Lucas, fly the way who gives a splendid account of the prisoner of war. Then the action of the picture jumps to Paris and plenty of interesting events take place in that gay city then once more the scenes are laid in the war zone. This time it is a sudden and much wiser "Buddy" who has found put that his girl friend, Jean Arthur is a spy. The daredevil feats of flying that characterize the picture at this point are marvelous and breathtaking. The picture ends happily with the signing of the Armistice. The rest of the bill includes a Christie talkcredy, Graham McNamee, newscasting and vaudeville skit.

RAILS TO TAP NORTH RICHES

Charter for Line From Fond du Lac to Churchill is Sought

Ottawa May 5.—A group of British capitalists who control large mineral deposits north of Lake Athabaska, it is understood, are behind the application for a charter for the Hudson Bay Railway Company. The proposed line would link Fond du Lac on Lake Athabaska with Churchill, the new port on Hudson Bay.

Notice of an application to parliament for the charter is given in Saturday's issue of the Canada Gazette. O. E. Culbert, solicitor for the applicants, declined to reveal the names of the promoters of the scheme or any details. The matter will come before parliament in the form of a private bill and will probably be referred to the Railway Committee.

Lake Athabaska is in the extreme north of the province of Saskatchewan and the line of the railway will run almost straight east, though deviations from this course will be necessary owing to obstacles in the form of muskegs.

For some years considerable prospecting has been done in the area about Lake Athabaska. The distance from Fond du Lac to Churchill is in the neighborhood of 500 miles. Con-

FATAL RIOTING IN CAPE COLONY

Cape Town, South Africa, May 5.—A police captain was felled by an axe and his throat slashed as he lay on the ground, two constables were injured, five natives were killed and 17 wounded in a street battle in the colored location at Worcester, Sunday afternoon. At one time the natives, infuriated by efforts of detectives to arrest a native trouble maker, charged the police from the scene of the clash but the authorities layer secured control of the situation and fully armed constables are standing by, in the native quarter, awaiting reinforcements from Cape Town.

The immediate cause of the outbreak was the action of Major Thomas chief of the criminal investigation department, Cape Town, who arrived in Worcester over the week-end to investigate the native trouble. He cleverly secured the arrest of a native whom he noticed earlier in the day leading a rifle at the African National Congress. Two detectives whisked the black off in a motor car.

Ontario Lady Strongly Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. N. Beaudrie Uses Them For Lumbago and Her Husband For Rheumatism

Madoc, Ont., May 5 (Special)—Uniting against great relief from Lumbago by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I would never be without them" writes Mrs. N. Beaudrie, R.R. No. 1, Madoc, Ont. "I always keep two or three boxes in the house. My husband takes them for Rheumatism. He says there is no better. Her many friends in this district are using Dodd's Kidney Pills. We trust that these few lines may be the means of helping others.

The natural way to treat Rheumatism and Lumbago is to treat the Kidneys and the natural effect of Dodd's Kidneys is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Rheumatism is caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood. If the Kidneys are doing their duty they will strain all the uric acid out of the blood and there can be no more Rheumatism. Therefore, put the Kidneys in shape to do their duty by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Ends Piles Quick

No Salves or Cutting

Piles are caused by congestion of blood in the lower bowel. Only an internal medicine can remove the cause. That's why salves and cutting fail. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardi, removes this congestion and relieves you of Piles for good. Sold on this guarantee: Your druggist will refund your money if HEM-ROID fails to relieve you of Piles, no matter how long you have suffered or how severe your case. HEM-ROID is now sold by druggists everywhere, and has such a wonderful record of success even in chronic and stubborn cases that Dr. J. S. McKeown invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID and guarantees money back if it does not end all Pile misery.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Well the Northern Lights were real playful last night and as far as I could hear there was only damage they did was to cut down our volume a bit but that was only a minor detail just think what they could have done. The reception was wonderfully clear last night anyway even if it wasn't as powerful as we could wish.

Lew White one of the youngest organists on the air will be featured on King's program tonight heard over WJZ at 6.30 E.S.T. You know the rest, no need to praise Roxy's program.

A variety of melodies will be interpreted by Adolph Dumont and his 24 piece orchestra. Then there is the Shell trio that provides the snappiest bits of harmony, so they say. Lets go. P. S. LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Me and pop was taking a week between meals and I seen some questions that pop answerd, and I sed, O, pop, do you know we've passed 7 chewing gum ads already?

I dident know it before, but Ill have a reddy saner now in case some government official asks me how many chewing gum slot machines we've passed, pop sed.

Well O, pop, dont you feel like a change from chewing gum? I sed, and he sed, No, and I hope I dont look like one either. But can it be that you are purely leeding up to the fact that I've wunt a stick of chewing gum? he sed.

Yes sir, I sed.

Well if I was, and pop gave me a cent and I put it in the peppermin slot of the next chewing gum machine we passed on the car, and I pulled the thing the more nothing came out, pop saying. This is highway robbery on a grand scale and I oppose it like a tax payer and the father of a gum chewer, &c.

And he went in the store, and being a small size cigar store, the man sayed, What can I do for you? and pop sayed, You can return a cent that your confederate has stole from me without my adequate return, in fact without any return whatever.

Well, reely, Im sorry but thats not my machine, its owned by a company and I just allow them to use the space, the man sed, and pop sed, Well then we're even, because it wasn't my cent either, it brolonged to my son here and I allowed him to put his chewing machine with it, and how do you expect him to grow up loving and speeding his fellow man and their fellow slot machines after "a gaudy experience like this?

O for the love of Mike I never herd such a lot of fuss over a cent, a heres a cent, here take it and plant is in your back yard, the cigar man sed and he put the cent in and pop handed it to me saying, Thus do idealists and crussders suffer for their ideals.

Meaning he wouldent do anything more about it.

Wich hi dident.

TRENTON AND DISTRICT

COMMENCE WORK ON HYDRO LINE IN MURRAY AREA

Government Promises Flat Rate to Rural Users

(Special by Staff Reporter)

WOOLER, Ont., May 5.—Of special interest to farmers in the Frankford and Wooler districts, is the news that starting within a day or two surveyors and gangs of men will commence work on the Hydro electric system and by the first of October, all the work in that section will likely be completed. According to Mr. S. Austin of Wooler, one of the men responsible for this section being the first to enjoy the Hydro privileges, the surveyors are due to start work at once, and as soon as a certain amount of their work is done, the pole gang will follow along.

Starting at Frankford, the pole gang will work west through Wooler to Hilton, west of the Brighton-Campbellford Highway, with spur lines to various communities and farm homes along the way. Any who have not as yet sent in their applications for the hydro system to come to their farm in the district mentioned should do so at once, or they are likely to be missed. Mr. Austin will receive the applications at Wooler. Thirty-one miles of hydro wires will be laid this summer between Frankford and Hilton.

As promised by the government last year, the rate for the farmer will be two dollars and fifty cents per month flat rate, and five cents per kilowatt hour up to two hours. After the forty second hour, the rate will be two cents per hour.

This should relieve the unemployment situation quite a little, as the pole gang will be composed of about fifteen laborers, while the wire gang which follows will also have about the same number of men. Tenders for the work have already been accepted, but are not announced as yet.

An Oil of Merit.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and published by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept public favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt the power to repair and heal.

POTATOES SELL AT HIGH FIGURE

Farmers Offer Live Young Porkers For First Time

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont. May 5.—The price of potatoes was the feature on the Trenton market Saturday morning, the spuds being held, and held well, for three dollars per bag. And most of them sold at that figure, although one farmer sold his whole load two minutes after he arrived for two dollars and fifty cents per bag. Eggs were twenty-five to twenty-eight cents per dozen, and butter was freely sold at 38 and 40 cents per pound. Many farmers part at 25 cents per peck, and beans first time this year, and they sold for from six dollars to six-fifty each. Apparently maple syrup has made its final appearance of the year, for none was offered. Apples sold for the most part at 25 cents per peck, and there were 20 cents per quart. Fresh vegetables were quite plentiful, radishes selling for five cents per bunch, green onions for the same, and lettuce also 5 cents per bunch. Both buyers and sellers were brisk, but the market closed quite early, the square being practically deserted shortly after eleven o'clock.

How Did the Eggs Get in the Trunk of that Wooler Tree?

(Special by Staff Reporter)

WOOLER, Ont. May 5.—Here is a problem which has been puzzling the brightest minds in Wooler for the past week. Mr. S. Austin one of the principals of the story, and two helpers vouch for the truth of the narrative. After cutting down a huge tree near Wooler, which was to be used for fire-wood ,the three men discovered a nest containing twenty-one eggs, of the same size and shape as hen's eggs. One of the peculiar features of the story is the nest was at least sixty feet above the ground, another is that the hole leading into the hollow part of the tree was very small—much too small for any hen to get in—and still another is that the hole was on the underneath side of a limb, just where it joined the main trunk of the tree. The problem, of course, is how did the eggs get there, and being there, why had they been left? One or two were broken open, and as the yolk was dried up, it is thought that they must have been there for some years.

START PAVING TRENTON ROADS

Dufferin Street Will Be Paved According to Town Engineer

Trenton, Ont., May 5.—(Special by Staff Reporter)—On May 21st the tenders for the paving of Trenton's streets this summer will be called in, and construction on the streets is expected to start within a week of the tender being accepted. Several companies are bidding for the work, which means a total of some 70,000 yards. The roads to be paved are Dufferin Street from Provincial Highway No. 2 to the Carrying Place road, and on this road to the town limits, and Front Street from the end of the present pavements to the Wooler Road and so out to the Town Limits. The tenders being submitted will be for both concrete pavement and asphalt. According to Town Engineer G. Perks.

The Trenton Town Council are willing to macadamize any road or street inside the corporation if the residents of that street or road will petition for the facadam; but so far, no petitions have been received, although it is understood that some are being prepared at present. All macadam roads in Trenton will be oil treated, which preserves them wonderfully.

FIRE DEPT. WAS CALLED OUT

Fire-Fighters Extinguish Minor Blazes With Little Difficulty

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 5 — Friday night the Trenton Fire Department had two runs in quick succession, but fortunately no serious damage was done in either instance, as no great headway had been made. The first blaze resulted from some careless smoker supposedly flipping a cigarette butt or match into an awning which hung from one of the Bank of Toronto windows. The awning was completely destroyed, and the structure had started to burn, but the flames were put out without much difficulty. This occurred about eight thirty o'clock, and about twenty minutes to another was received from the J. G. Squier coal yard, where a fire had been discovered along the outer part of their office building at the rear .To those who investigated, this fire looked as though it was started by someone. It was extinguished with little trouble, however. These two runs were the second and third of the day, another having been made early in the morning to a home on Scott street, where there was a chimney fire.

LOST FURNITURE IN SERIOUS FIRE

Trenton, Ont., May 5 (Special by Staff Reporter)— Mr. Charles W. Fitzpatrick of Trenton, but formerly of Detroit, where he was in the plumbing business with a brother, received word from the latter city the other day that his furniture, which had been in storage in a so-called fireproof furniture storage warehouse had been burned and completely destroyed, along with a half million dollars damage to the building and its contents. The fire, which was of a serious proportion, and threatened the whole section, occurred last week. Mr. Fitzpatrick, who has been living in Trenton for the past six weeks, has several relatives in Trenton and District.

URGE GOVERNMENT TO TAKE ACTION

(Special by Staff Reporter)

STIRLING, Ont., May 5.—This is the season of the year that the Ontario Government becomes more than ever active in trying to keep dogn the weed menace throughout the Province. But when the speakers go out on their weed campaign in the spring they are met with the question, "What is the use of my destroying weeds on my farm when my neighbour lets his grow, and seeds from his weeds are all over my place?" As pointed out by a member of the staff of the Ontario Agricultural College, when such is the case it is a great nuisance, causes much extra labour and seems unfair. Legislation against weeds may to some extent help the situation, but there are still many people who are more careless than others with regards to weed control. Where in such a case as this, however, government officials point out, that weeds can be brought under control in a field next to a dirty farm, a highway or a railway right of way, the latter two places that are often allowed to raise weeds unchecked.

"We find that a good many farmers are able to keep weeds under control on their own farms, despite the negligence of their neighbours," states one authority, "and these farmers find it profitable to do the necessary extra labour because of the large returns they get from their crops." Using good clean seed, clean cultivation, short rotations, and employment of smother crops, such as rape or sweet clover, has brought more than one farmer success in his fight against weeds, even though nearby farms are dirty.

Weed control where the pests have been allowed to thrive in their own way is a costly business. A field so badly infested with twitch at the Kemptville farm that it was not worth harvesting cost ten dollars per acre to clean up. After this, however, with clean seed and clean cultivation, a crop worth several times ten dollars per acre was taken off every year.

Mr. Wallley was proceeding east on . West Moira Street, and near the intersection of Hillside Street, young Bain was playing. Without warning the youngster ran to the centre of the road and Wallley taking presence of mind slammed on the brakes, stopping the car in two feet. The young boy was knocked down but only shaken up. Jack Miner and the Birds

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

The bronze grackle is nothing only a small crow; his habits are exactly the same. He will drop on a tree and look around; seizing an opportunity he will come down and go through a bush, where there is likely to be a song-sparrow's nest just like a ferret will go through a stone-pile after a rabbit. I have known him to take the young birds after they were hatched. But so many men who know the habits of these birds will say they think they do as much good as they do harm! Why they make this statement I don't understand. And if you throw this book across the room and never pick it up, I cannot help it, for I am telling you the truth: These crows and grackles are the worst nest robbers in America. They do ten times more harm than good. Remember I am not writing just to please the reader, but to give you facts gathered from personal experience and observation, and my beliefs founded thereon; and I am sure that fifty per-cent. of the eggs and young of our song, insectivorous and game birds in Ontario are devoured by these cold-blooded, nest-robbing cannibals, the crow being the worst of all. He will take young mourning-doves out of the nest when they are as large as sparrows; the quail, and killdeer, and dozens of other such beautiful mothers are perfectly helpless and can no more keep him off than a human mother's naked hands could keep a vicious lion from tearing her baby into fragments.

By the way, I am now perfecting a trap whereby I can catch crows by the hundreds during the winter months. These crows will be handed over to gun clubs for trap-shooting purposes. And although he is a black murderer we must treat him fair, and give him a chance for his life; therefore, my request will be to shoot them from five unknown traps at twenty-five to thirty yards rise. The shooter will not be charged for the crows he kills, but will be fined for every one he allows to escape; in addition to the above fine he will be liable to any other punishment a good, cheerful bunch of trap-shooters are fit to impose upon him, such as rail-riding him around the club house for allowing one of these black murderers to get away. The shooter will be fined according to their shooting ability. These fines will be used for buying up old, faithful horses which will be humanely destroyed and used for bait to decoy more of these old, black Pharaohs to their just doom. Thus what is now the crow nuisance will be turned into a sport.

The hawks and owls are worst on the adult birds, the screech-owl is not so innocent as he looks, but there is none can compare with the great horned owl, and I just wish you knew the annoyance he has caused me by taking my choicest pets. Yes, it seems he delights in taking the nearest and dearest. But now let me give my horn a toot: Never did a horned owl take a bird from me but what paid the penalty.

About the only argument you hear in favor of the hawks and owls is "mice". But when a bunch of successful farmers meet at my the factory, never in my life have I heard them complain about mice, and I know mice seldom bother clean, shrewd farmers. But I have heard them complain about worms until I could almost feel myself crawling. The cut-worms were cutting their corn, or the wire-worms were destroying their oats, the army worm was working north, and so forth. Personally I have never had any experience with worms, but field mice I have often carried in my pockets, and if it wasn't for some youth practising the same sport, how I would like to tell you some of the fun I have had with them when I was a lad. For the death of each mouse by hawks and owls possibly we lose several birds which would destroy thousands and thousands of worms each year. I know there is a type of farmer who is much more easily annoyed by mice than others. You will usually find him town-town, sitting on a box and smoking in the time, now and then getting up and moving his seat around and possibly turning it end for end to keep it from getting tired; his stock at home are of the rainbow variety, with long whiskers, and when they see him coming they don't know whether to come or go, and the one or two razor-backed, fleshy Carolina, thistle-digger hogs don't care whether or not they get out of the steaming manure heap, to be disappointed; the remnant of scrubby apple trees in the field which some one else lanlede, have been fleece grown with cut grass ever since he got possesson of the farm, that, of course, was handed down to him.

If your orchard is stubble or clover sod, go through it in the early fall. By being careful you can determine whether there are any fieldmice there by their little runways that criss-cross on the ground. If so, take about one-half bushel of grain and thirty or forty bunches of corn-fodder; throw a handful or two of grain on the ground and two bundles of fodder side by side over it, making a nice mouse cover. Rotten hay, or clover chaff will do, but I prefer the corn fodder. Fifteen or twenty of these little harbors are sufficient in an ordinary orchard. In ten days or two weeks all the mice in the orchard will be under these covers. Now take the six or eight-pronged pitchfork, scratch around these little harbors to destroy their road of retreat then throw the cover off quickly; the light striking their eyes so suddenly, they are apparently blinded for a second, giving you just time enough to give them a side whack with your fork; if you study what you are doing, you will kill seventy-five per cent of them the first round, always placing the cover back ready for next time. If you don't care for this sport, just introduce a bunch of school boys to your plan and you will soon find your annoyance turned into sport and education for the neighbor boys.

In case you haven't the above mentioned material to make these mouse covers, old junk lumber thrown on the ground will answer the same purpose. But if you leave these mice and depend on the hawks and owls to destroy them, some of your trees will be girdled, as the mice seem to have a sort of human appetite, and appear to like the apple tree bark as well as the human race likes the apple-tree juice.

The mouse question always reminds me of a story told on the other fellow. It is said that he saw an advertisement: "How to kill potato bugs! Full directions sent on receipt of one dollar." This of course was a cheap opportunity, and he enclosed a dollar at once. In reply he received a small box containing a little black and mallet; the directions were: "Put him on No 1, and hit him with No. 2."

CHAPTER IX

Weasels, and How to Destroy Them

Now, as a field-mouse destroyer we have come to the king of them all. I have found as high as twenty-seven adult field mice stored in a weasel's winter home. Yet of all the four-legged enemies our birds have , I know of none to compare with the weasel. But if I were to ask the experienced hunters of America if they know the weasel all would be disgusted, because the weasel is so common throughout this county. I was once in that class myself; I thought I knew all there was to be known about them. I had shot them out of the tops of trees, and dug them out of the ground; I had called them into the tile shed and even into the engine room; I had sat here in the woods and called them so they would come up and smell of the ends of my fingers; I had seen dozens of the little rascals in Northern Ontario when I had been hunting moose, and had sat down and called them across the creek to me. Yes, I thought I was well acquainted with them.

Now, when I come to think of it I am always reminded of a middle-aged corpulent gentleman who once came to our tile yard. After he had his wagon loaded he climbed down over the wheel; as he struck the earth, he took both hands and pulled his loose trousers up over the dome of his constitution; then pushing his right hand down into his pants pocket he pulled it out full of what looked to be tobacco, Canada thistles and milk-weed chaff, after pouring this from one hand to the other and blowing the coarse gravel out, he tipped his mouth on top of his face, and raking his hand above he let this junk roll into the cavity, just like throwing garbage into a skunk-hope. Then he turned and said, "Mr. Miner, do you know Mr. ——?" calling his neighbor by name. "Yes," I replied, "I am well acquainted with him." "Well," he said, as he raised one hand and came towards me, "that is just where you are mistaken. Now Mr. Miner, you think you know him, but you don't", Then raising both hands, he continued, "Now let me tell you who he is, Mr. Miner. He is a limb of the devil," and he continued coming closer and going from bad to worse, saying nasty, unclean things about his neighbor until this combination in his mouth was all churned into a dirty froth, with the over-splash flopin out the corners and running down his chin like tar boiling out of a hotbox on a manure-spreader. So I excused myself: The engine in the factory needed my attention.

APRIL ESCAPADE - - - - BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

Then there was a long silence. Mary Kate had closed her eyes again, and was leaning back, looking spent and limp. But there was a sudden narrowing, a watchful speculative light, in Cass's eyes.

"Did you go to Sacramento?" he asked suddenly, in a level voice.

Her eyes flashed open; color rushed into her face.

"No—" she whispered fearfully slightly shaking her head. She was sitting erect now, and as Cass did not speak, but continued to regard her, with a sort of horrified astonishment in his look, she put her two hands to her head, and disordered her brilliant crushed hair with frantic fingers.

"My God—" Cass breathed, whispering in return, his unmoving eyes glued upon her face.

Silence. Silence. It spread and rose and deepened between them like the colorless waters of a swollen river.

"Oh, not the way you think!" Mary Kate presently said, impatiently, inaccurately, "I didn't do anything—wrong. I'm not a kid, to be led astray. I know the Commandments. I went down there on business for Mr. Rountree."

"But why didn't you tell me?" She spoke spasmodically.

"I knew Mother'd raise the roof."

"Why should she?"

"I thought she might."

"But if there was nothing wrong—?"

Mary Kate shrugged, sighed, and made no answer. There was infinite indifference, infinite weariness in her averted eyes.

"When I went into the kitchen, a while back, to give your mother a quarter for the gas meter," Cass said, "I didn't have a quarter. So I picked up your purse, and took it from that. And I saw a return ticket from Santa Lingame there."

She remembered now. Chris had bought her a return ticket on Saturday afternoon, not knowing that she already had such a ticket in her purse. It hadn't seemed to matter then—

"It kind of surprised me, because in all the months I've known you you've never been to Burlingame that I knew of," Cass pursued.

"They wanted me to go to a dinner, and pretend to be somebody, that was all there was to it!" Mary Kate presently volunteered.

"I see. Well, your mother would not have minded that!"

"She might have."

"Where'd you stay?"

"Oh, at one of their houses."

"Other people there?"

A second's pause. Then she said: "Yes."

"Did Mr. Rountree ask you to do it, Mary Kate?"

"Oh, yes; as a favor to him." It was all beginning to seem natural and simple. Her nerves steadied.

"I don't see why you shouldn't do that," Cass mused. "Was Steynes staying with him?"

"No, he's taken a Spanish house, a little way off. The Berringer place, I think they called it."

The name stirred Cass's memory.

"Were they talking about the burglar —no, it was before the burglar," he thought aloud. "When were you—let's see—"

"It was that night, it was when I was there," she confessed, fearfully, yet with sudden relief in her voice, too.

"My God!" Cass said, not irreverently, as he glanced at this slender, crushed, anxious girl with the deep blue eyes, who was one day to be his wife. "You might have let yourself in for something!"

"I did," Mary Kate admitted, raising her steady look to his.

"You weren't in Steynes's house!"

"I was—as it happened."

"How'd that happen?"

"The arrangement was made that way."

"He had a house party, eh? Mart would skin you, Mary Kate," Cass said off on a tack.

"I know it. And Mother too."

"But why, in the name of all that's holy, did you do it?"

"They wanted to pay me for it, Cass. And you know how I wanted to help Mart."

"To go to Germany, you mean?"

"With Doctor van Antwerp."

"Hm!" Cass mused. "Why but look," he said, hesitating, after a moment's thought, "that's what's been the matter with you, you poor little thing! You've gotten yourself all wrought up over nothing, and you think it's a crush on Mr. Steynes. Don't you see? It was the excitement and the risk—how much did you see of the man?"

"Of Chris-topher Steynes?" She had to add the last three syllables to the name as an afterthought.

"No. The burglar."

"Oh, I heard voices,—and the gun—" She covered her face with her hands, shuddered.

"Gosh!" Cass ejaculated youthfully. "They got the police, huh?"

"Immediately."

"Didn't get your name?" He was agitated. The fears of the boy who has worked his own way up, through newspaper deliveries, street gangs, messenger service, were in his voice.

"They got everyone's name—the servants, everyone." Mary Kate had thought this answer out before.

It caused Cass to fall into long thought, his lips pursed, the cigarette dead in his hand.

"Rotten break," he finally commented. "But you don't have to tell me," he went on, patting her hand, "that you didn't do anything wrong."

"No, I didn't do anything wrong." He went on absently patting her hand; phases of the affair were occurring to him.

"Lucky thing for you Mart was away!"

"Oh, wasn't it!" she breathed fervently.

"None of the names got into the paper," Cass said, visualizing a large house-party. "Were the women crazy?" he asked.

"What women?"

"The women in the house?"

"Oh—? Well, the butler's wife, a nice sort of middle-aged woman called Peters, came and slept the rest of the night with me. Everyone was pretty well wrought up."

"I should think so! What did—you didn't tell me—what did Mr. Rountree want you to do? I mean who were you supposed to be?"

"Oh! Oh, yes! Well, you see, an unscrupulous sort of Russian countess was rather—taking it for granted, do you?—that he was engaged to her daughter," Mary Kate began, trying to keep her thoughts policing her words in ten directions at once.

"She was probably in with a gang of thieves," Cass opined, with some recent thrilling movies in mind. "Most of those titled Russian women seem to be."

"Oh, no—she was a countess, she was probably genuine enough," Mary Kate defended her. "I mean, she had jewels she looked like all those ugly women with rog-dollars and crown on," she explained. "In the Sunday pictorials, you know?"

"But he didn't want to marry her daughter?"

"No. He hates the daughter!" Mary Kate answered, with satisfaction.

"And so he was supposed to be engaged to you?"

Even now she dared not be quite truthful.

"That was it."

"Yes, but where did Steynes come in?"

"Oh, it was to Mr. Steynes. He was the one."

"Oh—I" Cass said, on a long-drawn note. "I see!"

For an interval there was silence. Then suddenly the man said, in a definite voice:

"Now, I'll tell you, dear. That was an awful experience, and of course it shook you all up. Your nerves are shot to pieces, and no wonder. He goes away on Sunday, doesn't he?—and that will end it. And next week, very quietly, you and I'll be married. Then you can tell your mother, and everything will be all cleared up."

"Cass, nobody'd believe that I was down there, and yet that nothing wrong went on—nothing wrong was, even thought of?"

"But you know who does believe you, don't you, Baby?"

"If you do—", she said, wistfully, with an affectionate and grateful smile.

"If I do!" He was close to her again he had his arm about her.

Mary Kate nudged her fragrant, soft young face, and the loosed cloud of her silky hair, child fashion, against his cheek.

"And what—what good will our getting married away do?"

"Now is that a nice question?" he asked tenderly.

The girl laughed a little guilty laugh but made no other answer.

"Why, in the first place," he said, holding her firmly, "in the first place, dear, it'll mean that you have someone to look after you. You can't get into this sort of scrape, if I'm running you. And then, your mother and Mart, if they ever hear the story, will look at it as just—just nonsense. And then—I hope, anyway, you'll be so happy, and so busy, taking care of your boy, that you won't know there's anyone else in the world."

She was suffocating again. She sat quietly resting against his shoulder, rubbing his hand with the firm little thumb of the hand he held in his, and made no reply.

They were silent for a while, and to Cass at least it was the silence of absolute content. The curtains continued to move fitfully to and fro across the window sill, and from the street came agonies and slits of light, and the occasional sweeping brilliance of a motor-car's lamps, as it turned the corner.

"Want to take a little walk, now?" "Want to go to bed. I'm dead, Cass. You'll hang to go."

They got up, and while Cass emptied the ash-tray into the air-tight stove, Mary Kate shored and dragged at the couch, with knees and hands, and straightened out the bedding that was always strapped in place inside it, for Tom. She plumped a soggy pillow, and left a light burning behind her, when she and Cass went into the kitchen.

THE OAK-WOOD
(Shadow-at-a-Leaf Sings)
Laugh—world—
Laugh and sing.
I have set my deep woods
Whispering.

None can see them:
None can know.
Oaks take
An age to grow.

Blow your trumpets,
Beat your drums.
I bide my time;
But my time comes.

Bind you roses
Round your brow,
I am planting
Acorns now.

You'll be hushed
At shut of day.
My woods whisper
On for aye.

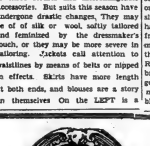
SUIT JACKETS ARE NIPPED-IN OR BELTED THIS SEASON

CANADIAN WOMAN LOOKS HER BEST IN A SUIT



By this time every lovely follower of fashion is (we hope) well aware that spring 1930 is the season for suits. Not in years has one been able to say with so much finality that here lies the infallible road to chic. It is a fortunate turn of events to be sure, for there is no evading the fact that the Canadian woman looks her best in a suit. Our long-limbed Anglo Saxon inheritance' provides the perfect framework for such a costume and our lives from day to day present a thousand occasions for which a suit is exactly right. And, if practicality enters into one's consideration, if thrifty can have almost miraculous variations of costume effected by two or three blouses and interchangeable accessories. But suits this season have undergone drastic changes. They may be of of silk or wool, saftly tailored and feminized by the dressmaker's touch, or they may be more severe in tailoring. Jackets call attention to waistlines by means of belts or nipped in effects. Skirts have more length at both ends, and blouses are a story in themselves On the LEFT is a youthful suit of tweed in brown and beige with a box coat. The CENTRE Vogue sketches include an interesting suit of cravat silk with a little cape on its shoulders. The jacket flares slightly below the belt and the skirt has an inverted pleat at the centre front and at each side. One of the most universally becoming suits is the type shown in the sketch at RIGHT CENTRE, with its double breasted jacket, padded shoulders and gently nipped-in waistline. With it might be worn a delicate ballste blouse, with fine tucking and patient wearing of the ring is the symbol that the announcement has been made.

Fashionably Speaking By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

Jackets and boleros have come this season to occupy a place of importance in the vogue for summery clothes. Have you, dear reader, ever thought of the many ways in which they add variety to your wardrobe? Then let's consider just what they can do to your costumes, particularly last year's.

It does seem hard that with the advent of the longer skirts many of your last summer's dresses will have to be discarded. But jackets and bolers can come to the rescue by transforming some of them, at least, into smart affairs. For your fluffy dresses there is little that can be done, with the waists higher and the skirts longer. But the gay little sports frocks with the sunfan lines, and pleated skirts need not be frowned upon.

Lengthen your sport dresses, for most of them have three inch hems, place the belt higher, and then acquire a jacket. Supposing your dress is printed, it is easy to match some shade in the design, with a plain material for a bolero or short jacket. If your frock is in a pastel tone, have the bolero of a deepor shade, with the belt the same tone.

So much for sport wear. If you bought one of those picturesque figured dresses with dipping skirts last year, get a transparent jacket to match the most predominating tone in your dress. It will then look like the new "double-date" frocks so popular this season.

And while we are on the subject of jackets and such, remember that one of those long, drapy jackets of the same material as your summer dance frock is the ideal evening wrap during the warmer months. It should awaken the hips so that the fluttering skirt cascades beneath it. So many girls wonder just what is appropriate for summer evening wear, now that Spanish shawls have definitely gone out. With really is a shame isn't it. They were so flattering, particularly if their wearers were tall and slim. New jackets have even taken their place and the colourful shawl has been once more put away, perhaps to make a spectacular return years from now.

Just another hint about remodelling last year's gown. The new sleeve treatments with the tiny puffed sleeve, the three-quarter length and the long one; and with the many novel collar ideas, you can easily disguise old frocks.

Good luck.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

Correct Manners
Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Introducing Mother to Her New Neighbor.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it improper for a child to say "Yes'm" and "No'm" to his or her mother?

2. Can the engagement ring be worn before an announcement in the papers?

2. Is is correct to eat pudding with a spoon, or should a fork be used?

4. Is it necessary to have an entertainment to properly "introduce" your mother to a neighborhood to which you have just moved?

These forms are not as good as the mentioning of the words "Mother" and "Father" after the "Yes or "No".

"Yes, Mother," "No, Father." There is something so wondrous about the words Mother and Father that they should be given their full charm by touching little children to use them when they address their mothers and fathers. And certainly they sound infinitly better than "m" or "ma'am." Don't you agree?

2. Usually the engagement ring is not worn until the public announcement of the engagement is made. And this is as it should be I think, for the hand-work, which is one of the newest blouse revivals. A handkerchief linen blouse, a silk one, or a jersey model would serve equally well and offer colorful variation. Of course, each would be worn tucked under one's skirt—we have quite forsaken the overblouse, this spring. Another idea, which one might emulate with success is the scarf tied in Ascot fashion and worn under the jacket. On the extreme RIGHT is a smart sleeveless frock of white silk with a jacket of green satin which matches the band on the white hat.

GAS PRESSED HEART MADE WOMAN FAINT

THE BEAUTY BOX

Considering the delicacy and softness of facial tissues and muscles they stand up pretty well. Women don't wrinkle as early as they used to, judging by the photos of our noble ancestors as recorded in the old family albums. There's less worrying going on, and practically no weeping. The average women never bawls or kicks up a rumpus. She's too much of a man to do that. Emotions and ill-health are two influences that destroy the firm contour of the complexion. If a woman has a good digestion and a firm rein on her emotions she should keep wrinkles away until she is well past her fiftieth birthday.

White-of-egg packs are used for sagging facial tissues. They are not only astringent, but they seem to make enlarged pores close up shop. The egg white is beaten slightly and patted on to the face. The colder the egg white the better the effect. A brisk tapping aids and abets the good work. Remove with ice cold water, dry the skin surface, apply a heavy tissue builder and continue the tapping.

When finger nails break, oil should be applied to the nail base, where the nail grows. When they are pale, some thing should be done to arouse circulation. Nothing better for that than deep breathing, rubbing the body with moistened salt and washing away, long walks, sleeping in a room in which there is a strong current of fresh air. Nothing can be done about white spots on the nail. In a few months they are gone into nail limbo.

Legs should not be reduced to such an extent that no calves remain. There should be a pretty outward curve between the knee and the ankle. To thin down and to fat up legs walking is the proper exercise; it brings conditions to normal. Walking helps along the work of the internal organs. It presents new pictures to the eye, and so stimulates mental processes. Every woman who has the time to prare cught to walk at least two miles day.

At least twenty nations will be represented at the International film congress in Brussels next June.

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY

Gladys Johnson

Carolyn Forsythe was giving a New Year's Eve party.

When Tom mentioned it—taking it for granted that she was going with him, Ardeth had hesitated. Unfair, to give Tom all her spare time..... ran her thoughts. Talking to lead him on in this manner....

Tom's lips had a wry little twist. "Don't be afraid, Ardeth, this isn't leading up to another proposal. I guess the silent partnership of the rhop is the best I can hope for."

Ardeth tried to grin in reply, but it was not wholly a success. "Now Tom....... you would have to make me feel bad! Oh, my dear, I wish things were different, I'd like to make you happy—you know that, don't you?"

He patted the kind little hand which had gone to his arm, a pat supposed to be reassuring and very brotherly. "You good little kid—of course I know it. Well—then you're coming. I'll tell Carolyn."

Back to Dickens

The Forsythe home, standing in the midst of its dark gardens was in a festive glow that night. It had lost its usual air of bright primness for the time being under the red and green of holiday decorations, and as Carolyn had lost her bright primness and become a rosy and slightly anxious hostess.

Looking at her rosy face and plump body, Ardeth thought of Dickens' creation, pretty Dot Peerybingle.

The French doors were flung open between the large rooms. A five-piece dance orchestra played at one end of the long space. Serpentine and confetti made an unusual splotch of color against the dignified background.

Ardeth was slender and lovely in cream lace and she spoke with a vivid gayety which gave no hint of her very serious thoughts. New Year's Eve.... the brink of another year.... What could it hold for her? She wondered somberly. Was it empty and grudging like the one which was slipping away tonight. What did it hold for Kent?

News of Kem

The hours became milestones to laugh and dance away. Her face was a mask to hide her feelings. She slipped into the bedroom, ostensibly to powder her nose—really to relax from her forced vivacity. A relief to be here alone in the shaded light. She went to the open window and drew deep breaths of the fresh, sweet air blowing in from the garden.

The voices of two men startled her as they paused in the hall for a smoke. They were discussing the stock market. At first she listened apathetically, barely noting the meaning of the words.

"A lot of fellows we know got caught in that jam when Consolidated Rubber dropped. Glad it caught me with only a few shares—and those I'd bought outright. I hear that Lane dropped quite a sum on that stock. And Gleason, too. Caught him good. He lost all he put in—and a lot more."

"If the damn fools will buy on margin, what do they expect?" came the second impatient voice. "I won't touch a thing that isn't bought outright. But Gleason's been plunging for quite a while now."

"Yes, and between ourselves, Ken can't afford to lose," went on the first voice. "I saw him late today. He looks like the devil. I think he's on the skids if you ask me. Darned nice fellow, too...."

The two men moved on, the smoke of their cigars lingering in the hall after them.

Like a couple of voices off stage, thought the girl who listened in the bedroom. A couple of voices which, starting the quiet rolling.

Out of the mirror the consciousness of her own white face grew upon her. In the depths of the shadowy eyes a sudden fear was growing.

She was running through the dark garden, clutching her coat collar about her throat, high heels turning unsteadily under her.

Late leaves rotted and damp earth..... black, star-encrusted sky.

She was passing dimly-lit brick houses back of a back street and in there was an empty taxi cruising toward her. She hailed it, giving the number of the building where Ken had his office.

Dark blocks reeled off beneath the taxi wheels while the girl sat tense on the edge of the seat, her eyes staring with strange fixity.

Marrying to Ken

The taxi slowed. Then stopped. Crept through traffic. A city gone mad with merriment. A sea of faces flashing by the windows. A large Negro Women's faces. Distorted with laughter. A steadily increasing roar surging like the wash of the sea. Confetti dashed at the window. Horns thrust against the glass. Screamed greetings.

A swerve into a blessedly dark street. The taxi stopped. The girl who got out of the cab was trembling and there was smothered excitement in her throat. She paid the driver in a frenzy of haste and ran across to the entrance of the building, her silver slippers flashing in the starlight.

The elevator operator looked at her curiously as he carried her up to the ninth floor, but Ardeth never saw him. A look of strangeness in her eyes—as though she watched some vision hidden to others.

She was running down the corridor past rows of glass-topped doors which gleamed coldly in the hall lights.

Ken's office—the frosted top of the door showing a light in the room beyond. Ardeth shook the knob, calling his name in a low stifled voice.

Then the Reaction

An exclamation. A footstep within. The door hastily opened and Ken caught her in his arms as she almost fell into the room.

"Ardeth!" he exclaimed in wonder.

She was frantically touching his face, clasping his shoulders as though she assured herself of his reality.

"You're all right? Ken, you are? Tell me—tell me darling!"

"Of course! Why—what's the matter, dear? Why did you come here?"

He held her away, his eyes searching her face. White as chalk, eyes wide and wild. His gaze took in her bare shoulders, the ingenuous lace dress showing under her coat. Her ruffled gold head.

She saw the utter amazement in his eyes and the strangeness suddenly went out of her eyes, softened with tears. She tried to smile; her mouth twisted strangely and tears rolled down her cheeks.

J. J. GIBBONS

who as President of J. J. Gibbons Limited, and Chairman of Crawford-Harris Limited, will direct the operations of a merger, maintaining advertising service offices in ten of the chief centres of distribution in Canada.

An item of unusual interest and importance to manufacturers, banks, investment houses and other national advertisers going business in all parts of Canada is contained in the announcement of the consolidation of Crawford Harris Advertising Service, the largest and most successful of the purely Western Canadian advertising agencies, with J. J. Gibbons Limited, one of the oldest and most progressive agencies in the Dominion.

The merger of these two firms places the new consolidation in an extremely favourable position to give localized service to all advertisers who have Canadian markets that they are anxious to hold and cultivate.

The Crawford Harris Advertising Service was organized twelve years ago by David Crawford and Frank Harris of Vancouver—two men who had an unbounded faith in the future of Western Canada that has since been more than justified. The business they established has steadily grown in volume, coincident with which it has kept steadily expanding its field of operations, till today, it maintains fully staffed offices under trained advertising executives, in six of the most important Western cities.

By uniting with the larger and older Gibbons advertising agency, all means of that each organization will be able to offer business houses a complete Trans Canada advertising and merchandising service, with local contact and an intimate knowledge of local market conditions in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria—ten of the most strategically located centres of Canada's distribution —as well as the facilities of offices in New York and London, England.

All the personnel of the Crawford Harris Advertising Service is retained under the name Crawford-Harris Limited, with J. J. Gibbons as Chairman of the Board, and with other officers and directors chosen from the personnel of Crawford Harris Advertising Service. This new concern, besides functioning completely as an advertising agency in its own right, will act as western agents for J. J. Gibbons Limited, which latter Company in turn will act as eastern agents for Crawford-Harris Limited.

"Progressive companies in Canada," says Mr. Gibbons, "are taking advantage of the present situation to extend their business. They are stepping out for new business and marketing conditions all along the line. The companies which fail to follow this policy are simply going to drop back in the race of commerce."

LONE SEAMAN IS STILL MISSING

H. N. McCann, of Detroit, Not Heard From Since Sunday

GODERICH, May 2.—Four days' search has failed to reveal any trace of H. N. McCann, who left Detroit Sunday afternoon in a power boat for Goderich. Since he was sighted passing Sarnia the same afternoon no sign of the solitary seaman has been found.

Private airplanes, coastguard vessels and various other craft have taken part in the search, while ports on both sides of the lake are watching for evidence of a wreck. Intended use of seaplanes today was baffled by a low fog.

Those closely associated with the missing man are still confident that he is alive and weathering misadventure somewhere on Lake Huron. Experienced seamen are less sanguine and suggest the possibility of fire or collision with floating timber as a solution to the mysterious silence.

FIFTY YEARS OF CONSTANT ENTERPRISE

WINGS OVER THE NORTH

Where Hudson Bay is "down South," flying has become almost as casual as taking a train.

The wealth of the North is being staked from the air years before it could be reached afoot.

From Labrador to the Yukon and up beyond the Arctic Circle, supplies of gasoline and oil are spotted at strategic points. With these the northern flier spreads his wings.

These supplies come from the Imperial Oil Refineries. By ship up through Hudson Strait into the Bay, by rail beyond the Pas, by paddle wheeler down the Peace and MacKenzie Rivers they go to distributing points. In winter dog teams and sleds drag them further into the wilderness.

Ever since Imperial Oil began, fifty years ago, its work has been to meet new needs of transportation and industry. Because it has met these with enterprise and energy Imperial has become a great company — serving every corner of Canada and Newfoundland—reaching from the Arctic to Peru.

Fifty years of constant enterprise are in the products Imperial Oil sells today.

Armored Cars Patrol in Indian Cities

REBELS VINDICATING GANDHI'S STAND STORM SHOPS OF CALCUTTA

Indians Wounded in Sharp Clashes With the Police—Schools Close —Posters in Prominent Places Inform Mobs of Mutiny's Progress.

DELHI, May 6 (CP)—Two persons were killed in rioting disorders which occurred in a part of this city today Delhi Indian Infantry and eight armored cars established state of armed defense or virtual state of war prevailed in Chandi Crowk, the principal thoroughfare of Delhi. Through this street armored cars kept up a continual patrol. Entrances to all civil buildings were guarded by troops. Chief Commissioner promulgated a section of the criminal procedure code forbidding the assembly of more than five persons.

(Canadian Press)

Calcutta, May 6.—Fifteen Indians were wounded today at Panchanantala when the police fired on them during a clash growing out of the Indians' attempt to enforce Hartal, or stoppage of work. Hartal was in protest against the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi. A crowd of Indians, greatly excited, attempted to prevent the operation of the electric light and railway plants. The police, intervening, were attacked violently with brickbats. After warning the police fired, injuring fifteen. There were disturbances, growing out of Hartal in every part of Calcutta today. A serious outbreak threatened in the central part of the city where a native tried to enforce Hartal, but four hundred special European constables, detachments of armored cars, and elaborate police precautionary measures thus far have kept the demonstrations in check.

No Indian newspapers were published by posters were pasted in prominent places every hour communicating the latest "Facts" on the situation. These posters disseminated the widest reports, one for instance saying that six hundred Europeans were killed at Patna. The imperial bank was looted and ten lakhs (3360,000) were stolen. Still another report said that Sir Charles Tarrit, police commissioner, had been shot dead. Both reports proved completely devoid of foundation.

Complete cessation of business today accompanied a strike of many thousand Gandhi followers throughout India. Schools and colleges were closed and students refused to participate in the resolutions for the bar which were to have been given at Delhi.

Karachi continued under close military supervision. A virtual state of armed authority continued at Peshawar. Despatches from Bombay stated that the workshops of the Great India Peninsula Railway at Matunga had to be closed because the employees were prevented from returning to their work by Gandhi demonstrators.

A crowd of three thousand rushed Parel Mill area at Bombay in effort to intimidate the strike breakers. A European superintendent single-handed, dispersed the crowd at the point of pistol. Europeans riding in automobiles were jeered by the crowds of rest less natives. Several were stoned.

Delhi, May 6.—Serious clashes with the police, ushered in the second day of the proclamation of Mahatma Gandhi, the leader of India's native campaign of civil disobedience. News from several of the larger native cities indicated that more than a score of persons had been injured, some seriously, and that open attacks had been made upon the high police officials at Delhi.

British and Indian cavalry occupy business districts of Delhi following severe rioting. All business has been suspended. Natives from surrounding districts began to swarm into the city by the thousands after daybreak. Vast crowds also began to make their way to the neighborhood of the Prison of Mahatma at Yerowda. As large forces of troops and the cavalry section already had been ordered in readiness at that point, no serious disorders were anticipated.

Plum Tree is in Full Blossom

Spring Here in Earnest As Signs Everywhere Indicate

Spring at last seems to have definitely come to stay. The beautiful weather of the past week has brought with it a temperature varying little from the 70 mark. Today's registering at the pump house showed a low of 55 degrees and a high of 76.

Nature is painting the countryside a vivid green, the leaves have appeared on trees and shrubbery and spring flowers are beginning to bloom in profusion. A plum tree on Isabel street was seen this morning in full bloom. Although this is not a record, it is still remarkably early, as the trees do not as a rule blossom until about the 12th or 15th of May.

According to a number of leading farmers in the district, conditions on the farm could hardly be better. Seeding will be completed by the end of this week. They also stated that the soil requires little cultivation, this season as rain has been scarce since the frost went out of the ground, leaving it in a loose condition which is favourable for seeding. In the vicinity of Belleville a little rain would be acceptable, although there is enough moisture at present in the ground to promote germination of the seed. Pasturboro and surrounding country received a heavy shower a few days ago which will supply necessary moisture for some time. Agricultural operations are off to a good start and a fine harvest is predicted by the leading farmers of this district.

"Drive Hard Bargain With U.S." Says Speaker on St. Lawrence

Urging immediate action with the United States, Hon. E. C. Drury, former Prime Minister for the Province of Ontario, clearly pointed out Canada's position in respect to the St. Lawrence Waterways problem, to an audience composed of Rotarians, Kiwanians and Ye Men at Hotel Quinte last night. A man who had made a long and careful study, Mr. Drury in an excellent position to discuss this problem which has become a burning question with the people of the United States and Canada, particularly within that area surrounding the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River.

He advised International negotiations, with the Dominion guarding her rights as much as possible, yet driving the hardest bargain possible with United States. Mr. Drury warned that unless the two countries come to terms, the overwhelming demand from the United States for an outlet to the ocean, will result in that country taking the more expensive method of opening the Oswego-Albany Canal to the Hudson River. "Canada will not have access to this route and if our neighbours' pleas are not answered, is would practically result in the extinction of Canada's merchant marine." Clearly and forcefully he pointed

CALCUTTA RIOTS LEAVE CHAOS IN THE EIR WAKE

Gandhi's followers clashed with the British police at Calcutta, India, and six natives were killed and scores injured in desperate street fighting between the infuriated natives and the authorities. The Upper picture shows the native police driving back a crowd of native cart driver s in Calcutta, while below a British policeman can be seen guarding a street corner.

Temperance in Speeches Even

In order that all proceedings at this morning's meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association might pass off with due quietness and the minimum of unpleasant brawling, Mr. Bert Jennings introduced the following resolution at the commencement of the meeting.

Amicable Settlement

"We all wish to get an hour in the afternoon. This may be had in either one of two ways—by first, so-called Daylight Saving and second, by closing at five p.m., whether we open an hour earlier or not. The Daylight Saving method will undoubtedly cause more or less friction. Let us handle this in as diplomatic a manner as possible. Let us be temperate in our presentation. Above all, let us be gentlemen and not go bitter because we may not see eye to eye. Keep this in mind that we have to live together all the year and how much better it is to feel that the citizens of Belleville, especially the merchants and manufacturers, who are meeting this morning, are friends and nothing but friends."

MERCHANTS WILL ASK COUNCIL FOR "D. S." EARLY CLOSING LOST

Half Holiday a Week Throughout Year Proposed and Lost

DISCUSSION WARM

At one of the best attended meetings of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association held in this city it was decided by an almost unanimous vote that a petition will be presented to the city council at its regular meeting on Monday night next asking for daylight saving. It was moved by R. J. Wray, furniture dealer and seconded by C. J. Symons, haberdasher, that the assembly of retail merchants go on record asking that the city council give them daylight saving from June 15th until September 15th. A rider to this motion, which was later withdrawn, stated that in the event of a refusal five o'clock closing be put into force.

Warm Discussion

President over by President Charles E. Hanna, the troublesome questions of daylight saving and particularly that with regard to five o'clock closing, resulted in arguments pro and con that lasted for nearly two hours. Although the meeting was practically unanimous in its desire for daylight saving, five o'clock closing was hotly opposed by a majority of the merchants.

President Hanna hoped that the province would introduce legislation in

EXTEND WELCOME

The educational authorities of the city of Belleville and in particular Mr. H. J. Clark, B.A., and P. C. McLaurin, principal of the splendid Collegiate school have shown themselves no whit behind the rest of Ontario in extending a real and genuine welcome to the first number of The Canadian Geographical Societies' Journal.

On Friday, May 2nd., at the morning session of the Collegiate, Mr. McLaurin extended a cordial invitation to Mr. L. H. Baker, F.S.S., The Canadian Geographical Societies' Representative and in a most lucid manner, outlined the purpose of the movement.

At the same time Mr. McLaurin referred to the more than unusual career of the author representative in almost every corner of the British Empire and invited Mr. Baker to address the pupils in the very limited space of time then available, on the subject of his trails, which may be tersely summed up, as "Twenty-five years amongst the Jungle folk, the head hunters and wild beasts of Burma".

At the end of this all too brief discourse from the explorer, the splendid burst of applause must have made it very evident to all, that the spirit of adventure is very much alive in the youth of Canada today and of the city of Belleville in particular.

Merchants Will Ask Council

the near future that would compel all municipalities to go on daylight saving, "Daylight saving", he said, "has its good points and it has its bad points. We have the rural population to consider. I see no reason why Wednesday afternoon holidays could not be held the whole year around."

Five O'clock Closing

It was here that Mr. Bert Jennings introduced the motion that caused so much argument. He proposed that all merchants close their stores at five o'clock in the evening during the months of June, July, August and September. In this motion he was seconded by Mr. Steele Licence.

E. H. Mighells, proprietor of Hallen' Shoe Store, claimed that little business was done in the morning and that the bulk of the trade was done between four and six o'clock in the afternoon By closing at five o'clock in the afternoon, business would be seriously hurt.

William McIntosh, of McIntosh Bros. Drygoods store, was of the same opinion. Further, he claimed that in Kingston, where they close at five o'clock the year around, the plan had not been successful. Although the clerks, he said, were able to leave promptly at five o'clock, the manager had to stay around until six anyway.

City Vote Should Stand

Mr. McBride stated that the people had voted on daylight saving and that that vote should give the general consensus of public opinion. C. J. Symons was of the opinion, that thought daylight saving had been voted down by a small majority, nevertheless only two wards had been instrumental in defeating the motion. Incidentally, those wards were largely peopled by employees of the Canadian National Railway and their families. "The fact remains," said Mr. Symons, "that the majority of the taxes in the city are controlled by the merchants on Front street. I think a vote was taken right now that daylight saving would pass with a large majority. I am absolutely in favour of daylight saving. I would also move that we continue the Wednesday afternoon half holidays. I am, however, strenuously opposed to closing at five o'clock in the afternoon during the summer months."

In the opinion of Mr. Jamieson Bone, stockbroker, a little spite had been thrown into the vote on daylight saving and this "the power people believed that it was just a measure to please the rich man, in order that he might get away to play golf in the afternoon." He suggested that the city council be asked to put the clock ahead one hour.

Council Won't Act

"There is not," said George T. Wood

MRS. A. ARMSTRONG

"Before taking Sargon my system was badly rundown and debilitated. Indigestion had run on so long with me that my appetite was nearly gone. I was all the Belleville Conservative Club stated that he always considered it an honor to speak to them and thank ed them for their wonderful service in the past and expressed his confidence that they would give their loyal and efficient service in the coming years.

"Our government finds it necessary at the end of a five-year term, sometimes less," said the speaker, "for parliament to dissolve and give the electors the opportunity either to reelect or condemn the party in power. I can safely predict," continued Mr. Tunmuon, "a general election will be over in Canada inside of the next three months. Therefore," he emphasized, "it is not too soon to examine the records made by the party now in power and decide to which side we will give our support." Mr. Tunmon proceeded to say that in the three years past we have heard much about the prosperity of Canada. "Where is that prosperity now?" he asked. "It seems to have taken wings and fled. The result we can see all around us unemployment, poor business conditions and agricultural discouragement."

"And this," exclaimed the speaker, "in a country that occupies half a continent that abounds in natural resources and opportunities. Even with standing that for the seven years past providence has been generous and given us one after another seven bountiful harvests. We have in Canada a richness of natural resources, the soil mines, forests and sea. These should be the wealth of a country, but we find conditions in Canada today anything

Spoke on Budget

MR. W. E. TUMMON, M.P., who addressed Women Conservatives of Belleville last evening.

but good. What has happened? What's wrong? What has happened to our natural resources?" demanded the speaker. "Let us take official figures for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1930. The total exports were $1,120,000,000, the total imports $1,248,000,000 therefore, on the year's business we imported $128,000,000 more than we sold to other countries."

"What means," said Mr. Tummon "that the country's wealth is being lifted out and handed to other nations. What does it mean to the County of Hastings with a population of 37,000? It simply means that one Wednesday afternoon a year is taken out of our county and handed out to other countries."

Mr. Tunmon then gave figures showing imports and exports of Canada to the United States and United Kingdom. "We sold to the U. K. in the year past $521,000,000, two thirds of which was the raw products of our mines and forests, in the time effected by our neighbor and sold back to us at inflated prices. We exported to the United Kingdom about $70,000,000, making in all a total export of $800,000,000. While selling these amounts to these two countries alone," Mr. Tummon," we bought from the U. S. A. $863,000,000, which means that we sent back to them every dollar we bought from them and from the United Kingdom as well.

"Canada is a clearing house for the money received from the Old Country. It is my wonder then that unemployment is a great problem, or that our country is not prosperous?" Mr. Tummon inquired. "What does Mr. King say when confronted with the unemployment question," the speaker asked. "Not one cent to aid unemployment where a Tory government reigns".

Death Bed Repentance

"The statement made by the Prime Minister," said Mr. Tummon, "is unworthy of the Prime Minister of Can ada and beneath the dignity of one who even aspires to that position."

Mr. Tummon touched lightly on the budget, and declared that it was "a death-bed repentance on the part of the Liberals, who are now begging for a chance to live. Too late," said the speaker, "the industries of Canada will not soon forget what they have suffered at the hands of the Liberal party."

Mr. Tummon concluded his remarks by stating that well before the election the policy of the Conservative government would be announced and that it would be one which all Conservatives would be proud to acknowledge and support. "It will be a policy made for Canada by Canadians," declared the speaker. "It will not be a policy that means what Washington does Canada must do. I stand before you tonight," concluded Mr. Tummon, "saying what the Conservative party at Ottawa is saying, 'we are going to win the next election and Mr. Bennett will be the next Prime Minister of Canada'."

WANTED TO GO BACK TO ENGLAND

So 19 Year Youth, James Stephenson Took Employer's Money

A longing for the green hills and retty countryside of Old England caused James Stephenson aged 19, an English boy to steal the sum of $66. from his employer, Thomas E. McCaughen, of Wellman's Corners, yesterday. The theft was investigated by his arrest by Provincial Constable Percy Grey of Marmora, after an all-night search, on the railway track near the village of Foxboro early today. Stephenson elected summary trial and pleaded guilty to the theft and was remanded for one week for sentence when Mr. Morrison of the British Immigration and Colonization Board arrives in the city to interview the lad a suspended sentence will be given for six months. Nearly all of the money taken was recovered.

The young lad came from England in March of last year and was hired out to Mr. McCaughen. Yesterday he gave the boy $66 and a horse and buggy to go out in the country to buy eggs. Stephenson instead of doing what he was told, took the money to a neighbor's fence and beat it to the woods. When he did not come home Mrs. McCaughen informed the police and the net was immediately spread for his capture. Provincial Constable Grey went to Foxboro on information received and arrested the boy as he was walking along the track. Asked why he stole the money by the magistrate the youth promptly replied "I was trying to get back home."

BRILLIANT SOCIAL SEASON AT BANFF

Montreal, Quebec. May 6—A brilliant social season is assured for the Banff Spring's hotel this year, according to H. J. Mathews, general manager western dines, Canadian Pacific Railway. Indications already point to the fact that an increased number of guests will take part in the activities of the world famous resort, be cause of the unusual amount of interest lodged as one of the best appointed on the American continent, will have a new $100,000 golf pavilion which will be ready early in June, and will be a notable embellishment to the course, the course itself, is the last word in golf architecture in a setting of spectacular mountain scenery which cannot be paralleled elsewhere in North America. The competition for the Prince of Wales' trophy is already drawing entries from Great Britain and the United States as well as from Canadian clubs. The elaborate scale of entertainment for guests at Banff also will include this summer a unique feature in the production of ballad operas, by the Alfred Heather Light opera company. These will be presented during the months of July and August, and will prove as great attractions as those produced at the Canadian Pacific's various music and folk song festivals.

SUDDEN STORMS

Marmora had a touch of a tornado the other afternoon which makes people pause. Such violence as has marked the storms this season, almost heralds a season of violent storms. It is hoped that no more storms of this kind will strike.

People who passed through the Regina cyclone never forgot to tell of it. Marmora's experience while much less severe, will never be forgotten.

Man feels his weakness in the face of the raging elements. However we have an attitude he realizes that there is a chance that he will be wiped out of existence though he knows that nature cannot forever rage and destroy.

IDLE HOUSE OR WORK

The old adage has proven true, "Satan still finds work for idle hands to do." It is stated that at Ohio state penitentiary there have been as high as 1200 men idle with "nothing to do."

Men are not made to be idle and they won't stay idle. The result at this prison is a series of riots and disorders, discontent.

Men locked up without work to do disinterprise. There must be prison work. Ontario prisons put their inmates to work, some study and try matriculation examinations, others work in prison industries, and others on the farm. The province has done nobly in the extension of the prison farm idea.

Over at Columbus, Ohio, the contention is made that prison labor is unfair competition with free labor. But there must be ways found to make the competition fair for men cannot be allowed to "go to pieces" in a prison.

Labor is a glorifying series of actions, it enables life in some prisons it is possible for the prisoner to make a contribution to the family which he has deprived of his help by his getting into trouble.

NOT THE LAST REGULATION

Strong opinions have been formed on parking regulations as if any regulation was the last word.

Big cities have found the parking problem so great that they realize every attempt at control is but a temporary expedient.

No one can say that the last word has been said, that the last means of expediting traffic and of permitting the parking of cars has been discovered. Such a grand ideal has to be evolved only through the experiences and trials of big cities as well as of the smaller cities.

So, no one need become offended if the scheme of parking to which he is accustomed is given a temporary setback or blow by being rejected, for neither he nor the framers of the plan can say what will be what two years hence in the matter of motor traffic control.

For some time there has been tried out the triangular parking system which narrowed the travelled portion of the street to a mere thread, which forced cars to back up to get away from the curb. In like peace now has come for the time being the parallel-curb plan. Already complaints have come to car about this method, that it allows little latitude for a car to get in or out of the curb line, that there is waste space and that very few cars can be accommodated. This but shows that no one idea is without drawback.

In yesterday's paper another method was proposed by "OLD." in which one way streets were to be designated.

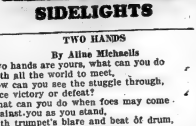
These methods and others all have their good points and it must therefore be said there is much to be said in favor of them. Parking and traffic regulations in the last analysis merely provide or ought to provide the greatest good for the greatest number, that is all that can be sought for an ideal is not to be found which does not pinch somewhere.

COLEMAN STREET HIGHWAY

Chief Kidd is to be commended in having a traffic officer watch the new highway Coleman Street (temporary) along which traffic is routed by reason of the closing of the lower bridge.

Yesterday City Traffic Officer Frink stood at the footbridge crossing of Coleman Street where Catherine Street enters and saw that motorists and pedestrians had a fair show. There are two sides to the story. Traffic is inclined to speed along that road and there is a large number of pedestrians who have to cross Coleman Street. Indeed the number includes not only the original users of the footbridge which leads to the east end of Bridge, north of Catherine street but also those who walked across the lower bridge. Doubling this number of pedestrians who have to use this street crossing where there is really no crossing, and greatly increasing the number of motors which use this roadway, shows how much the problem here has been complicated.

Many pedestrians are children, going to school on the east side, or returning from school, and large numbers are high school students.



The presence of the traffic officer undoubtedly had a restraining influence on the speed of motorists and brought added caution. He also was able to direct some pedestrians how to make way quickly across the street and not to hamper the motor traffic.

This street will doubtless have to be patrolled quite thoroughly as traffic on the roadway will increase steadily until the time of the completion of the bridge. The height of traffic is near the end of August and the bridge it is hoped will be ready before that time.

THE FOOTBRIDGE

Many citizens on the west side of the river have suggested the strengthening of the footbridge by the stretching of the unused guy wires which were loosened during floods. The bridge sways under large crowds.

The swaying of the bridge does not make walking any the more easy, and in addition it is one which is always accumulating dirt from the wood work is broken from its fastenings and anything which will strengthen the bridge ought to be undertaken at the earliest possible date.

SIDELIGHTS

TWO HANDS

By Aline Michaelis

Two hands are yours, what can you do
With all the world to meet,
How can you see the stuggle through,
Face victory or defeat?
What can you do when foes may come
Against-you as you stand,
With trumpet's blare and beat of drum,
Proud hosts at their command?

Two hands, bare hands, why this is all
God gives to any man;
He who has labored at his call
And banners in his van
Can never taste the pure delight
Or reach the highest known
To that high victor in the fight
Who wins, and wins alone!

He has two hands, a mind serene,
A heart with hope abrim,
And all that victory can mean
Is known alone to him.

A BALE OF COTTON reached this office this morning from North Carolina. Not a regular he-man size bale, of course, but a miniature bale sent through the mails with a label bearing the message: I AM FROM DIXIE. One two cent stamp brought the bale of cotton from Dixie and as a souvenir it is worthy of the alertness of the southern mind. In the same mail as the bale came a letter from Charlie Reid, big business man, (now retired) big fisherman, (still going strong), Rotarian and general good fellow. Charlie attended the Raleigh Rotary Club last Monday and his fame having preceded him, was induced to tell the tale of "Noah and Jonah and Capt. John Smith," a-talking and a-swoggin and a-swapping tall fish tales, on the banks of the Styx in the land of tomorrow, next week and forever. Cotton and tobacco are the principal products of this region and the visitor finds much that is different including the church attendance where, strange as it may seem, the men are in the majority. Beautiful scenery is a special feature of North Carolina and the landscape is dotted with trees strange to the northerner including the magnolia famed in song and story, the dogwood, Sweetgum, long leaf pines, cedar oaks in profusion and an occasional maple. Many birds greet the dawn with musical greeting, thrushes, mocking birds, wood birds, cardinals and oak birds. This is planting time in Dixie and cotton seed is being put in while tobacco plants are being transplanted. One of the most interesting things to the stranger in North Carolina is the "color line" which is drawn very distinctly with churches for colored, theatres for colored folks, street car compartments, etc., and as the white folks are so exclusive so are the blacks who do not welcome the whites to their exclusive churches and theatres, which is quite as it should be. Fine cement roads makes motoring an ever-changing delight in this land.

IN YE GOODE OLDE DAYS

First Executioner: Good friend, what say ye to a flowing tankard of ale?"

Second Executioner: "Go to, varlet! December is right nigh upon us, and I have full many tasks to do!"

First: "Full many tasks? Wherefore?"

Second: "Aye they must sire, and so, too, must that scurvy knave, John Bull, that stole the pig from Widow Crom, and likewise that villain, Dick Tanner that did make so bold as to jest of the King."

First: "And they must die?"

Second: "Aye they must sire, and so, too, must that wise-do-well jester who failed to move the Queen to mirth."

First: "But those are but three."

Second: "Aye, but there's two turned traitor to the Duke's cause, a wench that loved not wisely, and mayhap a dozen small-fry thieves".

First: "But all of these, I trow were not to die until Christmas Day."

Second: "Addlepate! Where has thou been this twelve-month? Know ye not that the King has decreed that we, his executioners, must do our Christmas shopping early!"

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 28 LBS. OF FAT

This headline is exactly true and means just what it says. Read her own letter: "I take a daily dose of Kruschen and I have lost two pounds around the waist and hips and 28 lbs. since last summer. I feel very well on it, and people tell me I look very fit. I am 5 ft. 4 ins. in height, 40 years old, and come of a stout family." Mrs. E. K.

If you are fat, first remove the cause. When your liver, kidneys and bowels can't throw off that poisonous waste which is always accumulating in your body—before you realize it you are growing hideously fat. Take Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning. In three weeks' time, get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished. Notice also how you have gained in energy and health. Your skin is clearer, your eyes sparkle with glorious health. You feel younger in body, keener in mind. Kruschen will give many fat people a joyous surprise.

NEW GOVERNOR NAPANEE JAIL

Captain W. H. Roe, Formerly of Campbellford, Takes New Position

NAPANEE, May 6—Official word was received May 1st., that Capt. W. H. Roe, D.M.C., had been appointed Governor of the Napanee Gaol, succeeding Mr. Wellington Loyst, who has held the position for the past twenty-two years.

A few weeks ago Mr. Loyst tendered his resignation, and Mrs. Loyst also tendered her resignation as matron. Mr. Loyst's resignation is particularly well known in the whole district having resided in Napanee for the past nine or ten years.

Mr. Roe—a native of Campbellford, where he received his education. He has always taken a great interest in athletics of all kinds, principally hockey and lacrosse.

Prior to coming to Napanee, he showed great interest in lacrosse, and was in his earlier years a clever player, taking a great part in the Councils of the Trent Valley League and in the Campbellford team in particular. His particular sport hobby in Napanee was hockey, he having been manager of the Napanee hockey team. He was and is a great booster for baseball in fact athletics are part of his being.

The new appointee has been a veteran of the Great War, having enlisted soon after the outbreak of hostilities. Capt. W. H. Roe was his regular rank, and with the 7th Battalion 1st B. C. Regiment in the World War, having reenlisted in the year 1914. He was with the battalion conduct medal at Passchendaele. The official recommendation for this medal as recorded in the Canada Gazette is as follows:

He took charge of his platoon early in the attack when the other N.C.O.'s became casualties, and led them to their objective. When the objective had been captured he worked untiring, consolidating the position. He eventually took charge of the Company rallied, reorganized them, and by his determination and personal example assisted materially in breaking up enemy counter attacks. Capt. Roe received a gun shot wound through the chest on Sept. 27th, 1918, at Cambrai and was in the hospital until Dec. 15th 1918, when he was invalided to Canada. Capt. Roe is at present on the headquarters staff of the Frontenac regiment and is vice-president of the local branch of the Canadian Legion.

He took over his duties Thursday morning and Mrs. Roe also took over her duties as matron.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe Will Speak at Woodstock Banquet

Now that the Budget has been brought down by the Honourable Charles Dunning, Ontario Liberals are looking forward to the address to be given next Wednesday night, May 7th., at Woodstock by the Honourable Ernest Lapointe. It is expected that Mr. Lapointe's speech will deal largely with certain phases of the tariff changes.

WILL CONDEMN LIBERAL PLANS

Vote of Want of Confidence Will Be Moved This Afternoon

OTTAWA, Ont., May 6—CP—A vote of want of confidence in the present government will be moved in the House of Commons this afternoon during the budget debate. The announcement was made by Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader in the course of his speech. This decision was reached at today's caucus of the Conservative members and Senators which extended for over three hours. Heretofore it was expected for the opening day of the discussion of the budget. Premier King will follow the Opposition leader. Crowds began to gather long before the doors of the Commons Chamber opened. Gallery attendants were busily engaged in keeping the men and women in line.

MADE ESCAPE CLAD IN CAPE

Mrs. Jean Deas Crawls Thru Window at the Hospital

HAMILTON, Ont., May 6—CP—After crawling through the window at the General Hospital and dropping to the ground, Mrs. Jean Deas, who was arrested for the Toronto police on a charge of forgery yesterday, made a clever escape from custody by walking from the hospital grounds clad only in a cape. Mrs. Deas was taken into custody yesterday on a warrant charging her with theft. Lodged for an hour in a cell at the local police headquarters, she complained of a terrible pain and illness and was accordingly taken to the prisoners' ward in the police ambulance. Here she was examined and pronounced physically fit for her trip to Toronto. She then asked to be allowed to go to the hospital washroom, and once there she escaped. She is still at large.

URGES ACTION IMMEDIATELY

out the great potentialities that lie in the development, painting a vivid picture of an Industrial Empire on the banks of the St. Lawrence, which would take care of the increasing immigration, particularly from the mother country.

"The general public should be well-informed on this problem, and I re treal and Quebec are opposed to fur point taken in many quarters by the Canadian people," he observed. "Montreal and Quebec are opposed to fur ther development since they think the ocean traffic will be driven to the great Lakes, and they will be merely a calling place for the boats." The mid-western Provinces have turned to the Hudson's Bay route which, will not be available each year until the mid-summer months owing to the ice block ades in Hudson Bay. United States is not in the same position, economically as Canada their trade has been largely international and the Panama Canal has opening a new route for shipping between the east and the west coasts. The increased freight rates on the U.S.-Railways has made a water route to the sea almost imperative.

HON. E. C. DRURY, who at a banquet at Hotel Putnic last evening discussed the St. Lawrence Waterways Development.

Significance to Canada

"The significance to Canada is much greater," he noted, "as it will mean a waterway to the head of the lakes. At present lake boats move as far East at Prescott while the ocean boats come only as far as Montreal. The great lakes now serve the three Central Provinces of Canada, wherein lies the great mineral, industrial, and agricultural wealth while in the areas tributary to that region in the United States are confined, a tremendous part of the agricultural wealth. Quoting from figures Mr. Drury indicated the marked increase tonnage in the last few years.

He observed that forty seven cities on both sides of the International boundary and even million people are served by the Great Lakes. He traced the treatment of the problem ore the last hundred years and stated that in every treaty since the United States attained its independence, the problem has received consideration. "There was always discussion as to international boundary line and a commission was appointed after the Treaty of Ghent which closed the War of 1812 to define the line. In 1830 there was a demand from the United States for access to the ocean by the St. Lawrence and as a result the Erie Canal was built after Britain's refusal.

Free Use of St. Lawrence

"The Ashburton Treaty implied that vessels of both countries could use the lake system with no regard whatever for the border line. There was an arrangement of practical cooperation in developing many channels. In 1854, the reciprocity Treaty gave the United States free use of the St. Lawrence river canals on the Canadian side while Canada was afforded similar privileges on Lake Michigan."

"In 1871 the Treaty of Washington which settled the Alabama claim gave the United States free use of the St. Lawrence river below the international boundary line." Mr. Drury emphasized that although Sir John A. MacDonald was a strong advocate for free trade, had secured his point. He left room for another technical argument in the use by the U.S. of Canadian canals. Co-ordinate his discussion into more modern times, Mr. Drury said that in 1908 the International Boundary Waterway Treaty was passed and the trend has since been to sensible co-operation, and it is now recognized as joint concern.

Refuting charges that have been made, Mr. Drury, made it clear that the upward bound traffic in the Welland Canal in the last ten years has increased five hundred and eighty four per cent. while the movement in down lake traffic has increased two hundred and eighty three per cent. "There fore the argument that canals have become obsolete, is unfounded," he declared. "In 1925 eight thousand four hundred and sixty one locks of agricultural implements were transported through Canadian Canals, while in 1927 this had jumped to thirty-five thousand six hundred and sixty-six tons. Water transportation by the Canal route has become an exceedingly important factor", the speaker continued.

Uneconomic Process

"Some small vessels do come up the St. Lawrence, but these are a very small per centage, as only boats of fourteen feet draught and two hundred and fifty feet in length, can navigate the gap between the Great Lakes and Montreal. It is a most uneconomic process as it is necessary to have transfer elevators to move the grain from the large upper lakes to the smaller inefficient lower river boats."

"The saving on grain will be four cents a bushel", said Mr. Drury, "if the St. Lawrence is developed, and it will make every lake port an ocean port."

"With the new alternating current the waterpowers become of intense value." Mr. Drury noted that there are five million horse power in the area to be developed, and four of these belong to Canada. He expressed himself as being opposed to the exportation of power to the United States.

"Horsepower reduces the cost of canals and power will pay its own way," visualized the speaker. "And Canada wan's navigation as well as horsepower." He estimated the total cost of the development of the scheme in the neighborhood of three hundred and fifty five million dollars, of which Canada would have to bear about one equivalent to the cost of the Welland hundred and nineteen million, an Canal.

"United States will reap a greater benefit than Canada because the chief agricultural areas lie within easy reach of the lakes," he pointed out. "And it should cost them more money."

"Drive a Hard Bargain"

"We must drive as hard a bargain as we can with United States in a financial sense, but we must think in terms of Canada in future years. Great Britain requires an outlet for her surplus population, and the development of the St. Lawrence Waterways will mean a great manufacturing exporting area on its banks. The cheap available electrical power will be a magnet for industry."

"The United States have approaches national basis and Canada must not refuse or delay too long or the United States will take steps to procure a water of its own as there is a growing demand for an All-American Waterway now."

The United States is deepening the Hudson River to Albany and should they propose to put a waterway through the Oswego-Allegheny Canal it will cost them in the neighborhood of six hundred million dollars. Canada would not have access to this route and it would eventually mean the extinction of Canada's merchant marine," Mr. Drury declared.

Opposed to All-Canadian Route

"There is some agitation to build an All-Canadian waterway but we would be forced to give the canal rights to the United States while if we build ours, we would be just as susceptible to United States' control We must be consistent," he said in conclusion, "and there is but one course to pursue and that is to guard Canada's rights as closely as possible and to the same time drive as hard a financial bargain with the United States as we can. We must proceed on an International basis maintaining the good-will that has always been manifest between the two countries."

Mr. A. B. Collins acted as Chairman at the banquet and introduced the speaker. Mr. Collins kept the three sergeants-at-arms, Jack Silver of Y's Men, Jack McIntosh of Kiwanis, and Jack Lile, of Rotary, busy collecting fines.

Ex-Mayor Morley P. Duff, who attended school with "Ernie" Drury, reminisced on boyhood days spent together in the town of Barrie. Mr. Duff traced Mr. Drury's meteoric career from Agricultural College to the Premiership. He closed him as the

A Good Response

There has been a fine response to the request for subscriptions to the community Park and Playground Fund. Up until today over $3,500 had been collected. The largest contributor is Dr. C. Pudlow with $500. The campaign is hardly started and it is confidently expected that the objective of about $15,000 will be reached, while many big donations have been received, small ones are very acceptable.

Ronald Baxter of Picton Collegiate won first place in the public speaking contest at Belleville, open to Kingston district. He spoke on "World Peace." WILL CO-OPERATE WITH PETERBORO SENIOR SQUAD

Peterboro, May 6.—The executive of the East Peterborough League went into session Monday night on the question of a Peterborough entry in the Central League. The following resolution was unanimously passed:

"That the executive of the East Peterborough Baseball League places itself on record as favoring the formation of a club to operate a senior team in the Central Ontario Baseball League in 1931 or, as an alternative, the application for membership in the league of a club already organized and a member of a league during the current season.

"That this executive is ready to give the fullest co-operation to any movement that will assist in bringing about the formation of a new club, provided that action is taken at a far enough time and not delayed as has been the case this year.

"That this executive suggests that a committee be appointed to wait on the City Council with the request that consideration be given this year to the matter of improving the playing field at James Stevenson Park.

"That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, the Raydons Club of the Lakeshore League and the Peterborough City Baseball League."

LOCAL JUNIORS IN DELORO LOOP

League W.ll be Governed by Rules of C.O.B.L.—Home Umpires

Belleville will not only have a senior baseball team this year, but will also have a speed of junior players.

R. D. Murray, of Deloro; J. C. Delaney, of the Junior Moore, Bridgeburg; Walter Gerow and Alan Meagher, me in the Y.M.C.A. chambers last night to form a Junior C.O.B.L. Unfortunately, so far as can be seen there will only be two teams in the league, the Junior Moore, representing this city, and Deloro Juniors. It is hoped that Trenton may enter a team in the league and on a definite schedule will not drawn up last night.

R. D. Murray, of Deloro, will be secretary treasurer. Later in the season an executive will be formed, two representing Deloro and two Belleville. In the event of a tie the president will cast the deciding vote.

The league will be governed by the rules of the C.O.B.L. with one or two minor exceptions and all players must be under twenty years of age, or have turned twenty not later than May 1st, 1930. With regard to umpires, it was decided that each team should furnish his own at home, providing they were satisfactory to the other squad.

A tentative schedule of ten games has been drawn up, five at home for each team. It is thought that the first game will be played some time after June 3rd next. It was proposed to hold the league opener on the morning of the 3rd, but Deloro representatives stated that the boys in that village would have to attend school on that day.

GRADS ARE CHAMPIONS

Edmonton, May 6—Playing one of the greatest games of their long career on the basketball courts, Commercial Graduates overcame a ten-point lead secured by the Chicago Taylor Trojans in the first of a two-game series for the International ladies' basketball championship, and last night stopped away with a verdict of 40-13, winning the round by 64-47. The game was played before a crowd estimated at over 7,000 people. With their victory the Grads retained the international championship for the seventh year in succession.

Six Unearned Runs Pave Way for Reds to Beat the Braves

Pittsburg, May 6—The New York Giants moved into first place in the National League yesterday by virtue of a 9 to 1 victory over the Pittsburg Pirates in the first of a four-game series. The defeat dropped Pittsburg from the lead position to second place.

Letty Bill Walker held the hard-hitting Pirates to six well distributed hits and aided the great single pinch of the Giant offensive with a home run over the left field wall with the bases full in the fourth.

Grantham's home run in the ninth inning scrambled for the Pittsburg tally.

Cincinnati, May 6—Two errors by Freddy Maguire paved the way for six unearned runs and Burnish Grimes as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Boston Braves 10 to 6 in their first meeting of the season here.

After the Reds had gained a six-run advantage the Braves scored five times in the sixth on five hits off Red Lucas, the last one being a homer over the distant centre field fence by Paschi-busted Walter Berger with two on.

The Reds then came back and found Ed. Brandt for five hits and four runs in the sixth, while Lucas was driven to cover in the eighth and replaced by Pete Donohue and a triple in four times at bat, driving in four runs.

"Y" Alleys

In the Intermediate League the Sweetened score to take four points from Ontario by default—and she now tied with Peaches for first place with 16 points each. Peaches have the best chance to win by taking one of four points in their postponed game with the Y's Men.

In the Junior League Black Hawks have a chance to take four points in each of their two remaining games to tie with Winnie Winkle's for first place. Teams are warned if schedules not completed as per line up, individuals and teams forfeit claim on any prizes.

The prize system in force will end May 17th and coupons and prize distribution will cease then. Those who hold coupons are asked to cooperate and turn in by May 12th as Alleys close, May 15th. Various prize winners in Intermediate league season are also asked to call at Alleys or Y office for prizes promptly.

Friday night next there will be a men's mixed doubles and entries will be received up to Thursday night.

In the meantime practice bowlers will have plenty of opportunity to knock off coupons before the season closes and several will no doubt go after them.

YACHT CLUB PLANS FOR BUSY SEASON IN 1930

Some New Boats Will be Added to the Local Fleet

ELECTIONS SHORTLY

The Bay of Quinte Country Yacht Club held a meeting last night in the Chamber of Commerce to arrange for a schedule of racing dates for the season. The election of officers was to have taken place but was postponed until a later date. A large attendance of enthusiastic dinghy sailors were out and it is expected the season will be one of the best held at the Country Club since its inception. Some new boats of the latest design will be out and there will be new enthusiasts to the sport. Invitations have been received from the Royal Canadian Yacht Club and Kingston Yacht Club for racing dates and the matter was fully considered at the meeting last night. The committee are not yet ready to give out the dates as they may clash with other clubs in the province. The day that R.C.Y.C. comes down will be the gala day of the year and plans will made to accommodate a large crowd.

ATHLETICS GAIN FIRST PLACE TIE

Indians Winning Streak is Broken by Boston—Senators Lose

Boston, May 6.—The Cleveland Indians, flushed with six straight victories, came to the end of their winning streak yesterday and lost an abnormal ball game to the Boston Red Sox, 18 to 3.

It was nine innings of concentrated error for the Indians. With their star pitcher, Clinton Brown, on the hospital list with a minor injury, the Tribe trio four men on the mound and the box hit all four of them to score in seven consecutive innings.

The terrible fifth was a trade mark with the Sox battine out eight hits off Hudlin, Shaute and Miller, to total nine runs. Shyrott tight with three bases full accounted for the extra score.

Gaston on the Red Sox mound, kept his seven hits scattered except in the first, when the Indians counted two of their runs. The third was Goldsmith's number in the seventh.

Washington, May 6—The Detroit Tigers doomed the Washington Senators to a 3 to 1 yesterday, breaking their losing streak and running the Nats' losses to three straight.

Hogsett took credit for his third win, although being relieved. The Tigers used four hurlers and the Nats three.

Sam Rice collected three singles in four trips to run his hitting streak to ten consecutive times.

Myer, Nats' second sacker, was injured in the sixth, colliding with Funk while making a double play.

Philadelphia, May 6—A dramatic twelfth inning home run by Al Simmons, heavy hitting left fielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, brought to a close a long fought contest between Lefty Grove and Alvin Crowder, of the St. Louis Browns, here yesterday afternoon, with the Mackmen copping a 4 to 3 decision.

Simmons' wallop, coming with no one on to the last inning, was the fourth four-base blow made by the A's, who scored all their runs with circuit drives made by Cochrane and Mule Haas the other.

Crowder pitched a steady game throughout and deserved a better fate, but the fielding of both Shannon and Boley who turned in some remarkable plays, kept the Browns in check.

The victory put the Mackmen into a tie with Cleveland for first place.

Be the finish of the out door softball leagues for young men. Since the boys have been showing interest in the game and it is going to be sponsor the all this year—it is quite probable, there will be at least 200 boys between the ages of 12 and 20, who will have a chance to play on the various teams in the different series proposed.

Canadian Firm Makes Largest Shipment of Home Laundry Appliances Every Made in Canada in One Day.

From their Hill St. plant, Fergus, Beatty Bros. Limited shipped two solid trainloads of home laundry equipment, the largest shipment of its kind ever made in one day in the history of Canada. Three years ago this firm made history by shipping the largest trainload of hardware to Western Canada. The two trainloads left the Beatty plants on May 3rd, for distribution throughout Eastern and Western Canada, and were the third and fourth trainloads shipped by Beatty Bros. Limited during the past five years.

Beatty Bros. Limited was founded in 1874 over 56 years ago. Their plants now cover 11 acres. Since 1921 the Village of Fergus has enjoyed exceptional prosperity through the activities of the Beatty factories. There has not been a day lost to the workmen in the Beatty plants and during the past winter they were exceptionally busy. In March, more Beatty Electric Washers were manufactured, than in any month in t he history of the firm.

The two trainloads of Beatty washers shipped on May 3rd, indicate the demand for electric washers by the women of Canada. Evidently the Beatty enjoys an enviable reputation. This reputation is very pleasing to Canadians, as this firm is Canadian throughout. Management, capital, employees, and inventions are purely Canadian. Practically every part of the Beatty washer is made in the three Beatty factories at London and Fergus, Ontario.

More than forty of the firm's branches across Canada give service to Beatty owners, dealers and dealers. The two trainloads of electric washers will be distributed in nearly every city, town and hamlet in Canada.

The two trainloads consisted of more than 4,000 Beatty washers, and over 4,000 sets of Beatty laundry equipment, which are given with these washers. This labor-saving equipment will lift the burden of washday from the backs of thousands of Canadian housewives from coast to coast.

BELLEVILLE BRANCH

Mr. A. McKinnon, 225 Front Street, Belleville, the local dealer for Beatty Washers will receive a number of these washers for patrons in Belleville and vicinity.

CLUBS REQUEST CHANGE OF TIME

Will Ask Council to go on Advanced Time on June 15.

Even though the ratepayers voted a daylight saving measure for Belleville at the last municipal election there are some who think that the citizens are making a mistake in not adopting the measure. At the present time meetings are being held among the manufacturing concerns to adopt daylight saving irrespective of the vote and work on that time through the summer months. Last night at a joint meeting of the time service clubs, Rotary, Kiwanis and Y's Men, a resolution was introduced by W. B. Deacon that as the retail merchants generally and sporting organizations favored daylight saving the City Council be petitioned to enact Daylight Saving from June 15th. The resolution was seconded by E. W. Worth manager of the American Hotel but it was stated he was speaking for 85 out of 90 employees. The chairman, A. B. Collins, put the motion and it was carried.

There is not a possibility, it is said, of the City Council interfering in the matter. The people voting on the by-law decided against the measure for the year 1930 and the council members will abide by the will of the majority. There is nothing to hinder, however, merchants and others in factories to come to work one hour earlier in the day and leave work one hour earlier in the evening, but it seems that officially Belleville time must be Standard Time.

CAUCUS MAY DECIDE DATE

Liberal Members Reported More in Favor of Appeal to Country

Ottawa, May 3.—With a caucus of the Liberal members scheduled for the first of the week, conjecture here runs high on the possibility of a definite announcement being made regarding an election this Summer. On all sides is heard the opinion that the budget, delivered yesterday by Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, was an "Election Budget". While it is conceded that the budget was intended to please the public, had in mind the possibility of an election campaign, it is by no means certain that the Government's mind has been made up on the question of appealing to the country this year.

That this veil of uncertainty may be lifted at next week's party caucus is deemed a likely possibility in political servers. Certain it is that the attitude of many private followers of the Government on the financial issues the budget was delivered. Several of the Saskatchewan members, particularly did not appear pleased this year. Many of them, however, since the budget, have been noticed to look upon an election with more interest, anxiety and enthusiasm. It may be this change of front on the part of the private members will be the deciding factor in the decision.

CAUCUS MAY DECIDE DATE

Liberal Members Reported More in Favor of Appeal to Country

Ottawa, May 3.—With a caucus of the Liberal members scheduled for the first of the week, conjecture here runs high on the possibility of a definite announcement being made regarding an election this Summer. On all sides is heard the opinion that the budget, delivered yesterday by Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, was an "Election Budget". While it is conceded that the budget was intended to please the public, had in mind the possibility of an election campaign, it is by no means certain that the Government's mind has been made up on the question of appealing to the country this year.

That this veil of uncertainty may be lifted at next week's party caucus is deemed a likely possibility in political circles. Certain it is that the attitude of many private followers of the Government on the financial issues the budget was delivered. Several of the Saskatchewan members, particularly did not appear pleased this year. Many of them, however, since the budget, have been noticed to look upon an election with more interest, anxiety and enthusiasm. It may be this change of front on the part of the private members will be the deciding factor in the decision.

LATE HERBERT HOLTOM

All that was mortal of the late Herbert Holtom was laid to rest in Belleville cemetery yesterday afternoon with full military honors. The service was held at his home, 86 Station Street, a large number of intimate friends and relatives being in attendance. The cortege was preceded to the cemetery by a firing detachment of the regiment and a firing party of 22 men under command of Sergt.-Major Bugler Cowen, and a large number of members from the Canadian Legion Post 60. The service was conducted by Rev. R. Owen, assisted by Rev. C. E. Clarke, rector of Christ Church and these two performed the last rites at the graveside. The Last Post was blown by Comrade Lessels. The bearers were six sergeants of the 21st Light Infantry, of which deceased was a member and also six honorary pall-bearers, intimate friends of the deceased. The floral tributes about the Union Jack draped casket testified in a small measure to the esteem in which the late Herbert Holtom was held by a large circle of friends. POLICE COURT

Clarence Jackson, aged 21 years, was sentenced to one year determination in the Reformatory than two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph by his Worship Magistrate Ireland, K.C., when he appeared in police court charged with a serious offence against a girl under the age of 16 years. He elected summary trial and to the charge pleaded guilty. The offence took place in September of last year on a farm in the Township of Sidney.

The girl was also charged with a similar offence and pleading guilty will spend the intervening years till she is 21 in the Ontario Industrial School for Women at Toronto. Jas. T. Daley, inspector for the Children's Aid for Northumberland and Durham was in attendance at court and gave evidence to the fact that all the children of Mrs. Pearl Jackson were made wards of the Children's Aid Society for Northumberland in 1921. The court transferred the girl to the care of Mr. Daley, who will in turn take her to the school. This procedure relieves Hasting County of the expense.

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY
Gladys Johnson

Ardeth spoke in a queer little whisper. "Oh—I don't know how to explain it. I heard two men talking at the party—Carolyn Forsythe's party, you know. They said you'd lost a lot on stocks today. They said you looked dreadful, and I had to come....."

Ken's forehead creased. "But I don't understand—how could you know that I was here, Ardeth?"

"I didn't know," she replied simply. "But I was sure. I saw you. I know that sounds ridiculous, but I did. I was looking into the mirror in Carolyn's bedroom. The lights were low and there in the glass I seemed to see you—or somehow I knew that you were sitting here at the desk. Your head was in your hands and your hair was all mussed up as though you'd been running your fingers through it. Just as it is now—"

He was watching her with startled eyes. "I can't imagine how you knew I was sitting—like that. Sitting listening to the roar of the city and thinking—"

"I know what you were thinking!" she whispered. "Oh, Ken, you would, n't."

Ken Feels Guilty

His eyes wavered, went guiltily to the window. He shook his head and drew a long breath. "No, of course not. Not really. I did go over and look out and the thought came to me how easy it would be to—to get out of it all. But I came back and sat down, thinking....., and then I heard you at the door."

He held her slightly away, looking at her with startled wonder. "And somehow you knew I was here. That's marvelous, Ardeth. It's uncanny!

She shook her head and her eyes were glowing. "Not uncanny, Ken. When two people love the way we do. You were thinking of me. I was thinking of you. There is such a thing as knowing another's thoughts when you love."

He caught her to him and his words were a groan "Oh, Ardeth, this is hell."

For a long moment they stood silent. Ken abruptly lifted his head, put her away.

"You must go back dear. They will miss you."

"Oh, Ken....., and leave you here alone!" There was heartbreak in her voice. "Oh, it's cruel! It's wrong!" she broke out desperately.

"A wicked world." His voice was cold with rage. "Damn the laws of a civilization which can get a man in a trap like this. It's not right. You, I value—trying to do the right thing. A man was never intended to brush aside his every convictions—his every code, his right to happiness, for others! Reach and take—while you have youth and beauty. Ability to take what you want strong man—that's why it's played football with me I suppose—"

The smoldering bitterness of his voice was like a curse. The girl's heart leaped—at the white strain of his face. Fear clutched her heart and she pressed herself in his arms pressing her hand over his mouth.

"No—no—nothing. Don't be bitter! It doesn't do any good. Ah, dearest, don't look like that! It doesn't seem you. Wait! Somehow it will come out all right for us!"

"Tolerance!" He had tossed his head out of the reach of that frantic hand and his voice was a jeer. "Right—Not a chance! She knows I want you and she'll not make a move. You can't fathom the 'cold-blooded devility—" He checked himself, stared at her with haggard eyes.

Her heart was pierced by the wildness of his gaze. "Oh, dearest, don't! She was all mother now—in her love. She drew his cheek down to her own, cradled his head in her arms, crooned to him.

He lifted his head, put her gently aside and tried to smile at her. That rustle hurt the girl, it was such a faint shadow of the old, gay Ken.

"I'm all right now. I'm like a volcano lately, Ardeth. Well..... time to get you back before people notice. Don't let's stir the tongues wagging, Ardeth. I have the car downstairs; I'll drive you."

Neither spoke on that return drive. Ardeth sat limply against the cushions of the seat, gazing now at her hands, relaxed like lifeless things in her lap.

Just so had she sat on happier nights—nights which now seemed to have happened very long ago to another girl. Now and then reality pierced through. Ken beside her! Surreptiously she fingered a row of his overcoat so though to assure herself of that reality.

Ken stopped the car on the dark side street at the foot of the red brick steps. Then, just as she was descending lately, her eyes clinging wretchedly to his through the dark. Like a child she held up her face for a kiss. Then she turned and was running blindly along the cement walk of the garden, arms stretched wide to feel her way.

She paused, for a frightened moment on the porch before she dared set a firm determined hand to the knob. Luckily a dance was going on and the bedroom was deserted.

It didn't occur to slip off her coat; to fluff powder on her face and dab her cold cheeks with rouge.

"In the hall she almost bumped into Tom. His anxious face lit up at the sight of her.

"Ardeth, where have you been? Carolyn and I have been looking all over for you!"

She didn't feel well so I went and lay down in the sunroom," she lied, hoping the sunroom had escaped their search. Of that room, straightening the bunch of velvet roses at her waist, "didn't want to be a wet blanket, you know."

Tom bore her away to the crowd of dancers. It was full almost, everybody!

"Happy New Year!"

The room plunged into blackness and Ardeth felt Tom's arm slip about her as dramatic stillness fell on the room.

Low and silvery, the chimes of the tall clock in the hall. Then it was struck—one hour with a deliberation which somehow chilled the blood of the girl who listened.

Two ..... Three ..... Six. Striking, this blackness and silence! Like fate, mysterious, bidding.....

Pandemonium broke loose with the last stroke. Horns and whistles, rattles and cheers.

The lights flashing up on gleaming eyes, laughing red lips.....

Tom's arms were about her, shoulders and bent to kiss her. He drew back, eyes suddenly alarmed. "Why honey—you're crying!"

TRENTON AND DISTRICT

AIRPORT WORK WILL BE RUSHED OFFICIAL STATES

Twenty Men Will Start on Thursday and More Will be Taken on

WORK ON BUILDINGS

Special by Staff Reporter

Trenton, Ont., May 6 — Within the next few days work on the new airport, which for the past three weeks has been at a standstill, will go ahead with renewed vigor, according to one of the officials at the works. He claims that starting with about 20 men on Thursday, the number will be increased until in less than two months two hundred men will be working there, and as soon as the drainage has been completed, work will start on the buildings.

The airport has been a keen disappointment to many so far, as little of the work which was expected has been done as yet, but from present indications, the work will be rushed through as quickly as possible. Local labor will be used as much as possible. Trenton and Belleville men being given the preference where there is any and this should relieve much of the unemployment in both places.

INTERESTING CASES IN TRENTON COURT

Two cases were heard in police court at Trenton yesterday afternoon that may have a far reaching effect. They came about as the result of an action that is pending in Belleville police court where Clarence Jackson of Sidney Township is awaiting trial for a serious offence. Inspector T. D. Runton of the Children's Aid Society being the investigator of the facts. Through his investigation a girl was removed from the home of Mrs. Edith Jackson and placed in another home as a ward of the Children's Aid Society. When Mr. Runton went to remove that girl, it is alleged he was struck by Mrs. Jackson and after the girl was placed in another home, the brother of the girl removed her from that home and took her to another.

Yesterday before Magistrate Gyborne, the brother was charged under the Children's Protection Act, with inducing his sister to leave her home, where she was placed and given guidance was fined $10.00 and costs in all $25.00. Mrs. Edith Jackson, who interfered with an officer in the execution of his duties was also found guilty and was fined $10.00 and costs in all amounting to $25.00. Both fines were paid.

Ernest Monroe, the unfortunate victim of an accident at the Stirling Cheese Box and Basket Factory last week, in which he lost his hand, is not making as good progress as his many friends hoped for. He is still in the Belleville hospital under the care of Dr. Alger of Stirling and Dr. McCreary of Belleville.

TANK WILL HOLD 85000 GALLONS

Rapid Progress Made on C P. R. Tank Foundation at Trenton

Special by Staff Reporter

TRENTON, Ont., May 6—If the work on the C. P. R. tank which was started a little over a week ago continues at the same rate that it is now going, the tank will be completed in record time, according to those in charge of the work. Over seventy men are engaged in the construction work, and the water pipes which will bring the water from the Trent River to the tank have almost all been laid. Work on the tank proper, which will hold 85,000 gallons of water, has reached the foundation stage, and by the time the pumps at the river are installed the tank will be ready for use.

Two trenches, one on either side of the C.P.R. tracks in the northeast Trenton have been dug for the water pipes and a great deal of digging has been necessary owing to the fact that the tank is to be located over half a mile from the nearest water supply, the Trent River. Practically all men employed on the job are Trentonians and this work has greatly relieved the unemployment situation here.

As he was sitting down he was stricken with a stroke and succumbed before medical aid could be summoned. Deceased was a son of the late Sheriff and Mrs. Oscar Proctor, being born in Brighton. BAY SHORE PARK READY FOR OPENING SOFT BALL

TRENTON, Ont., May 6.— (Special by Staff Reporter)—On Monday, May 19th, the Trenton's Men's Softball League will open at Bay Shore Park, and in the meantime the Parks Board men are busily engaged in making this fine site fit to play upon. Last year the Parks Board used as the high water in the bay completely ruined it, but under the direction of Town Engineer Mr. Fraser it has again been placed in fine shape.

After having filled in the lowest spots with ashes and other refuse, a heavy layer of sand was spread over all, and after this is rolled down, a fine surface for the whole field should be the result. The Parks Board, which consists of D. R. Purdy, chairman, H. F. Whittier, secretary, and Messrs. C. M. Richardson, Er. A. Simmons, J. M. Hennessey and T. H. Jarrett, are to be commended on the action they have taken which will give Trentonians a fine ball park within half a minute's walk of the main street.

Although a schedule has not yet been drawn up, it is expected that the League will be composed of six teams and that the first game will be next Monday night. The Senators, C.P.R. Cotton Co., Benedict-Proctor, L.O.L. and Leafs will make up the league, although it is possible that another team or two may enter. Players' certificates must all be signed and in the secretary before May 9th, to-morrow.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

So now whenever I think of this man's conversation it always think of the weasel, as I was sure I knew him. To prove it didn't, the third year I raised pheasants these innocent-looking little vermin took over two-thirds of what were hatched. You talk about worms bothering the farmers' crops; they weren't in it. Really these weasels bothered me more than the heavy mortgage that held my buildings down and took care of my insurance policy.

I watched them day and night. I shut the birds in so tight that they smothered in their pens, and yet the weasels got them. I sat on the fence and blew several into fragments with a load of shot, and would go to the house quite light-hearted; next morning likely I would find five or fifteen more dead pheasants. I put traps everywhere and caught as many pheasants as weasels. I used all kinds of bait and failed. I tried to call them, but no, no. I took young live birds and put them in a small mesh wire cage and set traps on the outside, but nothing doing. At last I brought the pheasants near the house and all hands watched them, and even then we lost some. I studied weasels night and day, but I was beaten. Where did they come from?

For there were weasels in the dooryard.

Weasels in the barn.

There were weasels in the hen-house.

Weasels all over the farm:

There were weasels in the engine-room

Weasles in the shed,

And when I went to sleep at night

There were weasels in my head.

I could see weasels on the bare ground,

Weasels in the weeds;

I could see weasels in the pheasants-coops

Doing their bloody deeds;

I could see weasels coming across the road;

I could see weasles in the pheasant-

And in the morning when I awoke

I had weasels on the brain.

For in spite of all my determined efforts the weasels were increasing by leaps and bounds. Not that they were getting more numerous throughout the whole country, but they were simply attracted here by the pheasants, and it was no use, as there would be more and more next season. I thought I would have to give in, beaten, but Mr. Weasel had run up against a determined fellow to kill, and I was dying hard; and while it is not my intention to preach a sermon, yet I want to tell you what happened.

A few years previous to this, a dear little boy whom God lent to me for a short time climbed upon my lap, and putting his little arms around my neck with his sweet face looking into mine, pleaded with me to go to Sunday school with him and mamma. I unclasped his little arms one at a time, and told him to get down and go along as it was all right; but he insisted, stating it looked lonesome to leave me at home all alone. His sincere request took such a hold on me that I could not resist, and the very next Sunday found him and his father, hand in hand, on their way to the little old red schoolhouse. And although against my will, as I had no schooling, but finally to my delight, in about three months I was teaching a class of boys. They, of course, did the reading, but I was general manager and furnished the brute force if required. It took us several Sundays to get acquainted and when we read the 36th verse of first Genesis we were very much encouraged to know that we were given "Dominion over all." Now, dear reader, lest I forget I want you to know His promise in this verse is the foundation of great percentage of my success in taming and controlling these so-called wild creatures during the last twenty years. Although the weasel had me beaten, yet my mind kept drifting back on His words, "Let man have dominion over all."

Eventually I thought, "Why did the weasel take the remnants of pheasants over to the rail pile, nearly one hundred yards away?" Yes, it was plain enough he was over there and knew that hiding place before he got the birds. Well then, if I had a trap over there I would have headed him off. So I would reverse my plans, and instead of encouraging those homes I would build them some as perfect as I knew how. So with bright prospects and a light heart I went at it again and built three weasels' houses as follows:

For each one I took four pieces of two-by-four scantling, three feet long, laid them down on the level ground, pointing these scantling east, west, north and south but leaving them about six inches apart in the centre—just room enough to set a No. 2 or 1 1-2 jump trap. Then I covered the top with old lumber and nailed it fast, leaving a hole in the centre about a foot square, right over the trap, which I covered with a loose board.

Now I had a weasel house, complete, six or seven feet square, the cover just two inches from the ground with all the runs leading to the trap like the spokes lead to the hub.

I placed these trap platforms around in the most likely places, two in the enclosure and one on the outside. I then threw pieces of stumps, rails, or anything I could find, around to make a complete weasel harbor. Then I scratched a hole about an inch deep in the centre and put in a handful of soft hen feathers, and placed traps down on them, setting the trigger of the trap very light. Then I dropped two or three light feathers on top, making it appear like a perfect mouse-nest. I now put the loose board over over. I set the traps early in the spring, but weasels did not come until I put the pheasants out. Then the real fun began for I caught three in one trap in one day; this was in the trap on the outside of the enclosure. To prove to your satisfaction that my weasel story is not exaggerated, I caught fifty-seven weasels the first summer, and they only got four pheasants; for three seasons in succession I got over fifty weasels each year. Now they are so nearly exterminated that we only keep one weasel platform, as we call them, and catch two or three weasels a year.

Please let me ask you to excuse me for writing so much to say a little, but I want you to understand just how to head off this pest, as one weasel will kill as high as twenty or thirty young fowl in one night, and to know how to catch him the night before, instead of the morning after, is worth the price of this book a good many times a year, if you have had a taste of my experience. And the great beauty of it is you cannot help yourself without helping your neighbor. Previous to my exterminating over ninety per cent of the weasels in this neighborhood, some of my neighbors were almost discouraged trying to raise young turkeys, and, in fact, any domestic fowl, but today these complaints seem to be a thing of the past and the weasel annoyance, ancient history.

CHAPTER X

Robins

Now I have tested your staying qualities, giving you the worst first, and you have come to the bright side of what the birds have taught me. After all, I have a lot to thank the cannibal birds for, as there is about thirty acres in this piece of second-growth woods where I am now sitting, and during the summer months I take a stroll down here at least once a week. This is the most perfect place for robins to build that one could find in a day's travel, yet the last four or five years I haven't seen five of their nests down here; but just one-half mile away, at my home, there were seventeen nests last summer, all within one hundred yards of my house, and outside of the thirteen maples that shade our doorway the shrubbery is very young. All thinking humanity must admit that they come there for protection from their natural enemies, as there is usually a crow's nest hidden away in this or the neighboring woods. But remember a crow knows better than to venture near my house. And the robins know it.

The chief reason the robins leave us early in the fall is because their choice food, the worms, have gone into the ground for the winter; but as soon as the worms start coming to the surface again the robins come back; and the beauty of it is they come to the same homes, and perch on the same limbs of our trees, sounding their cheerful notes to brighten the dark spots in our path. Between songs they drop down on the lawn and listen; all at once they start pecking at a grub in the grass as soon as they have got it pulled out and turned him into a robin they either listen for more, or jump up and give up another song. By catching so many mothers of the season's grubs they render us tens of dollars worth of service.

"Then about July the first the grubs that are not destroyed are under the hard, dry soil, and the robin has its second family to support; and Shame! Shame! Shame! on the man who claims to be intelligent who will slip out and shoot him because he took seventeen cents' worth of sour cherries that possibly were not worth picking. Has that man got a heart? If not let him go under the tree where the little starving young robins are calling, "Mamma! mamma! mamma!" That's the exact interpretation of these three chirps that are getting fainter and fainter. Now, my brother, let me ask you again: Have you got a heart? You love your little baby brother or your darling baby boy, and the very thought of King Pharoah makes you wicked within; but remember, as cruel as he was, he never demanded that a baby should die a lingering death as these dear little robins have to do through

GREAT ENGINEER DIED RECENTLY

George Deeks Contributed Outstanding Engineering Feats

Toronto, Ont. May 5—Thousands who have travelled in luxury over a number of American and Canadian railroad lines in ignorance of the death of the man who had made that luxury possible, if business associates and relatives had obeyed, as they would have while he lived, a dying mans injunctions. The man is George Deeks president of the Dominion Construction Company of Canada, peer of North American engineers and pioneers. George Deeks died at five o'clock Thursday morning, at the age of 72. The previous night, he had been in consultation with a number of American and Canadian railroad engineers. He returned to his home on Admiral Road to be the victim of heart seizure which fatally occurred in the early hours of a grey morning. First among the feats discovered was a letter stipulating that he should be buried quietly, that there should be no flowers or funeral ceremony and that the relatives should permit of no publicity regarding the deceased's life or death. It was out of respect for his abhorrements that the silence was permitted to be broken.

Career of steel rails on Michigan central from New York to Chicago, on the Illinois central from Chicago to New Orleans, and other American lines the pioneer on the Canadian Pacific railroad undertakings in the Dominion of Canada George Deeks was affiliated with North American railroad and electric power development over a period greater than the average span of a human life. He was born in Shrewsbury on the banks of the St. Lawrence and he swam as a boy near the rapids which his fellow engineers today contend will obtain a few years provide the world's record power harnessing plant. He was graduated from Royal Military College in 1881, in which he won the gold and silver medals for proficiency the match and was destined to be one of the few college educated engineers to be linked up with the great constructional achievements of America. He went west shortly after his graduation and in the years that followed faced more engineering problems than any one of his most pioneers. In turn he conquered the stony crags of the rockies for eventual C. P. R. occupation, laid lines for the forests of Michigan, overcame dangerous foundationless muskeg returning east in later years he damned the swift currents of the Columbia and Fraser rivers, work which engineers claim to be unique.

APRIL ESCAPADE - - - - BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

The place was deserted now. The children had finished their homework, and vanished; Mrs. O'Hara was nowhere to be seen. The kitchen windows were open, and a cool draught of air was blowing through the room; into a spotless sink a faucet dripped a few occasional drops that stood like gray pearls against the carefully wiped sink. From the stove came a wheaten smell; tomorrow's crackled wheat was already steaming in the double boiler.

The linoleum on the floor was worn in circles, down to its ugly brown warp at stove and sink, but under the table and in the corners it was pattern of red and white and egg-yellow discs and squares was still visible. On the sill of the open window was a tumbler with a score of long stemmed sweet dark violets in it, and a dozen varnished butter-cups on jointed stems.

On the little Morris chair, holding her slender shoulders in one strong arm, as in a vise, tipping back her chin with his free hand, Her tumble of soft hair fell back; she shut her eyes.

"Don't you like me to kiss you, you little darling, now?"

"I don't." She was breathing hard. "I don't like to, have the breath squeezed out of me!"

"Ah, you're such a darling!" His lips were tight and hard against hers again. "Are you a darling?" he asked.

"I don't know."

"Are you a little idiot that can't mind her own business?"

"Maybe I am."

"Baby," he breathed. "Baby, I love you!"

"Mary Kate!" her mother called, from the bedroom that adjoined the kitchen, "Did Cass go?"

"Going Mother!"

He was gone and Mrs. O'Hara came to the kitchen door, brushing her thick short, curly black hair, that was silvering at the temples, with a disreputable old wire brush. She wore a worn old gray wrapper; her feet were in black felt slippers.

"He's the salt, that one," she said simply, of Cass.

"I'm really glad you like him, Mary Kate said, feeling that she would fly into pieces.

"The girl did the kitchen for me—Tess is worth as much to me as any women ever would be!" the mother said regarding the ordered room with pride.

Mary Kate was standing still in the open doorway, her back turned toward the room, but her eyes looking out at the backyard, and the hills of the green apartment houses, checkered with little rising tiers of gold squares, in the spring sunlight. The smell of the garden advertisement flashed on her coppery hair, sank, wheeled and flashed again, surveying her well with gold.

"I simply cannot bear it," she said to herself. "I'll die. I simply cannot bear it!"

There was a frenzy upon her. She wanted to beat her hands together, beat her head against the wall. She wanted to get from all this familiar setting; get away into silence, and darkness, and strangeness, where she could forget.

"Tom took a bath," her mother said mildly, rubbing some home-made compound of mutton fat and lemon juice upon her hands.

"Mother, would you think I was crazy if I went out for a walk?"

"At fifteen minutes after ten o'clock at night?"

The telephone tingled, and as both women turned fearfully in its direction Mrs. O'Hara said breathlessly.

"That's Marti! Oh, blessed Queen of the angels—"

Mary Kate was in the passage, had snatched the received from the hook.

"Hello!" her mother heard her say. Then her voice changed. "Oh, yes!" she said, in the very essence—the very distillation, of her usual lance. "It isn't Mart, it's business," she said, in a reassuring aside, to her mother. "Yes, Chris," the new voice resumed. "No. It's all right. I was up—my mother and I were talking. Go on—"

After a moment she put the receiver back and laughed.

"It was some business, Mother," she explained, in a voice that sang. She went to the sink, and took a long drink of cold water; filled a second glass full, eyeing her mother innocently over it, as she turned about. "It is a man Mr. Rountree—" she explained.

"Well, it's a nice hour to get people out of their beds, not knowing but what it's a death message!" Mrs. O'Hara commented, scathingly.

"He said he'd put the call in an hour ago, but they kept telling him it was busy."

"Your Aunt Julia called up. Maybe that was it."

"Maybe. Shall I close up here, Mother?"

"No; you go to bed, dear. I'll do this!"

Mary Kate got a kiss that smelled of soap and lemon and mutton fat, and then went on her way upstairs.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

Chris paid for a great shaggy bunch dripping with sweetness.

"Should we go up to the Fairmont Hotel? We've got to talk."

This intimation of affairs in common thrilled her; her face was radiant.

"But we don't need a taxi!" she protested, at the curb. "The California car goes right to the corner."

"Oh, for Heaven's sake—" he said patiently. And the magic began to work again, and her senses to swim.

They went up the hill in the taxi with only monosyllable comments on the weather and the traffic, and were presently in the great wide mosaic-scented foyer of the hotel. Walking straight through the building to the big dining room at the back, they were placed at a little table by a window that looked down across red shining roofs, and the long line of the ferry buildings and the piers, to the gray waters of the bay.

The magic—the magic—the magic Mexicans began to play an old-fashioned German waltz; Mary Kate knew it; played it indeed. She told Chris it was the 1812 Fellowship Waltz. Her violets diffused their exquisite sharp, pure note of perfume into the fresh scented air. The bright rain still dropped softly incessantly, over the world below the windows; the Berkeley hills were completely blotted out, the little naval training island of Yerba Buena was amply a deeper gray block in a study of paler grays.

Chris brushed aside the dollar table d'hote; he wanted a special dinner, that Mr. Rountree had ordered for them, he said, and sand dabs, and oyster pear salad, and coffee. He asked Mary Kate if she wanted any dessert, and she answered surprisedly that yes, she wanted Neapolitan pudding, if they had it, and if not, meringue glace. She looked at him, surprised in her turn by his laughter.

"You seem such a kid, in that blue jacket's hat effect, with your hair all curly, and your ice-cream!" he said.

"But goodness knows," he added presently "that we haven't got anything to laugh at. This thing has become darned serious. I don't know what we are going to do about it—I don't know whether it can wait on Sunday or not."

"That doesn't make me mad!" Mary Kate assured him serenely.

He paid no attention to the little dissipating, and she felt crushed.

"Here's the situation," he said, while the girl asked hesitatingly if there was anything else that long, brown clever, sunburned hand again, if she were really seeing his gray eyes contract and frown, as he spoke to her, and what was hearing were really Chris Rountree's voice?

"I don't want to bring charges against this feller—" Chris began again discontentedly, and stopped.

"Bring charges?"

"Small Money—"

"The burglar? Oh, yes! Oh, no!" stammered Mary Kate.

"Well, I'm sorry," Chris said. "I certainly don't propose to hand around here indefinitely, waiting for him to get well, so that I can send him to jail."

"He's going to get well?"

"Oh, yes. It was only a flesh wound; the bullet went right through him, under his arm, and grazed a rib. They have got him all packed; he'll have a scar for a while, but that's all."

"Chris, what blessing!"

"Yes, that part of it is. But here's the catch. You see, I'm willing not to press charges, and Gordy could frame it all up that he was a friend of ours—he really is a decent sort of fellow—and that he was drunk, and have the whole thing quashed—"

"But wouldn't that be fair, for the best thing to do?" she broke in eagerly, as he paused. "We don't want revenge! We don't want him punished—"

Chris was looking at her curiously.

"You mean, you're going to get married, and I'm going to China, we want the whole thing kept quiet" he asked, in that reflective, poised, easy tone that always impressed her, that always reminded her that Chris was pre-eminently a man of the world.

Mary Kate collapsed suddenly. The glow faded out of her, and her own expression became a little strained and strange.

"Well, yes. Isn't it?" she asked flatly.

"I mean, you are going to get married, Mary?"

The voice calmed to cut into the very vitals of her being, as did his quiet gaze, over a cigarette.

"I suppose so—" she answered, a little thickly.

"Well," he went on, returning abruptly to the original topic, after a pause in which the tell-tale red crept slowly into her face, and her honest eyes never left his. "Well, the point is that this Moody wants us to prosecute."

"Prosecute!" She was once more alert and attentive.

"That's what he says. He says that he wants the whole thing to be dragged right out into the open."

Mary Kate's color faded, her eyes were round.

"What for?"

"Revenge, I suppose."

"Revenge? But revenge for what?"

"Being shot, maybe."

The absurdity of her question and his answer struck the girl suddenly, and she laughed. But it was a mirthless and anxious laugh and died immediately into gravity again.

"You mean he wants money?"

"Cicely—I didn't see him. But Gordy hinted at money. He wouldn't hear of it!"

"But Chris—" She leaned forward on the table, her eyes puzzled, gracious if a man breaks into your house, and is armed, and terrifies the whole household almost to death, at night, how dares he then—how dare he then to try to—to make terms. He's the offender, he's the one to be punished, if anyone is—"

"Exactly! And you're expressing that like a professional lecturer," Chris said when she paused. His praise brought the happy color to her face. "But that's just where he's a freak, this fellow," he went on. "He rather has us over a barrel, and he knows it."

"Is he a Socialist?"

SPRING.

Spring is a rogue,
The swelling buds spread
To a sparrows gamut of it;
Their twitterings are sped
Like old wives gossip,
With low-voiced clickering.
Spring out of winter—
Summer out of spring,
Spring is a rumor
Like water in a run,
Slowly it starts,
Drop by drop in the sun—
Until, from a rumor,
It gets leaves a-shoot,
And sweeps through the valley,
A flood of new green.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Mental control, a tight rein on emotional storms, is the soundest insurance against wrinkles and the sour-dough face. The woman who bawls out the telephone operator, who yells at the gas clerk down the butcher's boy, carries a chip on her shoulder and wants to fight whenever some member of the family hands out a harmless remark, will grow a face as wrinkled as an overripe persimmon. A great deal of family shouting goes on all the time, and most of it all should nothing. Little Swizzle-pie who doesn't shout won't ever lose her beauty petals.

Looking for the soap dish has a way of finding itself in the bath water is a bothersome exercise that has gone forever. For a moderate sum of money can be purchased a soap bowl which floats gayly on the surface of the water and in which the soap stays put. Also one's bath brush. The bath brush is not the popular institution it should be. It is only by its use that dead cells of the skin can be thoroughly removed. Starting with a soapy washcloth gives only a surface cleaning. The brush gets down to the skin.

When life gets rainy, nothing seems of much use, the tick of the clock is harassing, and something has to be done-to-prevent a complete slump, a woman should put on her seven league boots, fare forth and buy a new hat. There is nothing like a sassy lid to straighten out the knots and tangles of human life. It increases the circulation of the blood and puts sip-pep into heels. What it does to that same old face is sumpin wunnerful.

An Oil of Merit.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and pushed by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept public favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt its power to repair and heal.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

Just in case you get the impression that I am going to speak on housecleaning (such a stuffy subject) I will assure you right now at the beginning that I'm not. Of course I may mention the subject, but don't be alarmed because I won't dive beneath the surface. We are going to deal today with the subject of pictures. Every year, after the housecleaning has been done and the furniture replaced, comes the old question of finding suitable places for the pictures, and what a weary process it is when you have to put them up and take them down half a dozen times before you find an ideal place for them. For this reason I know you will welcome any suggestions I may be able to give you that will help out in this vexing problem.

Now then, dear read, just remember first that large pictures should be hung alone. They are much more effective and one wall is hardly large enough to do compliment to more than one large work. On the other hand, small pictures may be grouped together with very pleasing effect. Take for instance small works which are similar in shape, subject and treatment—as three water-colors. Four young girls, two animals—these may be grouped together with a fine result, creating an interesting unit of decoration. Pictures which are in no way related, such as a photograph of a person, a landscape and an indoor scene, should not be grouped together. Any intelligent minded person can see this point if they give it a little thought. As you have one large picture and two small ones which you would like to hang on the same wall, the best way to arrange them is to have the large picture in the centre with the two small ones occupying places on each side. If your large picture is much bigger in size than the small ones then it should be hung so that it's bottom edge corresponds with the top of the smaller frames. If it is just a little different in size then the three pictures may be placed so that the lower end are on a straight line. These rules should always be borne in mind, dear reader, when arranging pictures on your walls, in order to obtain a harmonizing effect.

Of course it is important to hang pictures where they may be seen and studied, and you should not place outstanding works on stairways or in halls. Give them advantageous positions where there is plenty of light. Small pictures require more light than larger ones. Where you wish to give the effect of quiet, the tint of the picture frames should match the color of your walls.

I hope dear reader, that the above may be of use to you, and wishing you every success in your picture arrangements, I remain,

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE.

A Widow Keeps Her Married Name

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

Will you please let me know whether I am right? Doesn't a married woman retain the name of her husband as long as she lives? If her name is Mrs. John King before her husband's death, isn't that her name after his death? So many people use their first names and I maintain that it is incorrect.

D. M.

You are right. Correctly a widow retains her husband's name, and if she is Mrs. John King before his death, she is Mrs. John King after his death. And, for instance, this is the correct form for her visiting cards which are the test of correct formality.

I agree with you that it is unattractive for a widow to use her first name after her husband's death; that is, of course, for formal uses. Such as signing a hotel register. Again here she uses her formal name: Mrs. John King.

(Mrs. Beekman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Auxiliary Met at Bridge St.

On Friday afternoon, May 2, the Bridge Street Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society convened for its regular monthly meeting.

In the absence of Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop Mrs. Droche, past president presided and the service was opened with the hymn "The Almighty Word," and the Lord's prayer in unison. An interesting report of the April meeting was read by the Secretary Mrs. W. H. Holden. In the absence of the treasurer Mrs. Dempster read the financial report for the month. Mrs. Hunt had written several letters of sympathy and had received replies. During the month Mrs. Young had made a number of visits to shut-ins and strayers. Mrs. Pearsall gave some suggestive statements regarding the Temperance situation in Ontario.

Our Mission in Angola was the topic for May and was in charge of Mrs. Stoneberg's group. Since the Church is this year celebrating the 50th anniversary of founding of mission and since our board has sent Miss Effie Jamieson to represent the Society and to participate in these anniversary services, the program was largely a retrospect of fifty years of missionary effort among the Orimbundee people. Mrs. Small read the Scripture lesson from the 35th chapter of Isaiah. The hymn "The whole wide world for Jesus," was then sung. Mrs. Pearce read an account of the founding of the mission revealing the consecration and heroism of the men and women who first entered the field, some of whom early laid down their lives that these other sheep might hear the Gospel story. Mrs. Baker spoke on the growth of the mission. In 1888 Dr. Currie gathered a half-dozen boys around him in a mud hut at Chisamba, now there are three stations with six boarding-schools for boys and nuns being over 2000 scholars, 220 village schools with 5000 pupils, 3 hospitals giving over 50,000 treatments a year, 3 churches with over 2000 members and 2000 more in Catechumen classes. The General Board has 20 workers and the Women's Board 14 workers in the field.

Miss Lorna Ridley sang "I think when I read the sweet story of old" very effectively. Mrs. W. H. Pinkie read an article on the work in one of the out-stations. Mrs. Ridley read the story of a little slave girl who was rescued and became a Christian under the influence of a real home. Miss Axford concluded the program with prayer.

A social half hour was enjoyed, the member of the group in charge serving light refreshments.

Charm of the Little Garden

The charm of the little garden is its livable, intimate quality. The most lovable home gardens are the ones that follow the idea of generations and are enclosed. As everyone knows, the very word, garden, comes from an Aryan root meaning inclosure. The garden that is quite open to the street adds interest to the neighborhood, but one loses the delight of going into the garden, of being within an inclosure set apart for a beautiful purpose.

A delightful idea for the May garden is to combine pansies and tulips, and pansies and irises. Yellow pansies with yellow tulips and purple pansies with the irises. English daisies, cream and yellow primulas and lavender violas are effective edgings for plantings of tulips and irises.

Silk Stockings Are Rare Sight

Regina, Sask.—Silk stockings and high-heeled shoes are an oddity at lonely-trading posts in northern Ontario, states Mrs. B. Green. After a seven-months stay at Revillion Freres post, Lansdowne Lake, in the wild country west of James Bay, Mrs. Green is back at her home in Regina.

"No white woman had ever before visited Lansdowne Lake," states Mrs. Green. The post is about 80 miles north of Port Hope on the Albany River. "Squaws from the nearby Indian community showed great curiosity at the presence of a white woman. They used to come and peep in at the window and grin, and some times would venture inside the house to look at me."

Winter cut the outpost the more completely off from civilization, according to the Regina woman. There was little to do but play cards, read bone-no-new magazines, and listen into radio broadcasts from Toronto and Chicago, principally. Mrs. Green came back from the post recently after having left Regina last August.

Journey from Port Hope to the post and back was made by dog team, Mrs. Green explained. From Port Hope to the railway, the snow-tractor provided means of transportation. She mentions emphatically that life in the barren lands is conducive to the best of health—and besides there was no doctor available, so it was inadvisable to be ill.

Jasty Cheese Straws

Recipe for CHEESE STRAWS

1 cup flour
1 teaspoon Magic Baking Powder
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups grated cheese
A pinch of salt
Cold water

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Rub in butter and cheese. Mix with very cold water. Roll out like pie crust, cut in strips about 8 inches long. Bake in a hot oven till nicely browned.

Here's a delicacy that fairly melts in your mouth.

Tender . . . flaky . . . tempting cheese straws!

Doesn't it make your mouth water just to think about them?

For lunch-eons, as a side dish with dinner . . . after the bridge game, or when entertaining, they're equally delightful.

And so easy to make, there's really no reason why you shouldn't serve them often.

But when making them, remember! to get the best results for every baking, always use the kind that 3 out of every 4 Canadian housewives* who bake at home say they use because it gives consistently better baking results.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

This fact was revealed in a recent Dominion-wide investigation.*

Look for this mark on every tin. It is our guarantee that Magic Baking Powder does not contain alum or any harmful ingredient.

Contract No. 4—Alum Dry Feed Equipment

The following tenders were received for this Contract:—

Patterson Construction Company Ltd., Belleville	2,524.00
Canadian International Filter Co., Toronto	2,524.00
Francis Hankin & Company Ltd., Montreal	1,382.00

Note—The Hankin Company tender is informal in that it does not comply with the specifications. The alum dry feed apparatus must be automatic while the tender submitted by this firm is for hand control which we do not recommend.

Contract No. 5—Manhole and Other Castings

The following tenders were received for this Contract:—

Patterson Construction Company Ltd., Belleville	Incomplete
Canadian International Filter Co., Toronto	5,273.02
Dominion Wheel & Foundaries Ltd., Toronto	6,499.92

Contract No. 6—Pumps and Motors

The following tenders were received for this Contract:—

Turbine Equipment Company Ltd., Toronto	5,087.50
Patterson Construction Company Ltd., Belleville	5,200.00
Canadian International Filter Co., Toronto	5,200.00
Canadian Allis-Chalmers Ltd., Toronto	8,050.00
Railway & Power Engineering Co., Toronto	7,075.00

The following tenders were received for this Contract:—

W. W. Haldimand, Montreal
in bulk	1,725.00
in bags	2,025.00
Patterson Construction Company, Ltd., Belleville, in bags	2,176.50
Canadian International Filter Co., Toronto in bags	2,176.50
Francis Hankin & Company Ltd., Montreal in bags	2,283.00

Contract No. 8—Overhead Tank

The following tenders were received for this Contract:—

Horton Steel Company, Toronto	4,695.00
Patterson Construction Company Ltd., Belleville	5,380.00
Canadian International Filter Co., Toronto	5,380.00

You will observe from the above that with one exception tenders for a similar amount have been submitted by the Patterson Construction Company, Limited, of Belleville, and the Canadian International Filter Company, Limited of Toronto. This was no doubt done with the intention that should the Patterson Construction Company, Limited be successful in getting the main contract that it might be advantageous to place all of the equipment contracts with this firm. You will observe that they have used throughout the prices given to them by the Canadian International Filter Company. We have discussed this matter at length with Mr. Patterson and the Canadian International Filter Company and on informing Mr. Patterson that we could not possibly recommend the placing of all of the contracts in his hands he stated that he would prefer that whatever contracts for equipment for which his Company and the Canadian International Filter Company had submitted the same figure that the work be placed with the Canadian International Filter Company as the remuneration in it for his Company was not sufficient to warrant his firm assuming the full responsibility.

The tender submitted for valves by Drummond & McCall Limited of Montreal covers the Blakebrough valve made in England and is the lowest tender submitted. We recommend the acceptance of this tender subject to an adjustment being made on three of the items and our approval of the necessary detailed plans which have not yet arrived. The reason for our inability to advise the closing of this contract definitely at the moment is due to the fact that if our recommendation contained above for filter equipment and meters is accepted then a less expensive type of valve will be required for one of the items which will further lower the tender sum. We would ask your authority to accept this tender as soon as we are satisfied regarding all the details submitted and the reduced price to be fixed for the altered dimension of the valve above referred to.

Regarding contract No. 7 for filter sand we are recommending that this contract be not awarded at the present time in that the sand is not required until the work is almost completed and that it is just possible that filter sand nearer to Belleville can be secured by the time the plant is ready to be put in operation. Efforts are being made in two or three places in Ontario to secure satisfactory filter sand and if any one of these is successful then the sand can be secured from this source provided the price is reasonable.

In reference to the two contracts for cast iron pipe, special castings, manhole and other castings on No. 1 and 5 which we recommend to be given to the Canadian International Filter Company this is done on the understanding that practically all of the castings for this work will be made in Belleville and this cannot be made a part of the agreement between the City and the Canadian International Filter Company.

Might we just say in connection with tenders received for this work that we have rarely seen such keen competition and such close figuring of bids which we feel therefore must be a source of satisfaction to the members of Council.

Yours very truly,
Gore, Nasmith & Storrie.

SUES FATHER-IN LAW ON ARREST

Weeping Cobourg Bride Is Fined Thousand Dollars

Cobourg, May 2—A writ for $10,000 damages for malicious prosecution and false arrest on a charge of abandoning a six-months-old infant and the liberation on bail of $5,000 of the accused, a bride of six weeks featured a case in Magistrate Flo,d's court here Thursday.

During its 10 minutes' progress the unhappy cause of the charge sat with bowed head and stayed to keep back tears. The circumstances which led up to the hearing started Yesterday in a quiet farmhouse in Haldimand township east of here when Dorothy Spears, 24, left her home and a baby of six months, child of her husband by his first wife, to die lonely in November. She proceeded to the home of an uncle in Hanvey township, north of Peterboro, and it is alleged that she travelled there in the company of a cousin, Harry Calvert.

The husband, Harold Spears, was at work on his farm and not till he returned did he find his baby alone in the house. A search of the premises was fruitless, and Mr. Spears immediately communicated with provincial police here. Investigation resulted in an information against Mrs. Spears for abandonment of the infant. Constable Carey succeeded in locating her at the home of her uncle. She was arrested and brought to Cobourg.

In police court yesterday Mrs. Spears was not asked to plead. She was defended by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., of Peterboro, who immediately announced that a writ for $10,000 would be issued. He asked for bail, any amount up to $5,000 being agreeable to him.

"If the defendant will agree to go back to her husband's home, she may go on her own recognizance," said Magistrate Floyd.

"I do not want that. According to the story she tells me it is not safe for her to go back there. She says her husband threatens to commit suicide every few hours and to ill-treat her. We will deposit bail up to $2,000 rather than agree to that," said Mr. Gordon.

"Then it will be $5,000," said Magistrate Floyd and this was given by the defendant and her father, W. A. Calvert of Peterboro.

The writ for the $10,000 damages is directed to Harold Spears, husband, and James Spears, father-in-law of the accused.

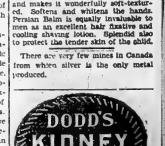
MANITOBA JOINS RURAL HEALTH UNIT PLANS

Follows Quebec, Saskatchewan and B. C. in Plan To Fight Disease

Another province—Manitoba—is to try out the 'County Health Unit' plan as a means of safeguarding rural health, Dominion-wide attention recently was focussed upon this plan, when H. E. Spencer M. P., moved that the Federal Government consider subsidizing County Health Units and the motion carried without division of the House.

Now the district of St. James, Manitoba, will establish a County Health Unit—or small, full-time medical department of health, staffed with a medical director, a nurse, a sanitary inspector and a clerk. The cost will be shared between the municipality itself, the Manitoba government, and the Rockefeller Institute.

In this way, the province of Manitoba follows the lead of Quebec, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, all of which provinces have County Health Units.



This Unit plan, which has been endorsed by scores of farmer organizations unanimously chosen by public health workers as the only workable scheme that has been evolved, to date, for giving rural areas the same protection that big cities with their expensive, efficient Departments, of Health have enjoyed for several years.

For years public health officials have realized that rural health management is totally inadequate. Canadian cities have reduced typhoid fever, diphtheria, maternal mortality, infant mortality and other menaces of life and health, until today the city is a health ler place to live in than, the country. The rural areas have not kept step with the cities because their sparser population has not been able to afford the high cost of efficient health management. Part-time medical officers of health have not been able to cope with the situation.

Some years ago, Quebec led the way to a solution of the problem, when in Beauce County a full-time unit similar to that being created in St. James Manitoba, was organized. Within two years it had saved between two and three hundred lives. Today Quebec has 17 such County Health Units and soon she expects to have 25.

The cost of such a unit is indicated by the budget of the St. James unit. This will cost $10,000 a year. St. James will provide $3,333.34 of this, the Rockefeller Foundation $2000.00 and the Provincial Government $4,166.66. The Rockefeller Foundation will contribute to render financial assistance over a period of three years, reducing the grant by one-third each year. The fourth year's operations will be financed fifty per cent by St. James and fifty per cent by the government.

According to Mr. Spencer's plan, however, St. James would only pay one-third, the remaining two-thirds of the cost being equally divided between the Province and the Dominion. The backers of the plan feel that no average rural community could not afford to pay all much as one-half of its health bill under the new plan.

GAVE TALK ON TRAVELS IN INDIA

The closing meeting of John Street Young Peoples' Society was featured last night by an unique entertainment by Mr. H. J. Graham, who delivered a travel talk on his recent trip to Africa. The meeting was also marked by a particularly entertaining musical program. Orland Pinkston president of the organization, was in the chair. The program included an instrumental duet by Miss Leona Riggs and Mr. Leo Riggs, a vocal solo by Miss Helen Luscombe, and vocal numbers by James Bankier and "Al" Bullman and an instrumental solo, by Mr. Riggs. A splendid crowd attended and all were pleased with the program. Mr. Graham in his illustrated lecture, took the audience through the jungles of East Africa, depicting the animal and human life of that country. The moving pictures were explained at intervals by Mr. Graham. The dances given by the African tribes proved fascinating. The machine was operated by Mr. Bruce Graham who was also a member of the touring party. The speaker was introduced by Albert Armstrong while "Mel" Blanchard moved a vote of thanks.

IN CONTROL OF INDIAN RIOTS

Government of India Strong Enough to Face Situation

Bombay, May 7 (CP)—The police charged a mob of weavers of a standard mill here today and dispersed them after Indians, striking in protest at the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi, had stoned them. The weavers at first were too strong for the constabulary but with the aid of reinforcements the demonstration was halted.

Cavalry, infantry and armored cars patrolled the streets of Delhi to prevent a recurrence of yesterday's rioting. General quiet prevailed.

Cables from London state Government circles in India were confident notwithstanding the widespread rioting which has followed Gandi's arrest they can control the situation here. They realize the probability of further disturbances by mobs but apparently do not expect any concerted revolutionary movement and believe measures already adopted will suffice to keep the agitation within bounds.

MR. D. MARSHALL DIES SUDDENLY

Well Known Young Man Underwent Operation Few Days Ago

J. Douglas Marshall, youngest son of Dr. O. A. and Mrs. Marshall, Bridge street east, failed to rally from a serious operation, performed at the Western General Hospital, Toronto, on Friday last, and passed away in that institution today. He was born in Belleville and educated in the public and Collegiate Institute of this city, taking a prominent part in athletics and was recognized as a star in track and field events. After graduating from the Collegiate Institute he entered Queen's University and studied one year. Deciding to enter the drug profession he entered Geen's drug store as an apprentice later joining the Doyle Drug Store staff. Finishing his apprenticeship he entered the School of Pharmacy at Toronto, this year, and had a most successful year until he was stricken with a malady that required an immediate operation from which he failed to recover.

"Doug" Marshall as he was familiarly known was popular with all of young men, his cheery smile and fine disposition made him a favorite. He was well liked by his business associates and was a progressive type of business man. In boys' work he will be best remembered as his interest in the Y.M.C.A. and St. Andrew's Church being unbounded. In the Sunday School he also achieved, teaching a class to success a class of young boys. His influence for good will remain long with those whom he was privileged to know intimately.

Left to mourn his loss are his parents, Dr. O. A. and Mrs. Marshall and two brothers, Dr. Jack Marshall, Thessalon, Ont., and Porte Marshall, at home. Sympathy will be extended to the family in the loss of the youngest son and brilliant young man.

ALBERT REID CASE IN COURT

Enlarged Case is Resumed in County Court

Albert Reid, charged with the theft of over $500.00 from his employers, the Shoudlis Bread Company, in Trenton, appeared again today after a remand of two weeks. Judge Deroche is presiding and B. C. Donnan prosecuted with E. J. Butler appearing for the defence. This case has been in progress for some time as the procedure of proving the theft is very complicated, each account having to be taken separately.

Mr. Dannord was placed in the box today for the defense to prove the contention of Reid that there was a shortage each and every day in the cash which he delivered to Reid. Danford is a bookkeeper and by his own accounting Reid was shown to be short in his cash to the amount of a little over $500.00 Asked by the prosecution as to why that should be, he was unable to make a definite reply. Reid was then placed in the box and Mr. Donnan continued his cross-examination on the cash book. Each account was taken separately and in many instances the amount of cash received was not the same as entered in the cash book.

When the court adjourned for the noon recess Mr. Donnan advised against the renewing of bail and Reid had to spend the noon hour in the county buildings under guard.

PETERBORO AND OSHAWA QUIT CENTRAL LEAGUE

Belleville And Kingston May Play a Separate Series

EFFORTS FAILED

Peterboro's View Is That Financial Obligation Too Great

Unless Belleville Nationals bail Oshawa and the 21st Battalion club of Kingston can arrange a schedule between themselves, Central Ontario will be without senior baseball this year Peterboro and Oshawa clubs are both definitely out for this year at least. A meeting was held in Port Hope last night and both clubs announced, that after repeated efforts they have found it impossible to carry on.

Whether the Belleville and Kingston clubs can arrange a series of their own is still a matter of conjecture. Local fans are hoping that something of this nature may result, rather than allow the League to lapse for this season.

Peterboro delegates stated that financial obligations from previous seasons were too great an obstacle to overcome, and they would be forced for this season at least, to give up the franchise. Oshawa said that they would not enter with the three teams President R. A. Ellacy had worked hard this year to reorganize the League, even going as far as to try and influence a New Toronto Club to come in. His efforts however, have been to no avail. A proposal was made that an Interlocking schedule with the Lake Shore League be arranged but this did not meet with general approval. Oshawa found that the opposition from softball, lacrosse, soccer cricket and rugby was too strong and they would not be permitted to enter a club. Oshawa and Peterboro did not receive the support from the fans that they deserved last year, and both clubs felt they would be tackling too great a propsitn to attempt it again this year.

The only alternative for Belleville and Kingston is to play a separate series, and what the outcome of any negotiations in this regard will be watched with interest by fans who want to see a senior team here. It all depends on the management of the two clubs.

Most fans feel that it would be an unwise move to allow the League to fall flat this year.

Mercury Hits 81 Degrees Hottest Yet

The weatherman has certainly decided to start another hot spell of weather on human nature, and instead of giving us spring weather has precipitated us into summer with startling suddenness The temperature registered today at it's highest point was as hot as a day in mid summer, figures at the pump house showing a low of 57 with a high 81. Almost overnight the trees and shrubs have opened their leaves, and a glimpse of the country this morning showed cherry and plum trees in a glorious riot of bloom. Many beautiful flower beds are to be seen in the city, and the tulips are now at their best. Dr. Emma Connor's beds attained perfection and are one of the loveliest sights in the city. If the weather continues a little longer, records will be made in produce growing by farmers in the district. The probabilities are however propheсy continued warm weather with thunder showers during the day.

3 POLITICAL LEADERS EXPEDITE BUSINESS TO PREPARE FOR ELECTION

Exciting Moment as Premier King Makes The Announcement

AT EARLIEST DATE

Voting Will Be Carried On Under Newly Revised Election Act

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—Voters will go to the polls in Canada this summer for a general election After holding the reins of off ce for four years the Government of Mackenzie King yesterday announced the new endorsement would be sought in a general appeal to the people.

The announcement followed the move by Hon. R. B. Bennett of the vote of want of confidence in Government. Premier King replied that a general election should be held this year rather than wait until the conclusion of another session The present administration was entitled to remain in office until late 1.31. "But it seemed advisable to end the uncertainty" Premier King said. In the interest of the public he said it would be brought on at the "earliest possible date."

Conferences were held last night between Premier King Mr. Bennett and Robert Gardiner leader of the United farmers of Alberta. The premier suggested arrangements be made to accelerate the business of Parliament so that polling day may be as early as the election act will permit. Sixty days notice is required before an election can be held

While no decision of the Whips was announced last night, it is understood efforts were being made to bring the debate on the budget to a speedy conclusion. If the budget can be disposed in two weeks' time, the business of House will have to be conserved for legislation now on the order papers, committee bills and other essential matters.

Voting this year will be carried under the newly revised Election Act. Instead of using provincial voters' list, an entirely new list will be prepared by enumerators going from house to house.

Woodstock, May 7 (CP)— The first pronouncement made by any of the premiers since Premier King's announcement of election plans yesterday will be made here tonight by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice. Though it is not expected he will be able to announce the election date he is expected to sound the rallying cry to Liberals for the campaign.

Bennett Declares The Policy of Canada First

LEADER'S SPEECH

Legislation Subordinating Dominion to Another Country Bad

Ottawa, May 7.—"That man is the best Britisher who loves Canada most and any legislation that subordinates this country, either constitutionally or economically, to any other country whether it be within or without the British Empire, is bad legislation."

In these words, uttered amid a veritable frenzy of approbation from his followers, Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, yesterday laid before the country the rallying cry of Canada First" upon which he proposes to fight the Dunning budget in the forthcoming general election.

With cabinet ministers firing interruptions, while Conservatives yelled, applauded and pounded their desks, the Conservative leader's definition of his stand in his temple trade proclaimed in the House of Commons a scene surpassed in uproar only by that which, a few moments later greeted the Premier's election announcement.

Mr. Bennett warmly declared his condemnation of British preference when but reading the new tariff schedules item by item he showed, quoting statistics, that in most instances there was no trade whatever between Canada and other parts of the Empire in the commodities now made duty free. He was stopped by a gale of Liberal interruptions.

"I have not said that such business may not be developed," he proceeded. "I am now about to deal with that. This I will say, in order that there may be no misunderstanding:

"If a dollar goes to the West Indies that should go to a Canadian, it is no better than if the money went to the United States."

"Shame," cried Premier King, while Liberals hooted.

"Oh, no," Mr. Bennett came back, his own supporters applauding, "we are now talking about five-cent pieces."

"I want to repeat it," he continued. "I stand for Canada and upon that issue of Canadians before any other people in the world, I am prepared to seek the suffrage of my fellow-men."

Not Budget Statement

The speech of Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, could not be characterized as a budget statement," the leader of the Opposition said. He read the definition of the term from Oxford-English dictionary and said in view of that there could be no difficulty in understanding why Mr. Dunning's address was

RUMOR JULY 28 ELECTION DATE

Ottawa, Out., May 7 (CP.)— Parliament will not likely dissolve until late in the month if dissolution is to be brought about by the suggestion of Premier King for the arrangement with all parties to expedite the budget and all other legislation. Thomasburg

Hungerford township is one hundred and ten years old and in April of this year Thomasburg attained its century.

Hungerford, according to an account appearing in the Tweed News of many years ago was surveyed in 1820 by Samuel Benson with a party of assistants. The first persons to settle in the township were Michael Donahue and Charles Conlan, who made their home near Sugar Island. Mr. Huffman soon after came to the island and Mr. Bell held to the eleventh concession near the Lodgeroom Church.

An interesting event took place in the year 1830 when Mr. Thomas Clare came into what is now Thomasburg. He had helped to survey the township and while so doing he fell into one of the streams and was almost drowned, which stream was thereafter called Clare River. While engaged in the survey he had a good opportunity to select the best location and the spring so much used and prized ever since declared his choice. He was soon followed by James Morden, S. Halsted, Thomas Graham, and Thomas Nicholl. Mr. Clare lived on the east side of the spring and Mr. Graham and Mr. Nicholl on the west side and from these three Thomases the place received its name. Land was soon taken up by other settlers among whom were John Brown, George Stokes, James Barber, John Prentice, James Corbett, John Embury, Robert Lawrence, P. Gilligan, Richard Newton and Isaac Dean; John R. Way being the first to move his shed on the ice from the Bethel neighborhood. Soon after came George Hart William and Miles Caton, David Martin, Mr. Trumpour and others. These early settlers were not long without religious services.

MISS DOROTHY ALGER WEDS JOHN VILLETORTE

St. John's Anglican Church Stirling Scene of Brilliant Nuptials Today

Dorothy Alberta Alger, only daughter of Lieut.-Col. H. Alger and Mrs. Alger, of Stirling, was th's morning united in the holy bonds of matrimony to John Drew Villetorte, of Toronto, son of Madame and Monsieur A. Guillaume Villetorte, of Salles Girmonde, France. Beautiful ceremony performed at St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling at 8.30 a.m. with Rev. B. D. Byers in charge, officiating assisted by Rev Major A. Beauchamp Payne, rector of Albena The bridal couple were attended by Miss Peggy Armour of Perth and Captain James McEachan, M.C. of Toronto.

The beautiful little church made a charming setting for the event, and was filled to the doors with friends of the bride. The choir of St. John's church augmented by friends of the bride, first entered the church to the processional hymn "Lead Us Heavenly Father, Lead Us" During the singing of the last verse the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, attended by her bridesmaid, and joined the groom and groomsman at the chancel steps. After the marriage ceremony had been performed by Rev. B. F. Byers, the choir rendered "Deus Misereatur" and the bridal couple proceeded to the Altar rail for the conclusion of the service which was taken by Rev. Major A. Beauchamp Payne. Hymn "O Perfect Love" was sung and Holy Communion celebrated. The impressive service was choral throughout with Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne of Albena at the organ.

The bride was a charming figure in a French tweed ensemble in shades of grey and blue, with large silver fox collar Her smart close fitting hat and shoes were in a corresponding shade and she wore a corsage bouquet of Orchids and Lillies of the Valley. Her attendant was smartly attired in a three piece suit of Covert cloth in brown tones, with softly shaded satin blouse to match Her hat was a close-fitting model of ribbon in tureen style and rhythm completed her smart ensemble. She carried a nosegay of butterfly roses. Mrs. Alger, mother of the bride wore becomingly tailored at a Patou ensemble of black and white with ermine collar, and black baku straw and lace hat.

After the signing of the register by the vestry the bridal party left the church to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, beautifully rendered by Mrs Beauchamp Payne

Mr and Mrs. Villetorte left immediately after the ceremony for Montreal where they will spend a few days before embarking for Europe. They will make a tour of the continent, visiting the groom's home in France, and return to Canada next Spring.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts of silver and glassware, among which was a very fine bowl of old English silver, exquisitely engraved in a floral pattern. Th's prized gift is over one hundred years old and was presented to the bride by a very old friend. Telegrams were received before and during the ceremony conveying congratulations and best wishes. A cablegram from the groom's parents in France arrived just as the bridal party returned from the wedding service

The bride's travelling dress was of fawn crepe in bolero style

WATER TO ICE IN EIGHTY MINUTES

Test Just Concluded by Kelvinator Shows Widely Varying Water Conditions

Recently, in forty-nine cities. The Kelvinator Corporation sponsored an interesting ice making test, in order to determine the efficiency of Iso-Thermic Tubes. Kelvinator's automatic defrosting device, available on the 1930 Kelvinator models.

The average time to freeze ordinary tap water was 80 minutes. In some cases, due to high mineral content of the water, it took longer than in others. Observers were invited by prominent persons, including mayors, newspaper men and officials.

Had certain cities not had water of such high mineral content, the average, it is claimed, would be much lower. For instance, the lowest record was 45 minutes; the second, 56 minutes; third, 62 minutes; and fourth, 65 minutes

Regular stock model Kelvinators were used in all cases.

This is the most extensive and most complete fast freezing test, ever conducted by a manufacturer of automatic electric refrigeration in the home. It is believed by Kelvinator officials to conclusively bear out their claims that the products of the 1930 Kelvinators, product of the world's oldest and largest exclusive manufacturer of Domestic electric refrigeration.

The dimensions of the Iso-Thermic Tubes is reflected in the statement by Kelvinator of Canada Limited, London, Ontario, that their sales of Domestic Refrinators have never been so gratifying and prospects have never been so bright

BLOSSOM TIME

Blossom time which is celebrated in song and story and in human hearts is one of the real times of the year. It is so unlike every other period of the year that it stands apart in beauty and in sentiments which have clustered around it. For some weeks there will be a paradise of white and rose, petals on the trees and blown in the breezes to the ground.

EIGHT CANADIAN MARTYRS

Eight Canadian martyrs who stood faithful unto death for the spread of Christianity will be canonized by the Church of Rome on June 29th. Every Canadian school child who has ever educated in the public or separate school knows the heroic story of Fathers de Brebeouf and Lalemont who were burned alive, of Fathers Jogues, Pacher Chabanel, Father Daniel, Father Garnier, Brother Goupil and John de Lao Lande, who suffered martyrdom in the first half of the seventeenth century.

It is such annals which enrich Canadian history.

French

These indicate what France and the French Canadian have given to Canada. Particularly fitting will be the canonization of the seven priests and the layman who gave their lives.

SUGGESTS WALK ACROSS RIVER

To relieve congestion at the footbridge and accommodate the hundreds who have to cross the Moira River daily, a ratepayer has suggested that the corporation construct a wooden walk on "horses" about two feet above the surface of the waters of the river at some point near the lower bridge, access being by means of steps down to the bridge. The water is low and this citizen said the work would not cost more than two hundred dollars.

MR. MASSEY MOVES

New York Times editorially refers to the work of the Canadian Minister to Washington who has been appointed to the Canadian High Commissionship:

"If Mr. Massey had not as Canada's first Minister in Washington represented her with such distinguished success, he would, doubtless, not have been so soon transferred to what a loyal Britisher must consider an even higher post. His going will be felt as a loss not only by Washington, where he and Mrs. Massey have been most popular, but also by the country at large; for no one among all the members of the diplomatic corps has been more sought for and honored by cities, universities and learned societies as a speaker on high occasions. It has been said of him as Chaucer wrote of the clerk of Oxenford in Canterbury Tales:

"Of study took he most care and most heed.

Naught of word spoke he more than was need,

And that was said in form and reverence,

And short and quick and full of high sentence.

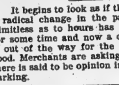
"Mr. Massey has accommodated himself to us not alone by his speech of high sentence, from ancient sources, enriched by the adventurous and commodious colloquialisms of the lands that are still new. He has shown practical sense in dealing with the complexities of border relations in commerce and politics. It has been remarked of a distinguished Englishman that he is either an Aristotelian or a Platonist. Mr. Massey is both in the sense that he is an Aristotelian realist, an efficient man of business and war record, and a Platonistic idealist, as evidenced by what he has done for art in varied forms. With it all he knows how to guide men's minds to action, which Plato called "rhetoric."

"An English poet of the same surname, Gerald Massey, wrote seventy-five years and more ago of England, the 'old nursing mother' of colonies that have become as nations:

Lo! she lifteth a bosom of glory yet

Thro' her mists to the sun and the sea.

"Minister Massey in going as High Commissioner back to the motherland that had a part in his own intellectual nourishing will carry, along with the homage of his own country, the asset of good-will which is his own person he has won for Canada and Britain while Minister in the United States. He has established a precedent which will make easier the work of his successors, though his varied talents will make it difficult to find a successor so well qualified. He is uniquely fitted to represent at the capital of Great Britain that portion of its vast empire which has no border defenses between it and its nearest neighbor. While deeply regretting Mr. Massey's leaving America, we can but be glad that we are to have such an understanding friend abroad."



NOTES

What with discussions of parking and traffic rules and talk of daylight saving again, citizens have something to think about even though the weather is so ideal that it alone should be thought of.

These extremely mild days have their dangers. They may lead the inexperienced to th water to swim where unless one is a swimmer there is great danger. The coming of summer weather is a warning for extreme care about water whether in boats or bathing.

Warm weather seems to act as an incentive to motoring. That increase in traffic tends to bring dangers in the form of errors of judgment and speeding. Motorists must recognize the rights of others. With that right upheld, motoring must be one of the most enjoyable of means of pleasure.

It begins to look as if there will soon come a radical change in the parking law here. Limitless as to hours has been the rule here for some time and now a condition is forcing it out of the way for the time being or for good. Merchants are asking hour parking and there is said to be opinion in favor of half hour parking.

ADVENTURE

By Aline Michaelis

Adventure does not mean always
A pirate ship, an angry sea,
A planet in air, a jungle maze,
Or unknown paths for you, for me,
Instead, sometimes quite close at hand,
Around this corner, down that street,
On any ship or any land
We hear Adventure's dancing feet.
In fragrant, wind-swept country lanes
We glimpse, as in the market place,
Aglow with light that never wanes,
Adventure's laughing, luring face.
So who need sigh for fabled fields,
Or wait, inert, for some far call,
When every hour of living yields
Its rare adventure to us all?

Iron Fireman makes!

IRON FIREMAN non-agitated forced underfiring is the scientifically sound method of firing. It makes firebox temperatures 500 to 1000 degrees hotter than with hand firing. Iron Fireman burns the smaller sizes of coal, which cost less per ton. It effects drastic savings in fuel bills. . . . Reduces plant operating costs. . . . Eliminates smoke. . . . Saves labor costs. . . . Gives steady, even heat and boiler pressure. . . . And Iron Fireman heating is so economical that you can afford an abundance of heat.

An Iron Fireman engineer will gladly call and survey your plant, and render a report that fairly and accurately contrasts your present results and costs with results and costs you may expect from an Iron Fireman. Ask us for this service. It is free.

STAR CLUSTERS

While the stars, therefore, possess an individual identity, there are instances in which we can know them only in masses or clusters, just as men and women, however distinct they may be in their own personalities, will often seem from the standpoint of a spectator to "lose themselves in a crowd," so it is with the stars. At certain points in the sky we find them gathered so close together that it becomes impracticable to try to distinguish them from one another. Among them is the great cluster in the constellation Hercules.—From "A Beginner's Star-Book," by Kelvin McKready.

"clusters." There are two quite different kinds of cluster; the open cluster, in which the individual stars are distinctly, and sometimes quite widely separated; and the globular clusters, in which often many thousands of stars are so densely gathered that from their great distances they present to us the appearance of a faint luminous patch, brightest at the centre. Only a few of the globular clusters are visible to the naked eye among them is the great cluster in the constellation Hercules.

THREE HUNDRED ATTEND BANQUET

Feminist Cause Supported by 9 Members of Quebec Assembly

Montreal, Que., May 7—Three hundred women were present at a luncheon held by the League for Women's Rights, when nine members of the Quebec Legislative Assembly, in favor of Woman's suffrage in Quebec, were honored. Hon A. E. MacMaster said: "I believe if the vote on the two feminist questions at Quebec in the past session had been taken just after the speeches and while the eloquence and persuasiveness of your president (Mme. Pierre Casgrain) was still fresh in all minds, the measures would have carried."

Oscar Drouin, M. L. A., denied that he was actuated by motives of gallantry in supporting the feminist cause, and declared himself not a convert of Madame Casgrain but that, long before he had observed her tact, good judgment and logic, he was a confirmed feminist. He believed it to be the moral and social duty of women to decide on legislative questions, for when woman suffrage was a part of the whole democratic movement. He was convinced that before long women would be admitted to the practice of law and to the exercise of the vote.

Those who voted for feminist measures have been described as courageous. Peter Bercovitch, M. L. A., commented. But he thought it was those who voted against them who deserved this term. "I believe that women are the life blood of a nation, that the cause of peace is in their hands, and therefore it is far more important that women should study the questions and problems of the day and sit in the councils of the nations than they should sweep up the kitchen floor or darn a sock. I am not afraid of women being removed from their pedestal by having the vote."

It was because of the active part he had seen women take in federal elections that he was a feminist, Irenee Vautrin declared. He had seen the number of votes in support of the franchise bill, as 11 on each of two occasions, and increased by a leap to 24 during the past session. The only argument now heard at Quebec against women suffrage is that the majority of women of the province are not ready or anxious for, it, he said. Many of those who voted against the measures are personally convinced of the justness of the cause, but aligned themselves against it because of the attitude of their constituents.

"But we make progress," Mr. Vautrin said confidently. He showed how Britain had first given the vote to women at 30 years of age for the great services rendered by their sex during the war. Then once when had prov ed of the intelligent use of the vote by women, and therefore in 1928, it was extended to them at 21 by a vote of 387 to 10. "Where men only vote in some cases the vote is 50, 45, 40, and even as low as 13 per cent. When women have the vote, the deputies represent a greater proportion of the electorate."

Husband and Wife Both Find Them Beneficial

Ontario Lady Strongly Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. N. Beaudrie Uses Them For Lumbago and Her Husband For Rheumatism

Madoc, Ont., May 5 (Special)—"Having obtained great relief from Lumbago by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I would never be without them," writes Mrs. B. Beaudrie, R. R. No. 3, Madoc, Ont. "I always keep two or three boxes in the house. My husband takes them for Rheumatism. He says there is nothing helps him like Dodd's Kidney Pills. We trust that these few lines may be the means of helping others."

The natural way to treat Rheumatism and Lumbago is to treat the kidneys and the natural way to treat the Kidneys is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Rheumatism is caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood. If the kidneys are doing their duty they will strain all the acid out of the blood and there can be no more Rheumatism. Therefore, put the Kidneys in shape to do their duty by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Following the Council meeting, the Council resolved itself into the Old Age Pension Board and six or seven cases were dealt with before adjourning.

Construction at Trenton

Special by Staff Reporter

Trenton, May 7.—Building permits issued for the month of April, show a decrease in building from the preceding month of March of over eight thousand dollars, a total of only $7,975 worth of building being done in Trenton during April, while $16,465 worth was done in March.

Three thousand dollars went into building a dwelling on McCan street, Mr. S. Clark being the owner.

Five hundred dollars is building a dwelling for Mr. A. O. Pidgett on Lewis street, and seven hundred dollars of alterations are being made in the Taylor building.

W. Brooks, Dufferin Ave., is building a one thousand dollar house, and John A. Simpson is building a refreshment booth on the Highway which is costing four hundred and fifty dollars. Approximately fifteen hundred dollars worth of repair work was done around the town on various homes and buildings to complete the total.

SLIGHT ACCIDENTS OCCUR AT TRENTON

Special by Staff Reporter

Trenton, May 7.—Miss Lena Kowalgok, of Trenton, was driven to Yourself Taxi from Toronto, collided with a light truck driven by Everett Brown of Trenton, about eight o'clock yesterday on Dundas street, here, and although the truck escaped practically unscathed, the car was rather badly damaged about the fenders. Police investigated but no charges were laid against either party.

On Sunday afternoon a slight accident occurred at the Overhead Bridge between Trenton and Brighton, when two cars collided. Fortunately neither machine was travelling fast at the time, and only slight damage resulted, both cars being brought to Trenton for repairs.

START BRIDGE AT SMITHFIELD

Grant Brothers Company Expect Equipment in a Few Days

Special By Staff Reporter

Trenton, May 7.—Grant Brothers Construction Company, who have the contract for the new concrete bridge which will span the C. N. R. and C. P. R. tracks between Trenton and Brighton, and which will do away with the old Overhead Bridge, which has long been called a "death trap", will start operations on a large scale as soon as their machinery arrives. It is in transit now, and Mr. E. O. Empey, superintendent of the job, feels sure that it will arrive within the next day or two at latest.

A large crane, two or three tractors, steam shovels, pile driver, and many other types of machinery, will be used on this job so that the work can be rushed through to completion. They expect to have the bridge open for use by the first of October, five months from now. It was found necessary to drive piles into the ground where the fill is to be made because of the fact that a certain type of quicksand is underneath the earth about six feet. This extends down for over twenty feet, and it is to get to the bottom of this that the piles will be driven down. They are being purchased locally and as much material as possible will be also purchased in Trenton.

SANCTION WORK ON BAY SHORE

Two Hundred Loads of Sand Additional to be Used

Special by Staff Reporter

Trenton, May 7.—Trenton Parks Board met yesterday for the purpose of passing the necessary legislation sanctioning the work now being done at the Bay Shore Park here. Part of the Board was of the opinion that the work already done was sufficient, but the majority felt that two hundred loads of sand would make the job really complete, and it was finally decided to have that number of loads. At present over one hundred loads of sand have been placed there, and a wonderful improvement has been noted already. When completed, the park will be a real beauty spot as well as a playground. The Trenton Men's Softball League, which plays their games at this park, open their season next week.

COUNTY BOWLING CLUBS' BANQUET TO OPEN SEASON

Brief Addresses By Bowlers on Success of Past Season

F. HINDLE, PRESIDENT

Over one hundred strong, members of the six bowling clubs in the County of Hastings Bowling League gathered in Wong's Cafe last night for their first annual banquet. It may have been the first banquet that has ever been held by the Association, but it certainly proved to be successful. Stirling, Tweed, Madoc, Deloro, Desoronto and Belleville, all had strong contingents on hand last night to celebrate the opening of a bigger and better year for bowling in the county.

A feature of the banquet was the few addresses, and they were all of but two-minute duration. R. J. Wray, of the Belleville Club, and L. E. McLean, secretary treasurer, last year's officers, relinquished their posts last night to Fred Hindle, of Tweed, who will be president for 1930. F. J. Hunter, who will hold the office of secretary treasurer, and W. Whaley, of Stirling, who will be vice president. A strong executive was elected, with a representative from each club in it. Tweed will be represented by the president and secretary treasurer. Descombe by C. M. Campbell, Stirling by Dr. J. R. Guthridge, Deloro by J. S. Murray, Madoc by D. J. Barrie and Belleville by R. J. Wray.

The executive met immediately after the banquet and made plans for the coming season. Tweed was'ed the regular playing night, Friday, changed to some other evening, but it was decided to carry on as last year. This however, rad'cal changes have been made in the games. Instead of playing one game of fifteen ends, two games of ten ends will be played, teams to change at the end of each end.

A Successful Year

That a most successful year was enjoyed by all clubs was the keynote of addresses by representatives of the various organizations last night. R. J. Wray, retiring president, stated that the games last year were all fought out in a sportsmanlike manner. "What we did last year," he said, "we can do again this year."

R. J. Murray, of Deloro, stated that the past year was the greatest bowling season ever enjoyed by the Deloro Club.

H. M. Rathbun, representing Desoronto, and the county executive of bowling association had done a great deal of good for bowling in Desoronto.

Fred Hindle, of Tweed, said—"I consider ourselves a live organization." He advocated the challenge system in preference to the dated schedule system now in practice. This, incidentally, was voted down by the executive.

Charles Kerr, also of Tweed, was the father of the idea of having a league. "I have met good sports in Belleville," he said. He was not, however, sure whether the county league had been of benefit to the smaller clubs.

The Rev. Rivers, representing Madoc, said that his club had been unusually successful last year. The club

NEW GREENS AT COUNTRY CLUB COURSE ARE READY

Members and visitors at the Bay of Quinte Country Club this summer will be agreeably surprised at the many changes which have taken place since the closing last fall, and every change seems to have been for the better. Always a beautiful spot, the Country Club from now on will keep up its reputation of having one of the finest nine hole courses in Ontario, as every hole is now a permanent one. The course has been practically all ready for the past three weeks, according to Mr. Sam French, the Club's genial professional, and next Sunday for the first time the nine permanent greens, which include three new ones which were not ready last year, will be played.

Trees have been planted dividing No 1 fairway from No 9 as well as all around No. 3, and a start of trees have been working hard for the past month to get everything in readiness for the first week-end. A new caddy house has been built near No. 1 tee, and the old caddy house north of the highway is to be done away with. The new tee will be in use Sunday for the first time, and the fairways are in splendid condition, even though it is still early in the season. Another improvement which will be appreciated by the members is the establishment of a place at No. 6 tee where iced drinks may be secured. Another like place will be built at the Tennis Court for the convenience of the tennis players also.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cunningham, the new steward and stewardess, have arrived at the club and are ready to cater to the wants of the members. With them as assistant they brought Miss Newson, Mr. Cunningham, who originally comes from Glasgow, Scotland, has had a great deal of experience in the catering line in the old country, and should be a deservedly popular addition to the County and also the Club Staff. He is an ex-service man, having been a sergeant in the Imperial Army, and was awarded the Military Medal and the Belgian Croix de Guerre for services overseas.

In addition to catering for any meal Mr. Cunningham will serve light lunches and tea or coffee at a small charge, at any time, which additional service should be appreciated.

Mr. French, the pro. announces that the junior members locer rooms will be downstairs in the club house, and that they will not be allowed in the senior members room at all, entrance to which will in future be made through the main entrance on the west side of the Club house. All in all, the year 1930 should be one of the best yet enjoyed by the Bay of Quinte Country Club.

LEAFS OPEN HOME SEASON WITH WIN FROM READING 6-5

Richardson with a Triple, Cote, Burke, Phillips, and Harris Bat Home Runs for Win.

TORONTO, May 7.—Peanuts, popcorn, chewing gum and chocolate bars! Programs! Programs! You can't tell the players without a program!

Ideal weather with a hot sun and 15,000 fans. And the stars win. The score was 6 to 5.

That was the opening of the baseball season down at Maple Leaf Stadium yesterday. It is not only a successful opening but a happy one for everybody but Harry Hindmarsh and his Reading Keys.

Not in years have the Leafs been blessed with such a home start. It was an opening without chattering teeth and winter coats.

The fans were able to sit and view in comfort their favorite pastime and some fans in the sunny side of the grand stand were down to shirt sleeves. Opening Ceremonies Went Over Big

The blow-off doings went over without a hitch. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways, pitched the first ball in the absence of Premier Howard Ferguson at Ottawa. He pitched several balls after shaking hands over the plate and fanned Emil Sauer, United States consul, while Mayor Bert Wemp handled the backstop duties and Controller Summerville was the umpire.

There was the traditional march by the players of the two teams to the flagpole in centre field the raising of the Union Jack and daylight fireworks The 48th Highlanders' Band was in attendance and headed the parade. It was an opening not to be forgotten for some time.

But after all the fans were there to see a ball game and they wanted to see the Leafs win. And the Leafs did win, though they were nobis in the first eight. They made more use of their hits than did the Keys and the Reading pitchers were more generous with passes than were Kyle Graham, Clarry Fisher and Nick Harrison, all three taking a whirl at the flinging task for the Leafs.

Rochester, May 7—Before a paid attendance of more than 18,000 to break the record in this city, Rochester lost its opening game to the Baltimore Orioles, 11 to 9 here yesterday.

Costly errors by Toporcer and Wilson in the ninth enabled the visitors to score their third straight triumph of the season over the International League champions.

Rochester made all of its hits in the first innings in which it did its scoring, while Baltimore bunched singles in four frames, with loose playing on the part of the home club for the 11 runs. Heinie Sand drove home four runs and had a triple and two doubles against his old mates.

Buffalo, May 7.—The Newark Bears knocked the Buffalo Bisons out of first place by taking a 6 to 4 victory in the local inaugural contest of the International League here yesterday afternoon.

More than 12,000 fans saw a battle of home runs with Windle's drive over the left field fence, scoring a man ahead, proving a big factor in the Bears' triumph.

All of Buffalo's runs were propelled over the plate on the wings of homers.

Tucker scored two ahead of him on his drive over the right field fence and Thomas also blasted a shot over the left field ramparts.

Montreal, May 7—Montreal Royals won their home inaugural against Jersey City and captured their sixth straight victory here yesterday afternoon when they pounded out a 11-2 triumph over Jersey City before a good opening day crowd of 10,500.

Brame, Grant and Doyle were his hard by the Royals who collected 16 hits to bress through to win.

Herb Thormahlen chalked up his sixth straight victory of the season limiting the opposition to ten hits, all of which were well scattered.

Sensational fielding by both sides featured the struggle. Lee Head ran his batting streak to eight straight before being stopped by Grant in the third inning.

Every Montreal player got at least one hit off the Jersey City hurlers.

Harry Balstone is Re-appointed

KINGSTON, May 7.—A special feature of the meeting of the Athletic Board of Control of Queen's University was the passing of a resolution of confidence and appreciation to Harry ("Red") Balstone, coach of Queen's senior rugby team last season, and he was asked to coach team again this year. Last year Balstone, in his first year as coach, turned his Orange fighters to the Championship.

The board also appointed Charles Hicks as the permanent secretary of the board. Mr. Hicks has been acting secretary since the resignation of J. S. McDonnell last Spring.

RULES FOR O. H. A. PLAYERS

The following should be carefully read by players wishing to become members of Ontario's hockey association clubs playing under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

No player who has changed his residence or club since January 1, preceding his playing in which that player expects to compete shall be granted a certificate unless he has satisfied the C. A. H. A. through O. H. A. of the bona fides of such change, with complete and definite information regarding the change of residence on forms supplied for the purpose by the C. A. H. A.

Written Consent of Club

In cities and towns having more than one club, a player is not allowed to change without the permission of the O. H. A. and the C. A. H. A., after having played under the written consent of his club. A player who desires to change his club or residence must first secure the written consent of his club.

In case a player under 20 years of age changes his club or residence he must secure the written consent of his parents or guardian.

When prior to Oct. 1 an employer changes residence of an employee who has had six months' continuous service prior to this change of residence, and that player still continues in that same employment during the whole of the playing season. Players receiving certificates under this clause automatically forfeit them if they leave that service.

When in the case of boys under 20 years of age Jan. 1, the parents and family change their residence and they continues to reside with his family.

No player shall be permitted to play for more than one club in the same season.

Students and Teachers

In case of a player residing in a rural district, village or police village, he must play for the O.H.A. club nearest to his residence having a team entered in the series in which he is eligible to play, it being understood that a junior player has the privilege of playing in the nearest place to his residence which has a junior O.H.A. team. A bona fide and continuous resident shall include a teacher or a student who may be absent from home and registered and in actual and regular attendance at lectures at a proprietary school, a high school, a university, or an affiliated college, providing said student satisfies the O.H.A. of the bona fides of his attendance, but such teacher or student shall elect before the date of the first association match and shall notify the O.H.A. executive whether he will play with a club where his home is situated, or with a club where the said school of learning is located.

A student leaving a town to attend a high school in another town cannot qualify under the student rule if there is a high school in his own home town of the same grade except upon application to the O.H.A. executive.

Juniors Players

A junior player is one who is under 20 years of age on January 1st, of the season in which he wishes to play. His club shall furnish the executive committee of the O.H.A. with official proof of his age.

No player shall be eligible to play in a junior series if he has during the same season played in more than one game either intermediate or senior for his club in the association series, and for the better interpretation of this clause any part of any senior or intermediate game shall constitute a whole game.

The O.H.A. executive will hold a meeting on or about June 15 to pass on players' applications for change of residence or club. All applications must be filed with the O.H.A. on or before June 13 (application forms are now available).

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY

Gladys Johnson

The weeks which followed were filled for Ardeth with a strange sense of waiting. Hushed—expectancy underlying the days find nights; a mysterious foreboding which set up a flutter in her heart—rising in her throat to stifle her.

Though what she waited for, she could not tell.

The desire to see Ken had been unbearable in the first few days. She called him up. His voice was strained and tired—even curt. He would not see her and knew he stayed away on her account.

The resignation for which she had battled so long was gone. Bitterness welled in her heart. "Fools.... fools, that's what we are—standing like three figures in a dream, afraid to whisper—or to herself. "Wasting life!"

Ardeth Felt Cheated

A sense of having missed some shoot through her, lashing her to madness. She was being cheated of the sweet and natural things of life. She thought of which were her due. And she was only asking what was right—a chance like other fortunate girls—another small Chickadee with Ken's eyes—Ken's smile.....

She set herself growing older—going through life in a prim routine; thwarted, futile, like Jeanette, but without Jeanette's merciful ability to deceive herself.

Cards had come from Jeanette during her wanderings about Europe, and finally one of Jeanette's former fiancees with her bold angular writing.

The poetry club had ended in unpopularity. Jeanette's former fiancee Jeanette and an angular spinster were touring the country now by theme. Letters, gushing, hopefully never expected, would eventually settle in Paris and become one of the restless, homeless, ex-patriated Americans which infest that good-natured city.

Widness ached the girl when she thought of Jeanette's life for her must mean more than that!

And then, on a day when it seemed that the vicious circle would never break—Tom phoned.

Tom Has Foreboding

Ever after, the scene was painfully clear in Ardeth's mind.

There had been little business that day for it was mid-Spring and pocket books had not as yet recovered from the heavy onslaught of Christmas. Mrs. Jefferson attended to all the work ing into the empty shop when the telephone peaks shrilly.

She answered hopefully, her eyes idly watching the dust motes swimming in a sunbeam, but at Tom's first words she instantly alert.

"Tom! what's the matter?"

His voice was shaking. "It isn't me. It's Ken. I just left him. Something—queer, Ardeth. It had me worried after we parted and I went back to his office. The door's locked and he doesn't answer—but I'm sure he's in there and I'm afraid—I'm afraid."

Her nails were digging in her palms but she did not feel them.

"Afraid?"

"Well, people act of go hay-wire through brooding—and Ken's been on the ragged edge lately. I'm afraid he's due for a complete breakdown—or—or something worse. Get here quick, Ardeth. You can always do something with him."

"Where?"

"His office..... I'll be waiting for you outside . Hurry!"

No need to tell her to hurry. She raced to the rear room for her wrap, flinging rattled directions to Ah Ling who was in there tidying the place. Out on the street she hailed a cab and sat with clenched hands mentally shoving the cab ahead until it reached Ken's office and she saw the stocky figure of Tom coming toward her.

As he hurried her toward the elevator he explained. "Just as I told you—I've seen Ken going to places for the last few months. I've heard it, too, from several sources but—well, we weren't as thick as we had been, you know."

Only too well Ardeth knew that it was the thought of herself which had come between the two friends for life.

"I ran into him today," Tom's low tense voice went on. "He looked like a man in hell. Ardeth and there was a sort of desperate edge to his talk which got me suspicious. He'd lost his nerve. Fastened on something—put him out, I hear. And I suppose that was the last straw—"

He stopped as he showed her ahead of him into the elevator. Ardeth was shaking and in her heart a little incoherent prayer had begun. "Oh, God .....please God.....

Down the hall, almost running to keep pace with Tom's long strides.

"We don't want to raise a row" Tom was explaining nervously. "Look like fools..... get old Ken in wrong."

A Startled Glimpse

His office. The door locked when Tom tried the knob.

"Ken!" his voice was cautiously low. "I know you're in there. Let me in, you fellow."

Silence. The heavy silence of one who pretends not to be there.

And Tom's motion Ardeth put her lips close to the crack and pleaded. "Dear—it's Ardeth! Aren't you going to let us in?"

Her heart leaped Surely—oh surely she heard a little startled movement.

She stepped back grasped Tom's arm and pointed to a window in an angle of the wall. "The fire escape goes under one of the windows in Ken's office. I can get in—"

"Let me—" He was beginning before her motion silenced him.

"No—I can do more with him—"

She had unlatched the window as not be called a "budget". It contained no estimate of the revenues and expenditures for the forthcomin year, and he challenged any man to say what the estimate of revenues would be.

This neglect struck at the whole foundation of British institutions, said Mr. Mackenzie. It is known what the main estimates were, but this had not been indicated to the House by Mr. Bennett's statement. Yesterday the House was informed it had to furnish $61,000,000 for the Canadian National Railways deficit, but no indication of that was contained in the budget. If Mr. Dunning would take as a model the great budgets previously introduced into the House, he would not be treated worth yof the name unless it contained an estimate of what amount he is likely to be secured from the proposed taxation.

Last year Canada made money. There was a surplus and the national debt had been reduced. But whatever taxes there may be must be met by the sum or ten millions of people who inhabit this country. The Conservatives would review the Government's record they would see that previous years had been increasing revenues, until last year, when revenues were decreased. In view of that the Government had a right to know what the effect of the recent legislation would be on the country's revenues. The people had a right to know what all the Government's sources of revenue would produce.

He proceeded to point out the results of fiscal operations in the last 13 months. When this was perused, the statement of the Minister of Finance that the Government had reduced taxation could not stand "the acid test of investigation."

MANUFACTURERS FAVOR ADOPTION DAYLIGHT SAVING

Will Urge Passing of By-Law to Provide Time-Saving Measure

Manufacturers of the city met at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon to discuss the adoption of Daylight Saving in the local industrial plants. The opinion was practically unanimous that the time-saving measure is imperative in order to fall in line with the district towns.

Practically every manufacturer present was favorably disposed to Daylight Saving and several of them reported that "Straw Votes" in their respective plants had resulted in an overwhelming majority for Daylight Saving.

As a result of the discussion, the following resolution moved by Tom Webster of the J. and J. Cash was unanimously passed:

"Resolved that this meeting urges the early adoption of Daylight Saving Time and that any future referendums on the subject be held on the Provincial Voters' Lists in order to give as many as possible of the people affected, the opportunity of expressing their opinion."

This resolution will be presented to Belleville City Council at the regular meeting next Monday night along with a somewhat similar resolution passed by the Retail Merchants at their meeting yesterday morning. Following was another resolution also moved by Mr Webster:

"Resolved that the manufacturers of Belleville and vicinity shall as far as is reasonable w ith their respective industries, adopt early closing in their plants until such time as the City may officially adopt Daylight Saving Time during the summer months."

Keen enthusiasm for Daylight Saving was manifest at the meeting which was attended by the following representative industrial men: Fronteac Paper Box, Reg. Monerief; Canadian National, George Stokes; Retail Merchants, Chas. Hanna; Cartlage Manufacturing Company, F. S. Wilson; Sprague Lock, W. Springer; Stephens-Adamson, O. Freeman; Mead Johnston, Edward Bernstein; J. and J. Cash, Tom Webster; Belleville Electric and Stamping, S. Wessman; Alemite W. E. Rowsome and L. Young; American Optical, Ed Worth; Bank of Commerce, E. V. Illsley; Belleville Hardware, H. Sanders; Bulwarker Breweries, Austin Whitton; Patterson Construction, Walter Patterson.

Favor Provincial Lists

The general view-point was taken that the Provincial lists instead of the local voters' lists should be used in settling this question here. "The young people should have a voice in this matter, it is not a money by-law," said one delegate. "In Hamilton one of the chief Provincial rural cities the by-law did not pass until the Provincial lists were used."

Mr. Webster was of the opinion that the City Council should be petitioned to pass a by-law for Daylight Saving for the same period as last year.

Mr. George Stokes, Canadian National Superintendent, said he failed to see how Daylight Saving affected the average railroaders as those on the road were apt to be called out at any hour. "The vote from Bleecker and Coleman Wards, last December, however, indicated that they are opposed to it," Mr. Stokes said. He said that hours were regulated in a few railway departments last year to conform with Daylight Saving".

Reg. Moncrief who acted as Chairman, said he was firmly convinced that the vote last year did not represent the true sentiment of the people.

Mr. Illsley of the Bank of Commerce said it should be an united effort of the manufacturers, retail merchants, financial and professional men, and he pledged in order to convince the City Council of the feasibility of adopting the move.

Just at this point another matter was brought to the attention of the meeting and that is the re-organization of the employees' branch or the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Illsley promised to take this matter up with the Chamber of Commerce.

Now it would not be fair for me to pass the robin by without giving you a taste of our episode experience, as while I know that by times robins will annoy fruit growers by congregating there in hundreds, yet to be fair we must consider the most good for the most people. So let us take the average farm, occupied by the cleanest of farmers, with his corn, potatoes, tomatoes, cabbages, and other crops too numerous to mention, all coming up through the clean, fertile soil. And now, like a sneaking thief in the night, the annoying cut-worm crawls out like a snail, cuts down the promising plant and then passes on to another and repeats his destructive doings. Then when he has gorged himself to the limit he will just dig himself in under the soil near the stump of the last plant he has destroyed. I have known fully one-fourth of the plants in a field to be destroyed by cut-worms in less than five days. Not that there are so many of them, but, like the weasel, each one is so destructive. Now just think of the expense and drawback to this farmer, having to replant. Moreover, the second planting never produces the same crop as the original one would have done. Here is only one of the valuable points I would explain for Robin Red Breast. For long before the average farmer is out of bed, he is in the field, hopping from one plant to another in search of these worms; and when he gets two or three in his throat he flies across to his family, and in less than three minutes he is back again.

Yes, I know there are men who will tell you the robin will not eat cut-worms and that his song is no better than that of a warty toad. One of these statements is just as true as the other. The robin will eat about all kinds of worms I have ever seen excepting the dirty tobacco worm, and we must give him credit for that. Last summer I saw a young robin not over six weeks old, picking up ants at the rate of sixty per minute. What does this mean to your lawn?

Some years ago a boy was passing my house carrying a .22 rifle. I heard him shoot, so I went out to the road and investigated; went and picked up the old robin that was fluttering a few rods away, and as she gasped her last, two cut-worms spued out of her mouth and a third was squirming on the ground near where I picked her up. After this boy and I had had a heart to heart talk about the matter we separated, but that afternoon I found another robin with a bullet in its back. The next day was Sunday, and at ten a.m. I was sitting near the window trying to read, and as I glanced out I saw a young robin, dying, under the fir tree. I soon found a nest above it, and two larger ones were still alive, but cold. We brought them in, pest and all, and when they got warm I dropped a little cut-ard in the mouth of the larger one. This caused number two to realize that there was some to be had and he, too, awoke from his slumber, and apparently put all his strength into his neck and jaw muscles. So opened his mouth so wide that it seemed to split his head completely in two. The little bits they choked down them immediately gave them strength to want more, and as soon as they were satisfied, we covered them up with good warm flannel. When we returned from church about an hour and a half later and uncovered them, one flopped right up on the edge of the nest and just squelled for more cut-tard, and in two days they were out, hopping around us for their feed. In fact I have never had robins accept us as their step-parents so quickly as these two did. Possibly when they were in their unconscious state they forgot their original parent to a certain extent. In two weeks they were flying all over the premises, but always came to the back door and chirped when they got hungry, and would stay until some one fed them. Finally they would follow us men over to the factory and often have I seen them sitting on the mill, watching the stream of clay run out, now and then turning their heads sideways as if they doubted their best friend's ever having seen them slight on a hot gas pipe; this always made me laugh, because they got off long before one had to tell them, "For next one might see of them they would be out at the clay bank, watching the man dig clay, now and then picking out an earth worm. But they never went near any stranger that happened around, and this point alone brought us a lot of satisfaction, just to know that these two innocent robins, that had scarcely been acquainted with us a month, knew every person that worked around the premises.

These two stayed with us until October and disappeared. But they taught me a lesson: What a great mistake I had made, through life, by keeping my pets shut up, as one bird having its liberty to go and come at will is worth a hundred in a cage.

Well, that is some years ago, but we have had pet robins ever since. The last seven or eight years, strangers have been coming here by the thousands, and all want to feed our robins; we, of course, let them, and sometimes I will not feed them myself for days. But I often see them come flying when a bunch of strange people arrives. Why? Just because they are fed so much by strangers; that is why.

A laughable thing happened last summer. I heard the lady of the house scolding and shooing with the broom; I found that little Jasper had left the screen door open and three of his pet robins had flown in and rounded on his mother-in-law's choice picture that hangs in the cold storage room, or parlor, as some call it. When Jasper found what the noise was about he just took the feed tin and went in, gave the pan a few taps with his spoon, and the birds at once flew down into the pan, the boy walked out with it and ended all confusion.

In 1917 we had twenty-one pet robins, and I have often seen little Jasper start for school and have to come back and feed his pets to keep them following him away.

The way we get them is when some neighbor gets stuck on his cats are going to kill his young robins around his place, we get them. If you want to try it, keep them warm, in a small dry-goods box. When you have had them about an hour, open their mouths and dip a little custard in them. The second day they will open their self mouths and in about three days they will accept you as their step-mother and you can let them out. Be sure and keep them good and warm, and feed often.

We put tags on some of our robins, and odd ones returned the next spring and they are always more than glad to, for when they return they will not let you near them. This fact I do not understand. My last experiment was to take two robins out of a nest of four where the parent birds were the tamest of any I knew; that was Jasper and got one out of a nest of two, with exceptionally wild parents. The birds were about the same hour. But the two were tamer in two days than the one was in four.

CHAPTER XI

The Bluebirds

To the average middle-aged person of America, this bird needs little or no introduction, for he is found in nearly they are now quite rare. In fact I was speaking to a young lady quite recently, and she has camped out every summer for the longer part of her life (but, of course, like all other girls at her age, she has just passed sixteen), passed it camping also, of course) and she told me she had never seen a bluebird. They have decreased very materially—five per cent the last forty years, but when I was a boy they were as common as the robin is today. They usually arrive from the day in the spring, bringing with them their beautiful note that no musician has ever been able to imitate correctly.

In 1908 I put up three or four nests for them and in 1909 a pair came and built in one. These nests were made of wood; so it occurred to me possibly they would build in tile houses, and I set to work and made six or eight different varieties of drain-tile, and to my surprise and delight the wrens and bluebirds both took to the tile houses and have never built in the frame one since. Last summer I put a wren house up on Monday and the very next morning Mrs. Wren had her nest half built; or in other words, the tile house had hardly gotten cold before the started carrying in sticks.

I had one pair of bluebirds raise their first family for three successive years in the same house. So last summer I made about two hundred bluebird houses, taking this, their choice house, as a pattern. This pair of birds I know raised three families one summer, but they usually raise two. The same house does for both wrens and bluebirds; if the wrens use it, they will keep the large hole up with sticks so the English sparrows cannot get in, but of course leaving door-room enough for, themselves, as they are so much smaller. This is my experience, but whether others will take to the houses away from here, where they are not accustomed to seeing red tile and a red man, remains to be proven.

In case they do not, there are several remedies. The houses could be painted any color in order to get them coming. But first of all, leave it to the birds, as they seem to know whom it was put there for. So, knowing that the birds prefer them, and as the tile house can be made for about one-fourth of the cost of the wood, and, like Pat said about the stone coffin that will "Do",

Miss Kate Bray Departs for New Position at Buffalo

WEST HUNTINGDON, May 7.—(By Mail)—Mrs. Sharpe and Mrs. Lee of Belleville, visited their parents here recently.

Mrs. M. A. Adams has returned to her home after spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Wilson.

Those who spent Easter in our town were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vice and Douglas, Miss Mildred Hunt of Oshawa, Mr. Bernard Truscott of Georgetown, Misses Margaret Kingston, Gladys Cooke, Marjory Bray, Jean Fargey of Belleville, Misses Annie and Bernice Haggerty and Mr. B. Haggerty of Toronto.

Miss Mary Haggerty of Queen's returned home on Monday for the holidays.

Miss Katie Bray was accepted as a pupil nurse at Buffalo Hospital and expects to leave on Thursday. We wish her success.

Mrs. J. J. Wilson and Miss Evelyn McIroy visited the former's daughter, Mrs. Arthur Dunn at Kendal for a few days returning home on Saturday.

Miss Ruth Brough of Ebro Hill, visited her aunt, Mrs. Sandy McCurdy for the holidays.

Miss Evelyn Wilson spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Miss Katie Bray.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brough, Ebro's Hill on Sunday.

Sorry to report Miss Georgia Pitcher is ill.

"Sure it will last a lifetime," I know I have secured a home run for the birds.

The removable top can be left off all winter if preferred. The wet and frost will rid the house of mites and so forth, which sometimes kill fledglings. By the use of these little fireproof bird dwellings around our home, the wrens have become far more plentiful than English sparrows, as the latter know they are not wanted. Although we have four or five pair of bluebirds each year, yet they do not seem to multiply as rapidly as the wrens; I believe this is due to the many cunningness in barring the door against these cruel "flying rats." This experience has compelled me to believe that the sparrows are responsible for the decrease of our lovable bluebird. I say "lovable," and so will any person who is acquainted with the bluebird, for they expose their love for humanity by preferring to build their nests near our dwellings so they can rely on our protection.

APRIL ESCAPADE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

"He must be. Gordy says he's a well-educated man, and appears to have agreeance against everyone who's got a little money. He says he holds that we have a perfect right to punish him, for house-breaking, but that he has his right, too, and if he wants to give the whole thing publicity, and show us up, that's his privilege."

"The scut!" Mary Kate commented simply.

Gordy saw him in the hospital, Sunday, and sort of tried to reason with him—said there'd be no trouble about clearing him, and so on, but he said he didn't propose to be let off his sentence because of the privilege of rich—?

But all he shows up—the only person he hurts—is me!" Mary Kate, who had been thinking fast, said belatedly.

"Well, exactly!"

"But—good heavens!" she whispered, turning white.

"Now, don't worry," said Chris quickly. "We're not going to let you get it for that, no matter what we do. Evt this poor sap has an hallucination—you're not having potatoes?"

"Nothing." Her appetite was dead. Her eyes were bright with fright.

"He has an hallucination," Chris resumed, "that some stupid intrigue is going on here that night—he kept him ing Gordon says, that it was a married woman of the upper circle who was there—"

A sharp exclamation of indignation and disgust escaped the girl. She put up her head, her chin high.

"Well, exactly, that's what I thought," the man commented on her unspoken protest. "But he probably got the ideas from Solshevik journals, or from the movies."

"But why didn't someone tell him the truth? Tell him I am just an office employee of Mr. Roumtree—"

"Gordy did. But he didn't believe it. He kept saying that he would find out who the woman was, because he could identify her, and that when he found out who it was, he would expose that just as prominently in the papers as his case was exposed!"

"Well, the papers wouldn't run a lot of nonsense on his say-so," Mary Kate protested, uncomfortably, proudly.

"No, not exactly. But you know how they play up society stuff, and mystery stuff."

"But how could he say that he could identify me—he never saw me—he never saw me!"

"He says he did."

"Well, but you know he didn't! The room was pitch black, and he was just at the window—opening the shutter—"

"But he might have seen you before Mary, Mightn't he have seen you at Gordy's perhaps—followed us home—?"

"Oh, my God!" she whispered, stricken. "Of course he might."

"He says that whoever you are he can find you—"

"To murder!" she ejaculated, incredulously.

"No. To blackmail." Chris could almost laugh at her consternation. "He must be a scoundrel," he repeated.

"And then," she urged, thinking aloud, "But then, if he knew that I was only a working girl—"

Chris was watching her interestedly as she formulated her ideas. Now he said.

"That brings you to exactly the point that I gathered he reached with Gordy. He said—and this is the whole point; he says he wants five minutes talk with you and after that he'll give the whole thing up. Gordon will get him off, with the police, I'll pay his hospital charges everything will be dropped."

"He only wants my name and address!" she exclaimed suspiciously.

"The police have those, anyway."

"Yes, that's true."

A silence while she looked into his face, questioningly, confidently.

"What do you think I ought to do, Chris?"

"Well, dear—" The word slipped out, but he caught himself. "Well" he amended it, "the situation is queer. Gordon says he sees a nice, quiet little wife with a little mental twist on the subject of rich persons. We don't know, of course, that he didn't see you that night, at Gordy's and follow you with some crazy idea that you were being well, abducted—that you needed —will protection."

Getting into rather deep water, Chris smiled cheerfully.

"And what next!" he added, with an eloquent gesture of the hands.

"So that perhaps if I went, and talked to him?"

"The point would be, if you could." She reflected frowningly; raised her head proudly.

"But of course I could."

"You mean you would do it?"

"If you thought it would make any difference." Mary Kate fumbled with her salad mechanically, laid aside her fork. "I've done so much—" she reminded him, simply, forlornly.

"But what twist he's got in his mind I don't know," Chris resumed presently. "But Gordon distinctly said that he was convinced from the way the man acted that he really would be reasonable with you. He treats rich persons as if they were reptiles."

"I could just say to him that I am a working woman, from a poor family." Mary Kate mused aloud, "and ask him not to bring this terrible trouble down on my mother and the children."

Tears filled her eyes; she lowered them, and bit her trembling lower lip.

"Honestly, I don't see what harm it could do," Chris reassured her, sympathy barely veiling his satisfaction.

"I know Socialists," she said thoughtfully. "One of the girls here in the office goes to meetings."

Well, then if he is a Socialist, and you say that you have some interest in Socialists, isn't there a reasonable hope that he would agree to forget the whole thing?"

"I suppose so," she agreed doubtfully.

"Would you go up there, right after luncheon, and just walk in on him?" Chris urged, in a quick, confidential fashion. "I'll jump you into a taxi, and we'll be up there in ten minutes, and fifteen minutes later the whole thing will be over! Will you? What harm can it do?"

Her unquenchable sense of adventure rose strong within her. The orchestra was playing a stirring march now, and the rain had all but stopped; a soft wind was flashing over the world, and the bay was arched by a tremulous rainbow. Gulls flew white past the hotel window; the bay and sky had turned from gray to blue, and over the former masses of whipped-cream clouds were moving rapidly.

If she went to the hospital, she would be that much longer with Chris, and she would please him.

"All right!" she said.

"Good!" Chris approved.

Both began to do justice to the salad and in two minutes both were talking animatedly again.

"What a day!"

"Look at it! It looks as brilliant to be true. And mother made me wear all my rain outfit this morning."

"Ah, well, so did everyone else. Let's hope it's an omen, Mary. Let's hope it means our little unpleasantness is all going to be beautifully settled."

"Oh, let's hope!"

CHAPTER XXIII

"This time next week," Chris observed deliberately, "I shall be six hundred miles out to sea!"

"Think of it," she said, raising her composed glance. But her color flicked a trifle just the same.

"And when do you marry your Casimir Kessling"

"Imagine your remembering his name!"

"Why shouldn't I remember his name? I'm very much interested in him, or rather in his prospects. And of course I'm going to send you a wedding present!"

She felt heavy, silent again.

"Are you mum's do that."

"Oh, why not?" He was trying to keep the tone light and casual, but her gravity defeated him.

"Because I don't want you to, Chris." And again she raised her quiet sapphire-blue look to his own. Chris felt checked.

"Well, I don't want a Russian Countess," he said. "But I rather hope I'll find my meetings, too, one of these days."

Mary Kate went on with her ice, without responding.

"We've had a great adventure," Chris said presently, "and if it ends safely today, as somehow I think it will, it will be something always to remember."

"Won't it?"

"Oh, I forgot this." He drew out a small neat pocketbook and extracted from it a folded check, opened it, and pushed it toward her across the table. Mary Kate looked down at it.

"Was it to reministed in the bond?" she asked slowly.

"Not quite. But please—?" He was really pleading, he was really stirred. Upon his face was the kindest, most simple and genuine expression she had ever seen there.

With the faintest possible shrug she accepted the stiff oblong bit of paper and put it into her bag. She made no other acknowledgment of it.

"When are you going to be married?" Chris asked.

The churptness of the question surprised her. A veiled, mysterious look came into her eyes.

"When am I? I don't know," she answered.

"It'll be soon, won't it? I mean, May or June?"

"I told Cass—" Mary Kate rested her elbows on the table, and smiled faintly, narrowing here yes, looking in to space. Her chin rested on her linked fingers. "I told Cass on Sunday that it would probably be never," she admitted.

There was an instant quick frown on Chris' enfolding face.

"What'd you mean by that?"

"I meant—what I said."

"But why?"

She had gone further now than she had intended to go. But a spirit of daring, a confidence in her own discretion pushed her on

"Suppose I had—met somebody—I liked better?" she asked, simply, with an innocent, wide-eyed smile.

"You mean," Chris altered it, faltered a pause, "you mean suppose you had met someone you thought you liked better?"

Mary Kate considered this.

"What's the difference," she presently demanded, "between liking a person, and thinking you like a person?" "You could be deceived about it, couldn't you?"

"Well—" She was thinking aloud again, searching for words. "You could find out you had been mistaken, I suppose," she conceded.

"Exactly. And then you would say to yourself, 'I gave up what was real, for what was imitation,' wouldn't you?"

"I suppose you would."

Chris lighted another cigarette. The waiter brought a small tray, with silver and green crumpled bill on it, and Mary Kate watched the lean, big, nervous brown hand handling them, pushing some back straightening others into the neat leather pocketbook.

"Shall we go?" she asked.

"Just a minute. There was something I wanted to talk about."

Chris was in no hurry. The girl stared out at the panorama beneath the window without seeing any of it. She had made a certain shy overture to him and he had repulsed it. There was no time to think about it, to analyze just how deep the wound might be. The only thing to do was to salve the unbearable moment with movement, change, a new start in the conversation.

"How long have you known the man you are going to marry?"

"Cass? Oh —" She reflected. "Since last fall. Or at least, the family has known him a long time, my Aunt Julia knew his mother. But he and I have been friendly since last fall. And then —at Christmas—it sort of began—"

"I only known him six months," she concluded, after a pause.

"What's his business?"

"Real estate."

"Is he doing well?"

"Oh, very. He's going in, with another man, for himself next year."

"There ought to be a lot of money in that, out here," Chris said.

"There is. But of course there's competition, too."

"Will you live in town here?"

"Nothing is settled." The girl's tone was not encouraging.

"Will you let me know?"

"Why, yes,' she agreed politely, raising her eyes to his face.

"You don't seem enthusiastic, Mary."

"I don't—" she answered, her eyes black in his. "I don't know what I've done, or what I havent done, to make you—take that tone."

"What tone?" Chris asked, with a steady look.

"The tone of —putting me out of things, disposing of me," she answered, with a little hesitation, and a heightened color. "The tone that makes me feel—as makes me know that you feel what a gulf there is between us."

"Did I make you feel that?" Chris asked, mildly, scaling down at the cigarette ash he knocked free with the tip of a little finger. "

"You know you did."

"I'm sorry," he said simply. There was a silence before he added, "But is not it there?"

"The gulf?" Mary Kate's eyes were blazing, her cheeks hot. She laughed briefly, without mirth.

"Well, isn't it?"

"I suppose it is."

"I mean we know it is," Christopher persisted, "It is no use trying to you that I'm sorrier about this than anything else that ever happened in my life," he began again, and stopped.

WISH

To run in a cool wind
Down a green hill;
Then to stop slowly,
Quietly and still.

To listen to bees,
The small chatter of grass,
The whisper of waters
That definitely pass;

To watch a leaf fall
Through the bright air,
And a pale willow
Shake out her hair.

To feel all the beauty
Slide like a dart,
Keen-edged and radiant,
Into my heart.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Medical reports show that there are more knock-kneed girls than boys. It is all as clear as air. Boys have more muscles; they eat simpler and more nourishing food than girls. Deficiencies of bone structure are overcome. Because of exercise, the digestive furnaces fire up better nutriment in the blood is properly distributed and the building processes of growth go on normally, as they should. Straight legs must get an early start. Let the mamma take notice.

Properly fitted shoes don't have to be "broken in." When shoes cause pain it is because the shoes are too full of feet. One size wider or longer or a different last, will provide comfort. Tight shoes cause headaches. Anyhow, chiropodists say so.

The expression of the face has an effect upon the flexible muscles and soft tissues. Faces are always in the making. The mouth is especially susceptible. A dour mug gets that way in time. The corners of the mouth never droop if there is high courage and strength of character. Smile up and step lively.

The bust is firm and round when chest muscles are strong. Women pay almost no attention to chest development, which is to be deplored, since it brings along fine shoulders and a well-shaped back, all arm movements that pull hard upon the fibers will strengthen chest muscles. The lifted chest permits deeper breathing. Deep breathing brings glints into pretty eyes and luscious coloring to the cheeks.

Persian Balm is irresistibly appealing to all women who appreciate charm and elegance. Its use keeps the complexion always clear and beautiful. Tonic in effect, stimulates the skin and makes it wonderfully soft-textured. Softens and whitens the hands. Persian Balm is equally invaluable to men as an excellent hair fixative and cooling shaving lotion. Splendid also to protect the tender skin of the child.

Spring was a sensation
Late though lingered the snow,
That the sap stirred not at the whisper
Of the south wind, sweet and low;
Never yet was a spring-time
When the buds forgot to blow."

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

Spring hosiery is important in considering the costume you will wear this season. Do you remember the time when "flesh-coloured" stockings struck the fashionable world? Remember the rows and rows of violent pink hose seen in the daily stroll about town. It was most distressing. Then there was a re-acting towards beige and for a season or so the same monotonous shade of beige was exploited. Now there seems to be a delightful variety about hosiery. The introduction of gunmetal shade was a happy thought on some-one's part. Black and white and certain greys are decidedly hard to wear, their solid tones making even the best-formed legs look large.

Gun-metal, in sheer qualities for evening, and in heavy weight for rainy day wear is a great favourite. It will be even more so this year as it is the perfect complement to the black costume which the young sophisticates are adopting.

Last summer, sun-tan hose swept the style centres and it was really a very perplexing problem to decided on whether the girls were wearing stockings or merely a generous coat of tan. The manufacturers aided the deception by producing seamless hose. I doubt if there was one pair of white hose worn last summer to every nine of the sun-tan hue. With white shoes it was surprising how well that shade blended.

This year deeper shades, almost brown, are shown with all kinds of fancy names, with mauve and rosy tones for evening wear.

The latest thing is lustre-less hose. Have you noticed that many young people have been wearing their chiffon hose inside out? It takes away that bright shine, now, however, hose are being made that have a dull finish, and smart New Yorkers have been raising the fashion news. So if ever since it was first announced.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

The Women's Sphere

Mexico City—Newspaper Excelsior's unique effort to find Mexico's most prolific mother has brought an entry from Leonicio Chavarria and his wife, who during the forty years of their wedded life have been the parents of thirty-seven children. All but the first born were twins.

Ottawa—Their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Viscountess Willingdon attended by Mr. E. C. Melville, Captain R. J. Stresifield, A.D.C., and Capt. V. Blundell, A.D.C., have returned to Government House from the West.

Mrs. L. Guthers Straus, wife of Nathan Straus, philanthropist, died at her home in Mamaroneck, N. Y., on Sunday. She was 77 years old. Mrs. Straus had long assisted her husband in the many charities he undertook after his retirement in 1914 from the dry goods business in which he built up a fortune of many millions.

London—King George and Queen Mary will return to Buckingham palace from Windsor today to prepare for the most brilliant and busiest social season in recent years at the British court. It was said the King would probably take the saluto on horseback at the ceremony of the trooping of the colors on his majesty's birthday, June 3. He also was expected to resume his early morning riding in Rotton row, Hyde park.

Capetown, South America—When Lady May Cambridge returns to England at the end of this year she will probably pay a round of calls to some young married women with whom she shared the privilege of being bridesmaid when Princess Mary was married in 1922.

During Lady May's absence in South Africa, all of her seven bridesmaid contemporaries have married. One of them was the Duchess of Fife. The youngest bridesmaid but one—that distinction being Lady May's—was married a few weeks ago in a London registry office.

You Don't Need Help to Pick Up Gloves

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. This is not exactly etiquette, but do you think a rather dark blue and a bright red would clash? (I caused a lot of commotion by sewing a set of red cuffs and collar on a sort of royal blue dress.)

2. Is it proper, or permissible, when a girl drops a pair of gloves or something, unseen by her escort, to tell him about it, or just pick them up herself?

I could see—in my mind's eye—that this might be a very questionable combination of colors! Of course it is difficult for one who has not seen the exact shades to pass judgment on the combination—but it does sound a bit more like a striking combination in a banner than one that we would choose for a dress. And if the combination caused a "lot of comment" it probably needs revision. Nowadays we have become so ensemble conscious that we have to be more careful than in older days when not so much attention was paid to color-combinations.

2. I don't see much point in a girl's making such a fuss about picking up something that she has dropped. It seems the natural thing to do to pick up what we have dropped, and not call for assistance in such an unimportant detail.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Miss Fairfax Speaks up for the Young

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

From time to time girls write me letters about the wisdom of leaving homes which they begin to find intolerable. A flat, the expenses of which are to be shared by one or two more girls, looms as a sort of promised land.

Very often the old home which seems so deadly, so destructive of happiness or opportunity is a motherless one. The gentle soul who "understood" and acted as a buffer state between all the contending elements has passed and an older sister, an aunt, or an in-law presides over the establishment that represents anything but neutral territory.

Before me is a letter written by a girl who says her mother is dead and two elder sisters make life "hell on earth for her." They hang up the receiver when poor little Cinderella's friends ring up the telephone, they tell lies about her to their father, and they snub and insult her and her friends without cause.

Naturally, Cinderella wants to go away from a place where she is made so unhappy, she wants to go and live with a girl friend who has that sanctuary—a flat. But Cinderella is engaged to be married and expects to have a home of her own within a very few months. And as she has asked very frankly for my advice, I'm going to tell her to try to put up with the disagreeable sisters till that happy day when she walks proudly out on the arm of her husband.

Marriage is a pretty serious business—though you mightn't think so from the way people hop in and out of the divorce court. It looks better, in fact, it is better form for a girl to be married from her parents' home. If either parent is living, than from a girl friend's flat.

In this important venture she steps off on the right foot when she marries from her own home, and there is no more disturbing factor as to why Mary Smith or Emily Jones was married from a girl friend's apartment than she had a perfectly good home of her own. She doesn't wish to herald it to a gossipy world that her sisters made it too hot for her—there are always inquiring friends to ask the reason WHY?

So, among the good wishes I send to Cinderella is that of endurance, particularly, as she will not have to endure long.

Again, girls, with both parents living, write to say that they cannot stand their homes. They want to go away because they are homesick at home. Their parents do nothing to make life pleasant; they aren't modern, they don't approve of latch-keys they're grouchy and disconsolate when young friends appear.

Making due allowance for the state of mind of young people who find themselves thwarted, parents are implored to remember the time when they themselves were young. To remember that youth is the time of home-making, that if they bolt the door against it unduly, their children will hold them responsible when it's too late to remedy such mistakes.

Older and boys would do well to keep in mind the fact that some day they too will not be modern that similar faults to those which seem so glaring in their parents may seem just as hard to bear when the third generation appears.

Time is no respecter of persons, as someone has said. You too, are the ancients.

Mother-Care Never Ends

By Constance Cameron

A mother approached me the other day wearing a look of immense satisfaction. "Thank goodness, I can begin to live my own life again, Norma and Eleanor are almost through high school and can take care of themselves now. It is such a relief not to have to be home at four o'clock every afternoon and worry about the children crossing the streets any more."

Many worries do disappear, to be sure when the young ladies of the house take the responsibility of their clothes in order, or getting their lessons done without motherly proddings, crossing traffic safely and so on. But, the wise mother knows that even though these childish things have passed, other problems have come and will continue to come for some years to replace them. And with these problems the children need as much, if not more help than with the problems of their earlier years.

The problems of adolescence are more complicated and more subtle to deal with than the problems of childhood, because adolescence is a period of inhibiting, or hiding from the world one's real feelings, one's new and fath omless feelings. And the mother who feels that she is through because the children are almost through high school is like the man who turns back just when his objective is in sight over the hill.

If you play golf you know the importance, the stress which is laid on the two words: "Follow through." These three two words apply just as importantly to child training.

As the child's interests are broadening, so must the parental interests broaden. Their efforts must include community work, the up-building of organizations where the adolescent youths can relearn social adjustment, just as they learned the rudiments when they entered a nursery school.

Adolescence is a social period. A wholesome mingling with the opposite sex should be engineered and fostered by the parents. The doors of home should be open to young friends. The basketball team's victory should be a point of interest to mother as well as daughter. Sympathetic interest in all wholesome activities should be offered by the parents. The adolescent, as well as the younger child needs the influence of a good Summer camp.

The frivolous adolescent should be understandingly and patiently encouraged by parents to read worthwhile things, while the "bookish" young man or woman should be tactfully encouraged to mingle with his mates that a good balance can be maintained in each case.

The mother of an adolescent boy should encourage little home gatherings where the boy's girl friends are invited into the home. Many a youthful mesalliance can be diverted into wholesome channels when a boy sees a girl against the backdrop of his own home culture and atmosphere.

The almost grown children need you just as much as the younger ones. Don't desert your ship when she is almost into port. Sometimes docking is more dangerous than riding an open

Wellington

Wellington, May 5 (By Mail)—Rev. W. J. Bradbury, Montreal, Field Sec. of the General Board of the Church of England in Canada, took charge of the service at Christ church, Hillier, Sunday morning. In the absence of the rector, Rev. Canon A. L. McTear. He took as his text, Prov. 22-6. "Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it." His remarks were based on Sunday School work and he appealed for the best educated and most consecrated men and women to come forward and help in Sunday School work. He stressed the great importance of child training which can be best done by having good wholesome religious atmosphere in the home and by parents bringing their children to Sunday School where they are taught to worship God and submit themselves to the training of their teachers in the instruction of the Bible and learn the ways of our Saviour that they may grow up good citizens of our land and of the Kingdom of God. He said Canada has a great asset in lands, forests mines, etc., but her greatest asset was her boys and girls and the noblest work that can be done is to teach and train these children. Parents and teachers must come forward to take their responsibilities. If children are trained as they should be to combat against the evil forces of today.

Moslems and Hindus Riot Over Reprisal of Moslems to Close Shop

SHOLAPUR, India, May 8.—(CP)—Twenty-five persons were killed and more than one hundred injured in serious rioting here today. Six police stations and the magistrate's court were burned by rioters, who destroyed all the liquor shops in town. The clash grew out of demonstrations protesting the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi, Indian civil disobedience leader.

At Bombay the situation was repeated generally quiet with the exception of some rioting between Hindus and Moslems at Amalner. It started when a Moslem shopowner refused to close the store as a protest against Gandhi's arrest.

Fire at the cotton depots at Sewri caused a loss of seventy-five thousand dollar. There is no indication of the blaze being incendiary.

Gandhi Removed

London dispatch from Bombay said Gandhi had been secretly removed from Yeroda prison, Poona to Purandhar, the scene of the famous fortress, twenty-five miles away.

BOMBAY, May 8.—(CP)— Nalanni Morarji, member council of State for Bombay, has written Viceroy Lord Irwin resigning his seat in protest against Gandhi's arrest.

Stoney Point Residence Is Fired By Lightning

Trenton, May 8 (By Special Staff Reporter)— The heavy electrical storm, which passed over Belleville centred over Stoney Point, a few miles south and west of Trenton. A frame house owned by Joseph Gibson and the contents were totally destroyed, the house being struck by lightning. The loss is estimated at $5000,00 partially covered by insurance. Mr. Gibson is employed on a dredge in Eastern Ontario and Mrs. Gibson and the family were alone during the storm. The bolt of lightning struck near the chimney and the house was soon a mass of flames. Neighbors responded to the alarm but were unable to remove any of the furniture due to the speedy headway of the blaze. A heavy downpour of rain accompanied the electrical disturbance.

EAST ONTARIO WILL PROFIT BY RAINFALL

Farmers Should Have a Really Good Year Says Representative

SWEET CLOVER

Big Acreage Increase in Peas and Red Clover

Last night's rain will be a great boon to Eastern Ontario, in the opinion of Mr. Harry Hanson of the Federal Seeds branch here. "The crops", he said to a representative of The Ontario Intelligencer this morning, "are doing very nicely. In my opinion the farmers, in this district at least, should have a really good year."

The dry weather, Mr. Pearson pointed out, was excellent for the heavier land that has to be seeded with grain. The lighter soils, however, were badly in need in rain.

Clover has not come through the winter in good shape in this district. With the exception of sweet clover in the Peterborough district, the rest is practically all gone.

There is a big increase in the acreage of peas and also red clover this spring. "There will be a very large increase in these two," said Mr. Pearson, "especially in the latter crop."

The "yielding" potentialities may come through the winter in fair condition. The fall wheat on well drained lands is looking excellent, on the low land, it has been about fifty per cent killed.

Milk Shortage

Cheese manufacturers complain that there is a decided shortage of milk. This is attributed to the fact that there is a scarcity of feed "why", one cheeseman of the press yesterday, "some farmers are feeding their cattle on timothy, and there is little milk in that." A number of cows have been turned out to pasture and there is little call for calves, so that some calves have grown so large it takes two cows to feed them.

Reports will be given by the various chairmen and presiding officers of women organizations connected with the "Y". Election of officers will be taken by Rev. MUTINY PERSISTS IN OHIO PRISON

Two Convicts Were Accidently Shot By Guards

Columbus, Ohio, May 8 (CP) — Two convicts were killed early today when a machine gunner on the roof at Ohio Penitentiary accidentally discharged his weapon at the convicts sleeping in the stockade. The convicts were listed as Albert Freeman, Frank Ross, both of Cleveland. Flames from the tents set afire by the convicts last night destroyed 58 tents where the convicts had been stationed since the disastrous fire last month. One hundred and fifty convicts had been placed in the cells on a diet of bread and water for refusing to work shortly before the fire occurred last night in the stockade. The additional guards men were quartered to prevent a break for liberty.

DIVORCE BILL PUT THROUGH HOUSE

Col. Arthurs' Amendment for Hoist Also Meets Defeat 100 to 83

Ottawa, May 8.—As surely and as steadily as a reaper reduces a field of grain, proponents of the Ontario divorce courts bill last night moved down the last attempts to blockade this measure, and won for it the final approval of the House of Commons by 100 votes to 83.

Victory came to J. S. Woodsworth, the Winnipeg Laborite who sponsored the bill, only after four hard-fought divisions, in which opponents of the bill tried every expedient in their command to delay or defeat it.

The bill, which will end the hearing of Ontario divorces by the Senate Divorce Committee and will provide for courts for that purpose, now goes to the Senate where its success seems assured. The Senate, in fact preceded the House in advocating divorce courts and two or three times in previous sessions carried courts establishment bills, only to see them defeated in the House.

Magnolia blooms by hundreds adorn seven foot tree on the lawn of Mr. E. F. Dickens, 179 Ann street. This tree is five years old and last year had 135 blooms, but reached the 200 mark this year. The tree is evidently thoroughly acclimatized.

The flowers are white with a purple tint in the centre and resemble large tulips.

Mr. Dickens informed The Ontario Intelligencer that he welcomed any visitors to enter the premises and view the blooms at close range.

NEWSPAPER OFFICES FLOODED BY ALLEGED "NEWS" LITERATURE

The waste paper basket has become about the most interesting and most necessary adjunct of the modern country newspaper office. Not a week goes by that we cannot fill our basket with circulars and booklets and all manner of matter alleged to have news-value but quite readily categorized as attempts to secure free publicity for companies and institutions who are well able to pay dividends to their share-holders, but who skimp on their allowance, if they make any allowance for their publicity. The chance of this matter getting into these columns it something like the camel getting through the eye of the needle. It simply can't be done.—Deseronto Post.

Tells Woodstock Rally Liberals Furnish Party of Canadian Unity

Woodstock, May 8.—The Dunning budget, hailed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe as a "budget not of the East, not of the West, not for the farmer, not for the workman nor the manufacturer ,not for Saskatchewan, not for Quebec, but for all Canada, for a nation," last night was the keynote of the address of the Minister of Justice.

Mr. Lapointe spoke in the Armouries at a complimentary banquet tendered by the joint Liberal Associations of North and South Oxford, to Hugh Allan and Thomas Ceylan, the two sitting members, before a cheering throng of 800. He delivered in Ontario his first speech of the election campaign. He spoke for over an hour, his French-Canadian-tinged English, warm with his sincerity, enraptured in the picturing. His address was broadcast over a chain of radio stations in Toronto, London, Ottawa and Montreal.

He carried his audience through the years of Canadian history, following the life of Liberalism, exalting it by recalling its accomplishments. He described it as a policy, the exponents of which could command the confidence of the people

REGULAR ADMISSION

PRINCESS MARY LOOKS AHEAD

Princess Mary is apparently taking long views in connection with the careers of her children. Gerald Lascelles, her younger son, is only 5 1-2 years, but it is stated that, if nothing occurs to cause a change in plans, he will becomes a navel cadet at the Royal Naval college, Dartmouth, eight years hence. His grandfather, the King is a sailor at heart, as everybody knows, and in his service days was a hard-working officer, who could ship any minute his hand to any job that had to be done. If he joins the senior service, Gerald Lascelles will be following what is, on his mother's side, a strong family tradition. The navy is now far more or less aristocratic service than it used to be. Many younger sons of famous families are to be found among its officers. And it is also a training ground for the cadets of foreign royal houses. One characteristic of the navy is that it treats all alike. A prince has to do his duty like any one else. Considerations of rank have no influence upon duty. The latter is placet first. In a British warship a snotty is just a snotty, though he may be "his royal highness" when ashore.

TWO OIL TANKERS TAKE FIRE TODAY

Bayonn, N.J., May 8 (CP)—Two oil tankers at the docks of the Gulf Refining Company caught fire today and sent thick clouds of smoke rolling across the lower end of Staten Island. Fire squads from neighboring industries were rushed to the scene and fire boats summoned from New York. Ambulances were rushed from hospitals. A third tanker was hauled out of danger.

AREA IS SHAMBLES

Dallas Tex., May 8.—Tornado-beleaguered Texas emerged today from one of the most devastating storms in its history while citizens, fearful of further wrath from the skies, checked up the tremendous toll of dead and injured.

Howling black funnels streaked and churned across the countryside for hours during the height of the storms last night. They demolished every structure in their path and killed or maimed almost every living thing.

The forms of speech in the world today are believed to represent more than 100 saltirely unrelated language stocks.

TILE MACHINES START TO WORK

Three Plants Began Work of Laying Over Thirty Miles of Pipe

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 8.—Three large tiling machines started work yesterday on the Trent Airport, and already considerable work has been done. Mr. O. Beatty has charge of this work, and he expects to lay over thirty miles of tile before the work is completed. So far little trouble has been experienced with the tiling, as the ground is rich and has few rocks. As the ditches are made laborers follow along and lay the tile in joining the ends together. It is expected that the work will be completed by the first of the month, after which building operations are scheduled to start.

MILK SCARCITY IS REPORTED IN THIS DISTRICT

Cows Producing One Third Less Than One Year Ago

FACTORIES IN STRIDE

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 8.—Although as yet no serious effects have been felt here there is a distinct scarcity of milk through the district, it is stated on good authority. At this time last year, cows were producing almost a third more milk on an average than they are at present, and this condition is due for the most part to the late Spring, and the scarcity of good pasture land.

Many farmers had to turn their cattle out on the grass earlier than usual this year on account of the scarcity of feed, many not having enough in their barns to tide them over the long Winter, since early last December. With a good amount of rain this month, which will bring the pastures along in fine shape, however, it is thought that by next month the flow of milk will be back to normal.

Cheese factories and dairies through the district so far are the chief sufferers. The fact that there is little milk going to the cheese factories is easily seen by the re-action on the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade. Last week, at the opening meeting of the Board few this year, there was not a single cheese offered for sale. This condition is unusual to say the least, as the Belleville Board has at all times been one of the largest trading centres for cheese in the province. Most of the factories are just swinging into their stride now, and it is expected that within the next few weeks the trade on the cheese market will be back to normal.

BOYS SUSPECTED IN RECENT FIRES

Firemen Make Successful Effort to Quench Blaze at Whitewear Co.

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 8.—Another allegedly incendiary fire occurred here Tuesday night, which was only subdued by hard work on the part of the fire department, before it had done heavy damage. As it was, the loss to the Whitewear Clothes factory will be between one hundred and fifty and two hundred dollars. The Whitewear factory is located on Quinte street, and about nine o'clock the blaze was first noticed. It had gained considerable headway by that time, but after a quick run to the scene, the firemen soon had the blaze under control. Police investigated and after considerable questioning are said to have found a group of boys who are thought to have been making a practice of setting fires. This is the fourth blaze within a week of an allegedly incendiary nature.

WARM WEATHER DRIVES TRENTONIANS TO WATERFRONT

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 8.—Apparently due to the hot weather of the past three or four days, Trentonians have taken to the waters of the Bay of Quinte and the Trent River to keep cool. Yesterday especially were there a large number of swimmers and bathers in the water and on the docks just below the bridge. Several rowboats and skiffs were also out for the first time this year, and from the looks of the Bay and river yesterday, both will be deservedly popular places from now on. It is to be hoped that the hot weather will not lead inexperienced swimmers to get in beyond their depth and where they might get into difficulties, and a tragedy ensue. This is one of the strong possibilities, and all should guard against such a happening.

CREOSOTE COMPANY TEAM BANQUETTED

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 8.—On Tuesday night at the Gilbert Hotel here the Canada Creosote Company tendered a complimentary banquet to their hockey team which, although it did not win any championships, played good hockey all Winter and did much to put hockey on the map in Trenton. Mr. Dave Terry, head of the plant, and who was actively interested in the hockey team all winter, was present and acted as chairman of the occasion, which was most delightful for all present. A short program was given which was greatly enjoyed.

TRENTON WATER TANK PAINTED ON INSIDE

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 8.—Trenton's water tank is having its inside surface painted and in the mean time the townsfolk are getting their water supply direct from the pumps.

Mr. Arthur Holsey, local painter, has the contract for this important job, and it will take at least three weeks for the paint to dry and before the tank can be put into use again. The paint used is white in color, and is made expressly for this purpose by a Hamilton concern. Several coats are necessary before the work is completed, and the old paint must be scraped off at first.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Now what on earth would you do with reception that persisted in acting the way it did last night? We really didn't have any reception at all come to think of it because the storm put everything on the blink.

Weather permitting we should be able to tune in on WABC at 7 EST tonight and hear the Vagabonds, an instrumental group, feature the Hindoo Song during their recital.

At eight o'clock WJZ the Knox-Dunlap orchestra put on a modern program that includes jazz tangos and sentimental ballads.

Vincent Lopez of "Lopez speaking" fame will be heard tonight with his orchestra of the St. Regis Hotel in a dinner music program. We'll be able to get it over CKGW or WJZ, New York.

B. A. Rolfe and his Lucky Strike orchestra at 7 EST over WJZ and chain. This orchestra is one of the most popular orchestras on the air featuring the fast tempo in their music and believe me it's going over just as big as Rudy Vallee's slow rhythm.

Rudy and his Connecticut Yankees of course are to be heard tonights at 7 EST over WEAF during the Fleischmann hour and the guest artist is another competitor for Rudy, a crooner, Ruth Etting. We'll she'll have to be good to beat Rudy.

Devoe Redskins over WABC at 8.30 EST with Ben Selvin's orchestra and Willard Amison tenor. See you later folks.

Quick Pile Relief

No Salves or Cutting

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID tablets as sold by druggists everywhere, have such a wonderful record for quick and lasting relief, that J. S. McKeown always sells them with guarantee of money back if they do not end all Pile suffering.

VILLON AS KING

Paris, 1463, with its appalling poverty in low places and prodigal extravagance in high places makes an interesting setting for Paramount's technicolor singing romance "The Vagabond King," now being shown at the Belle Theatre and pleasing large audiences. Paris with its vagabonds, precursers of the deadly Apaches of later date, furnishes romance in sordid setting, and makes sharp contrast with romance in magnificent surroundings with the court of Louis XI. as background. Dennis King as Francois Villon, the Vagabond King, and Jeanette MacDonald share honours in the lead, the former being a perfect swashbuckling vagabond of the period with a dash of poetic fire in his make-up, while Jeanette MacDonald has a role perfectly suited to her pleasing person and talents. An outstanding piece of acting is the Louis XI. of O. P. Heggie who plays the crafty, querulous old Lonjerch to "the king's taste", an outstanding piece of acting wherein the art of facial expression is utilized in a masterly manner, and with no sacrifice of natural appearance.

"The Vagabond King" is unique and interesting, well worth seeing.

Teeth have to be built out of foods that are rich in phosphorus and calcium. Many children take into adult life teeth that are defective, unfit for the job that nature intended. The crisp, crunchy shreds make chewing necessary and that develops healthy gums and good digestion.

PORT HOPE AND LINDSAY ADOPT DAYLIGHT SAVING

Petition Receives Favorable Consideration from the Town Council

LINDSAY, May 7—Lindsay will have a period of daylight saving this summer. This was decided by the Town Council last night when in response to popular demand a by-law was passed inaugurating daylight saving for the period June 15 to August 31. That is from midnight on June 14 to midnight on August 31.

Petitions were placed before the Council from the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, the Girls' softball League, the Retail Merchants' Association and Lindsay Athletic Association. The petitions were supported by a large delegation several members of which, addressed the council. The only direct opposition came from the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and Mr. W. E. Kelcher, President of the Retail Merchants' Association, who said he had received many protests from customers in the country and some of the retail merchants.

There was little discussion in the council when the matter finally came up for consideration. Reeve Kylie and Alderman Weeks, being the only two to make any remarks and they were in favor of the idea.

Alderman Dr. White moved that Lindsay adopt daylight saving for the period of time from June 15 to August 31 except where it would affect the early closing by-law Saturday nights.

PORT HOPE, May 7—The town of Port Hope will be on the Daylight Saving plan for three months commencing May 31st at midnight. This pretentious question was brought up at the regular meeting of the Town Fathers on Monday night and as a result, the resolution favoring fast time for two months which was passed at the last session, was rescinded and the following motion was substituted, ——"that daylight saving be from May 31st, 1930 to August 31st and the Mayor is instructed to issue proclamation." The new resolution was sponsored by Councillor Sandifer and Mitchell.

"That question was brought up at the last meeting," said Councillor Sinnott, jumping to his feet. "I suppose at the next meeting you will be wanting to change the time again. We should have either one way or the other. Let us have the yeas and nays on it."

Accordingly, Town Clerk Sanders took the vote which resulted as follows:—

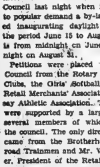
Nays, Hancock, and Sinnott.

Yeas, Mitchell, Rosevear, Sanders, Johnston and Oke.

"Why, you voted for it last time," remarked Councillor Rosevear to Reeve Hancock.

"I told you I was in favor of it for two months," replied the Reeve.

"We will beat you on it next time," stated Deputy Reeve Sinnott.



"Oh, no you won't," rejoined Councillor Rosevear.

PREMIER FERGUSON MAY DELAY VISIT

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—While Premier G. Howard Ferguson had planned a visit to England in June to take part in the opening of the new Ontario Government offices, it is said his visit will now be postponed on account of the forthcoming Dominion election, providing the election comes in July. Should the election be held in August it is probable the Premier will make the trip returning in time to lead the Conservative forces in Ontario.

FIRST ADVOCATE OF AGE PENSION

Memorial Tribute to Efforts of Late Thos. Sullivan

Will all the discussion, charges and denials that have been made with regard to the Old Age Pensions Act in Ontario, to Belleville falls the unique distinction of having had the first man to advocate the scheme. In fact this noble-minded citizen had been advocating an old age pension act for the past twenty or thirty years. Recently he has passed into the Great Beyond, nevertheless he lived to see his labours bear fruit. He died last winter and the Old Age Pensions Act had come into force by that time.

'Old Tom', as he was well known to nearly everybody in Belleville, was a familiar figure in the city. He used to act as fireman for the H. F. Ketchenson Co., who have a central heating plant at the rear of their business office. He was employed by that company for years and was an honest and faithful worker.

In Walter F. Moore's store today, (Mr. Moore has a monument shop on Front street, near the upper bridge) there is a marble monument that will mark the spot where Thomas Sullivan is buried in St. James' Cemetery. The inscription on the monument reads thus:

THOMAS SULLIVAN
1846-1930
EDMUND SULLIVAN
1848-1927

Thomas Sullivan was the first man to advocate Old Age Pensions in Ontario and Lived to see the Act Put In Force.

Edmund Sullivan was a brother to Thomas Sullivan.

Work Worn People

Find Renewed Health by Improving Their Blood

If you feel run down, it means that your blood is thin and watery, that your vitality is low. Your feet are easily chilled. You do not sleep well and you are tired when you rise in the morning. You find no pleasure in your meals and are listless and dispirited at your work. You have no energy to enjoy yourself

Thousands of men are run down by anxieties of work. Thousands of women are broken down by their household toil, with tired limbs and aching backs; thousands of girls are pale, listless and without attraction. It all means the same thing—thin and watery blood, vitality run-down, anaemia, poor appetite, palpitating heart, short breath.

Do not submit to this. Get new blood and with it new vitality. There is no difficulty in doing this. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up and enrich the blood, which begins with it new health and vitality. The man, woman or girl who takes Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is never run down. Their friends notice how energetic they are, what a fine appetite they have, and how much they enjoy life.

On the Sport Trail

Things are certainly looking none too bright for Senior baseball in Central Ontario. The League was once one of the most flourishing in the Province, and clubs clamored to each a berth. Times have changed and for the last few years the organization has had its own troubles to keep its head above water. Gradually one team then the other was forced to succumb under the decreasing attendance at games and mounting travelling costs. The climax was reached this week when it was announced that if the Central League is to survive, Kingston and Belleville must carry the burden this year. Oshawa and Peterboro have their own opposition to contend with, and despite the fact that the Club officials sought every means to carry on, they have been forced to admit their failure to a solution.

Oshawa Club have been faced for some years past with competition chief y from softball and increasing rinks and while the team gave the fans good ball, the attendance was small last season. Soft-ball, particularly, has taken its toll and the senior lots in the Motor City are the mecca for hundreds of members of the male sex every evening engaged in various leagues. It must be admitted that anyone is certainly benefitting to a greater extent in playing some light games rather than sitting in the sitting beat watching some one else play. That is why golf is gaining in popularity every season. But it is no good for baseball.

Five or six years ago everyone trekked to the ball game on Wednesday afternoon. Now the head of the family fills up the gas tank and the who'e family goes whooping it off to some quiet beach or picnic ground. Much better for the system we must admit, but it has more than played havoc with Senior baseball.

Should Belleville and Kingston fail to carry on this year, it is very doubtful if the Central Ontario League will function again. Those veterans who have been playing for some years will certainly not be out next season should they hang up their uniforms this season. It is really the burning point for baseball fans of the local club and the 21st Battalion fight it out, then Oshawa and Peterboro may see their way clear to join up next season, but if they don't it practically sounds the death knell for the game in this part of the country.

The Central League was once looked upon as the most successful loop in the Province and it is unfortunate that the officers should have to face the present crisis. But the same thing has happened in Western Ontario where the professionals have made great inroads into the amateur ranks. It's dollars to doughnuts, that the new Canadian Pro League will be defunct by Dominion Day.

The Bay of Quinte League will get under way in a few weeks and Canada Cement of Fuhl Anne, being the nearest home team, will represent the city and district. The Canada Cement have gathered a smart aggregation and they will be favorites to stop the Kiwi Cup.

A close race has resulted in the Public School Soft-ball League with three teams already passed up to the wire. Clifford Howie of Queen Alexandra turned the Frank Merrifield trick last night, when he knocked a home run with the bases full in the last half of the ninth inning with the score tied and two out. It was certainly an ideal setting for the circuit blow and Clifford is wearing the school hero's crown today.

RUGBY PROSPECT IN BELLEVILLE FOR THIS YEAR

S. R. Burrows Elected President of Amateur Association

OFFICERS NAMED

Newly elected directors of the Belleville Amateur Athletic Association met at the Y.M.C.A. last night to elect their officers and chairman of the various branches of sport under their jurisdiction. The meeting was enthusiastic and a great impetus in sport is being looked forward to. Mr. B. C. Donnan, who has taken a keen interest in the forming of this association, was chairman of the meeting and was the unanimous choice of the directors for the position of honorary president, knowing that he did not wish an active office. The Association will seek in every way to foster, promote and develop amateur sport interest in the youths and citizens of Belleville. The Association will also be in close relationship with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and the Ontario Athletic Commission.

"Those directors present at the meeting were Harold Legate, M. P. Duff, "Cleve" Ellery, S. R. Burrows, John B. Ryan, Dr. Van Blaskiee and Joe E. Shortt. The election of officers was harmonious and the following will guide the destinies of the club for the year: —Honorary President B. C. Donnan; President—S. R. Burrows; 1st Vice President, M. P. Duff; Secretary Treasurer, Joe E. Shortt.

The chairmen of the various branches of sport are Hard and Soft ball, Morley P. Duff; Hockey, Sandford H. Burrows; Rugby, Dr. Van Blakiee; Track and Field, Harold Legate and Water Sports, John B. Ryan. The Association will meet from time to time. Concentration for the year will be made on hockey and rugby and probably Belleville will be represented in some rugby league this fall as a starter. A hard ball league will be formed among the younger element, bringing players up to the standard of Senior ball.

A. ARMSTRONG TENNIS PRES.

Election of Officers of Tennis Club Held

The Bay of Quinte Tennis Club met for organization last evening at the Y.M.C.A. with about twenty members present. Organization and election of officers for the coming year was the chief item of business, and the officers elected were as follows:

Honorary President — Jamieson Bone.

President—Albert Armstrong.

Vice-President—A. I. Wallers.

Secretary Treasurer—Dan Hannah.

Men's Captain—Alphonse Black.

Ladies Captain—Mrs. Molly Hannah.

Grounds Committee Chairman — Clarence Bryant.

It was stated that Kingston would not likely be in the league this year, and if this is the case, the sentiment of the Belleville Club was that they should play home and home games with every other team in the league, instead of having it diverted into an eastern and western section. Mr. Phonse Black is the delegate to the meeting which will be held in the near future in Kingston. The courts of the County Club are in good shape, and the club is looking forward to a most successful year.

MRS. SARAH ANN PARKS

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sarah Ann Parks who died at the home of her son, E. W. Parks, Point Anne, was held this afternoon. Services were conducted in the United Church, Arden, Ontario. Interment was made in the family plot Arden Cemetery.

The bearers were sons and sons-in-law of the deceased. Floral tributes included a wreath from the family and a wreath from the workmen of the Canada Cement Co.

The indoor swimming bath in Berlin, just completed, is the largest one in Europe. It is a 164-foot pool with a depth of 11 1 2 feet.

FAST GAMES IN PUBLIC SCHOOL SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Clifford Howie's Home-Run Was Feature of Latest Tilts

As a result of last night's games in the Public School Soft-ball League, Queen Alexandra, Queen Victoria and King George Schols are tied for the leadership each having two victories and no defeats. The games scheduled for the approaching week will man a great deal to each team.

Last night at Queen Victoria School the home club turned St. Michael's back by a count of 21-4. The game was really to one-sided to be interesting as the Vics were superior in every department. Rigby did the pitching for the winners and he had the Academy mire well at his mercy. On the other hand the east end team took kindly to Griffin's offerings and he was hit hard at times but he received miserable support.

Queen Victoria 21—Morgan 1b; Yeomans, c; Hammett 2b; Nunn 3b; Aspell lf; Hall rf; Dickey ss; Rigby p; Mykbrest cf.

St. Michael's, 4—Hughes c; Griffin p; Tarrca 1b; Bawden 2b; Degenb 3b; Graham ss; Kelleher lf; Lynch cf; Belair rf.

Umpire — Edgar Bateman.

Queen Alex 6; Queen Mary 2.

Clifford Howie's home run with the bases loaded, two out and the score tied in the last half of the ninth inning, settled the issue between Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary. Incidentally young Howie had two strikes called on him when he walloped the ball far out of reach of the outfielders. It was as splendid game. Hanna pitched a great game for the losers while Bagwell was on the mound for Queen Alex. On Monday night Alexandra trounced St. Michael's by a score of 25-3.

Queen Mary 2,— Kelpheson, Hanna, McElrath, Hall, Pair, Wilson, Orilia, Keith, Tarlington.

Queen Alexandra 6—Moll, rf; Stewart, cf; Dimmnie lf; Matthews, ss; Howie 3b; Lloyd 1b; Kidd c Faulkner 2b; Bagwell p.

Umpires—Fairman atplate; W. O. Anderson, bases.

Prince of Wales School played at King George but the latter squad won out by the core of 14-2. It was a good game but King George were better throughout. Mr. Kells umpired this game.

The standing of the teams in the race for the Barraga Cup is as follows:

	Won	Lost
Queen Victoria	2	0
Queen Alexandra	2	0
King George	2	0
Prince of Wales	0	2
St. Michael's	0	2
Queen Mary	0	2

Budget Policy for Canada

solved a problem called "insoluble" by ex-Premier Meighen, he claimed.

Introduction of "a new spirit in Canada" to achieve unity and progress was supported by all four major divisions of Canada, he declared, despite differing interests and beliefs.

The Liberal budgets had been accused of both giving too much protection and too little protection to preserve Canada. "Both charges are untrue," he thundered. "Manufactured goods have increased 80 per cent in production since 1922. The new budget, like its predecessors, has reduced duties on the necessaries of life and the instruments of production. It is not ruining industry. It facilitates trade with countries that want to trade with us. It is not a Western, an Eastern, a farmers' or an industrial budget, but a national budget. It is based on the great Liberal policy of Imperial preference. It reflects the great Liberal leadership in trade and national progress."

Mr Lapointe ridicules the praise of American protection. If it was so good, he asked why had President Hoover called special conference to relieve industry and agriculture in the United States? In the moment of "panicky" the proposal that Canada call similar conferences.

British Preference Benefits

Mr. Lapointe declared the British preference increases would be of great benefit to Canada. Nearly all per cent. of Canada's exports, he said, went to British countries, while only 30 per cent. of Canada's imports were of British or Imperial origin.

"No country can close itself within walls," he protested. Speaking of the criticism on countervailing or retaliatory duties, the Minister declared, the provision in the new budget will meet with more cheerful approval from the people of Canada.

"We want to trade with those who want to deal with us," he repeated. Mr. Lapointe feared he would be disappointed in the hope that Mr. Bennett would change his tune in criticizing the Government. "He will find Canadians do not like people who weep constantly," prophesied Mr. Lapointe.

The Minister also absolved his Government from any blame for the congestion of wheat marketing. He denounced efforts to hold up the United States as a model example of prosperity and good government.

"We have nothing to envy in the United States" he said. "When the United States had a population of 90,000,000 people she had a trade no larger than what Canada has now.

"Our great leader, Laurier, was right when he said that the 20th century is the century of Canada.

"Canada is going ahead, but to keep going, she needs sound leadership in national, imperial and international affairs. We have provided this leadership and we shall continue to provide it."

The leadership of Canada has been accepted by other units of the Empire, he said, particularly in matters of the protocol of the international world court.

Countervailing Duties

Mr. Lapointe discussed the much-attacked countervailing duties no more than to express his confidence they would be received with acclaim throughout Canada. The great Liberal policy of British preference had been extended, he asserted, to emphasize the belief that "Canada should trade with those who want to trade with us."

"It is good business," he exclaimed, after pointing out that far from encouraging Canadian enterprise, the preference encouraged a situation wherein Canadian imports from British countries were approximately half of Canadian exports to British countries.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

We usually toe-nail their houses on top of the fence posts around our premises. I have never tagged the bluebirds, therefore I have no positive proof the same one returns year after year; but I am like the Scotch-man who said he was open to conviction but he would like to see the man who could convince him otherwise, for we have several old birds any one of which will permit up to climb up the fence post and remove the roof from her house, and when we peep in she will sit there on her eggs, within eight inches of our eyebrows, and turning her head sideside she will cover our whole face with her one little eye as much as to say "Beg your pardon, sir, but you should have rapped before you opened the door." If a stranger is permitted to do this, she will fly out, every time, long after I have taken the top off she will permit him to look in and will not fly out.

The chief cause of the decrease of the bluebird is English sparrows. One of man's great mistakes was when he introduced this little, domineering Bolsbevik into America. Not that he doesn't destroy insects enough to counterbalance the amount of grain he takes, but here is my charge against him: He is doing all in his power to exterminate several varieties of birds that God put here, and any one of these birds will destroy more insects in a day than he will in a week.

Last summer when I awoke one Sunday morning I heard the voices of sparrows and bluebirds fighting at the bluebird house, which was about one hundred feet from my open window; but as I knew the young bluebirds were hatched, I just rolled over and had another snooze. About an hour later I saw the English sparrows had possession. In I went over, and found five young bluebirds lying dead at the foot of the post. Now I did not see the sparrows throw them out. I only know that the old bluebirds were chirping and hovering around the nest and were driven back by the sparrows, and that the little dead birds were still warm. In fact, one was just gasping its last when I picked them up, and each showed marks where it had been pecked. I pinned the five little murdered babies to a piece of cardboard and hung them out and took their picture.

CHAPTER XII

Woodpeckers

Near where this tent is pitched is a soft maple tree with a decayed limb in its top, and about one-half dozen downy woodpeckers are making their home there. This morning there is about four inches of snow, and the air is still, so that I could hear those little God-given helpers at work.

Some years ago when I was cutting timber to secure lumber to build my present home, we sawed down an oak tree over four feet in diameter. The heart of this tree showed where the little wood-peckers had taken the grubs out, over a hundred and fifty years ago, as the marks were grown over there, in the heart of that tree. And through their help a hundred years before I was born, I am able to have nice quarter-cut oak in my home today.

But there is an old proverb, familiar to all, "Misery likes company." A friend of mine was telling me just yesterday how he and his man went to the back cornfield and shot the red headed woodpecker because they were pulling his corn. After they had killed all the old birds in sight the man suggested that they cut the old stub down and destroy the fledglings. When this stub fell, the rotten nests broke up in dozens of pieces, killing the young. As the crop of each of these little birds resembled a wart on a needle, they decided to cut them open and see the amount of corn each contained; but to their surprise they were packed full of injurious worms and bugs, and not one kernel of corn could be found.

Now these two incidents are, only fair examples of the ignorance of us human beings during the past, regarding bird life. I could go on enumerating such convincing points for a week about our beautiful boblinks, meadow lark, and the song-sparrow family, and dozens and dozens of other insectivorous birds. This is all outside their song service, and the cheerful, clear note of such as the bobolink as he flutters across the meadow, singing, "Johnny why don't you mend your britches?" or of the cat-bird, who is perfectly willing to come and sing in your back yard if you will plant just a little shrubbery.

This calls to mind a particular friend of mine, Mr. Angus Woodbridge, whose summer home is about three miles from where I live, located on the north shore of Lake Erie. He has ten than two acres, but the fifth year the shrubbery was planted there were over seventy birds' nests around this lovely home, twenty different varieties, a pair of mourning-doves being so kind as to build on the window-sill and raise their young there. The hoary thrasher, who has such a beautiful imitative voice, could not resist the temptation and built his home in the wild grape arbor that covers the path in the little ravine that wends its way down to the sandy beach. My chief reason for mentioning this fact is to make it plain that these beautiful creatures will come clear across the continent to your, if you will go a few steps towards them.

CHAPTER XIII

The Swallow Family

This is, to my notion, the most valuable family of birds we have in America, as they live entirely on wing of insects. And while I am writing on their value, I want you to keep your eye on their intelligence.

Over twenty-five years ago we built an extra large drying shed at our tile factory. It is two hundred feet long, and two stories high; then with the addition of one hundred feet of machine shed, we have over three hundred feet of the very choicest place for the old-fashioned, fork-tailed barn swallows.

Here it stood, with those windows continually open, for years; but no swallows came near.

During that time I read the first game law I have any knowledge of ever being published. I found it in Deuteronomy, twenty-second chapter, verses six and seven, which reads as follows: "If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young; but thou shalt in any wise let the dam go and take the young unto thee; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days." I read, and tried to analyze the meaning, but my eyes were too weak to see the point.

Finally, to my delight, when I went over to the factory one morning here was the pair of long-looked-for swallows darting around near the south end of this shed. Now the machinery, where ninety per cent of the work is done is at the extreme north end of the shed; the south part is used for drying purposes only. And the next morning this pair of birds had some mud stuck up at the points of the third pair of rafters from the south end. They were building just as far from us workmen as they possibly could and still be under the same roof. How this pair did keep those two verses of Scripture fresh in my mind.

Well, they had no sooner completed their house and started setting on five eggs, than along came their deadly enemy, the English sparrow, and destroyed the nest. Then I went up in the air pretty high and came down with a .22 rifle in my hand, and pointed a whole lot of my attention at this particular variety of sparrow. And I had the pleasure of seeing these sweet lows rebuild and successfully raise their second brood, which is four. Before they migrated, they came apparently closer to us than necessary.

The next spring two pairs came back one pair occupying the old nest, but the others built about fifty feet closer to us. I watched the sparrows closer than ever, and it seemed that the swallows called to us as much as to say "Help!" Help!" whenever their enemies put in their appearance, and I have always tried to be on hand like a sore thumb. That summer each pair raised two broods, making a total of eighteen young. Now we had just what we had been looking for, and these birds apparently thought the same, for every man in the factory had learned to love them and knew their call when a sparrow arrived. This ,too, may sound a little flaky, but I will go you one better; I know you could blindfold me and I could tell you if there was a swallow's enemy approaching them. If they looked to us to help them why surely they knew we were their friends.

The third spring they came back in goodly numbers and built five nests, and the fifth year there were no less than twenty nests in the shed. But the beauty of it all is they simply discarded the unsightly mud and fifteen of the nests are within twenty feet of the busiest spot in the premises where the men are all working an about which is sometimes blowing. This proves without a doubt that these little insectivorous, valuable birds came to us for protection.

I have seen three alight on the cart horse's back at once. I have also seen the clay dumped in his hand upon the nest, and the old mother bird would simply look over the side as much as to say "Now, Jim dear don't let a stranger go in the clay shed, and you will hear their sweet, alarmed voices—fear by the dozens.

JUDGESHIP OFFERED

Washington, May 8—The senate in an open "grand jury" session found that "a gentleman from the state of Washington" suggested to Senator Dill, Democrat, that the administration was so anxious to secure confirmation of the supreme court nomination of John J. Parker that Dill might be rewarded with a federal judgeship or "almost anything" he wanted for supporting him.

Dill offered the explanation on the floor, during the seventh day of the Parker debate, and Republican Floor Leader Watson immediately claimed it exonerated President Hoover and Parker himself.

Why Simple Stomach Troubles so Often End on Operating Table

"BECAUSE it could have been so easily avoided, so case is more painful, than that of the man or woman who is forced to undergo the knife to relieve a condition which, in its early stages, was the result of neglecting simple stomach ailments," stated a New York physician recently.

You, for instance, may look on an such stomach as nothing to fear. Yet in reality, it is a most alarming condition on account of its great tendency to develop stomach ulcers.

Face facts. If you suffer gas and bloating after meals, loss of appetite, constipation, headaches, If your breath is bad, your tongue coated, the best thing you can do is to go to the nearest drug store and get a bottle of Tanlac. Besides getting quick relief, weak, disordered stomachs which seemed utterly to falter stopped working the way they should, have shown almost a miraculous return to normal activity through the remarkable stimulating effect of Tanlac. One woman, Mrs. Hugh Cain, says: "Tanlac saved my life. I had stomach troubles for 10 years. Gas nearly killed me and I was in bed for weeks at a time. Doctors said it was gall stones and gall bladder. Spent lots of money but suffering increased and all hope was lost. Certainly a harder task for Tanlac could not be found yet it accomplished it. Its the best health in 10 years and est everything." Tanlac is not a "patent medicine"—it's a real medicine so do not accept a cheap substitute. Fully guaranteed to give satisfaction or money back. At all druggists.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

JOAN'S COLLIE

by

Louis H. Raybold

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc.

FOR many years early summer had seen the arrival at Tamarack Lake of the Bruce family—father and mother, Joan and the boys, a dog or two.

Suddenly, everything was changed. The lake and its shores became part of a state preserve where private holdings were no longer allowed and vast camps were thrown open for public use.

At first John Bruce made a tremendous fuss about the matter. Wasn't going to stand for it. Would clear out. Never wanted to see the place again.

A season spent elsewhere, however, left the whole family longing for the familiar cabin, the quiet brooks, the shining, rippling expanses of clear old Tamarack.

"We'll try it for one more season," at last yielded Joan's father. "We'll see what it is like living with every Tom, Dick and Harry in our front dooryard!" So here they were again and not the least important member of the menage was Tippy, the lovely golden brown collie raised by Joan from an adorable puppyhood.

"Bless his soul," mooned Joan. "He'll be just too happy for words dashing around up here!"

Turning back to the house, she did not see the tall, well-built fellow in a ranger's trim uniform who, a moment later, stooped over and patted Tippy's silent head. "Nice old fellow," he murmured. Larry Bingham was as great a dog lover at Joan.

The summer days passed. Camps lined the shores of the lake. Big camps and little camps. Expensive outfits belonging to tired tourists breaking their transcontinental journeys with a brief stay under the quiet evergreens. Shabby pup tents sheltering a couple of noisy, joyous youngsters out for a week end. And even as there were many kinds of camps, so there were many kinds of people.

Sometimes Joan worried about Tippy. "He is so friendly with you and I suppose he would let anyone take him along home?"

The campers made a great deal of him, especially the children. What happened was, therefore, all the more of a shock.

Joan was lounging under her favourite pine tree on drowsy August afternoon when she saw Larry Bingham coming slowly down the trail. She and Larry had become excellent friends.

"Ooah, Joan, I am just hating to tell you this!"

Joan, wide-eyed and dismayed, stood up.

"You see, the rule of the camp is that all dogs must be kept on a leash but I haven't enforced it about Tippy. Now, however, there's been a complaint lodged against him."

"A complaint against Tippy?"

"Seems a woman with some kids was bitten once by a dog and she has had a horror of all dogs ever since. She claims your collie jumped at her boy the other day."

"You know better than that, Larry!" said Joan coldly. "You know that whatever Tippy did was only in play."

"Of course I do! But—well, I haven't any choice in the matter but to ask you to keep him tied."

"And if I refuse?"

"Ah, but you won't do that!" Larry's voice was pleading and flattering.

"Indeed, I shall!" And Joan turned on her heel and left poor Larry standing there.

Tippy continued to run. The woman who had complained made further protest. Campers who knew Tippy were indignant but unwarranted sympathetic. It was a shame for a vicious dog to be allowed his freedom in a camp.

Larry was miserable. No more walks with Joan. No more quiet little chats under the pines. Tippy's master with whom Larry would have liked to take the matter up, was still in New York on business.

Finally, the Ranger came to a decision. He was holding down this job for the summer while waiting for a vacancy with an engaging firm in Albany and while he was on the job he must do his duty by it. Nor could he honestly overlook the need of tying up the season. There was no way out but to take the collie into custody.

Joan, who had come down for him the next morning, "Tippy, old boy," he said gently, "You have got to come and keep me company for a while." And he locked him up in his cabin.

That afternoon he drove up to Saltmore, about 20 miles from camp, for inspection to the camp established there, before leaving he sent a note to Joan. "Dear Joan, Forgive me if you can. I have had to do the only thing possible under the circumstances. Tippy is in my cabin."

That night a careless camper went early to bed and left a fire improperly cared for. A tiny blaze a slow flame crept through the mat of pine needles, dried to tinder in the summer drought.

Among those in the innocent enjoyment of woodsmoke roused a restless sleeper. Forest fire! Not far away for one could hear the crackle of burning pine boughs. A glance out of the doorway. The Ranger's cabin on fire and the Ranger probably not back yet! Instantly, it seemed, the entire camp was awake. Pajama clad figures dashing up to the faucets for water, with pails and saucepans. Women hurriedly collecting clothes ready for a sudden exodus. Cars being driven beyond the range of sparks.

Suddenly, a slim figure in a wooly dressing gown, barefooted, hair tumbled about her white face, flew down the slope that led from the cabin to the hillsop.

"Tippy!" she screamed. "Oh, Tippy!" She dashed toward the blazing building. Someone grabbed her. She struggled to get free. "My dog is in there!" she sobbed.

At that moment, a car hummed down the road. Before it had really stopped a man leapt to the ground. It was the Ranger and the crowd parted to let him through. "In two strides he had reached that end of the cabin which was as yet untouched by actual flame.

With a blow of his elbow he smashed the pane in the window, raised the sash, and hauled his long length over the sill.

To the watchers outside the minutes before he emerged seemed like hours. Then, as he climbed out slowly, as one who struggles with a heavy burden in his arms, a step, followed by a cheer, rose from the crowd.

Tippy was saved.

Larry, a moment later, felt a soft hand slip into his. "Oh, Larry!" was all Joan had time to say, before the Ranger had to turn to the task of keeping the fire from spreading further but in her lifted eyes he read a promise of things more wonderful than he had dared to hope for.

A Tragic Case Is Revealed In France

Paris, France, May 8—Leon Daudet, fiery son of the French Dickens, has discovered a "Petit Chose d'Alance," more tragic, more pathetic even than the "Petit Chose" (Little Mr. What's His name) which was his father's masterpiece.

Raymond Heinrich is an Alsatian. An orphan, penniless, he was a teacher-in-force some miles from Paris. Every morning he rose in his tireless room at four o'clock to study before his day's work began. For his work he received board, lodging and a pittance which enabled him to follow the classical studies in which he had shown brilliance. His poverty, his timidity, made him an object of ridicule to the schoolers. He suffered so many insults and tyrannies at the hands of the principal that he wrote to the Ministry of Education. He asked a transfer.

"I will prevent you getting your degree. I will have you dismissed," the principal stormed. The order of transfer came but the principal kept it in his desk. It was followed two days later by a robust Norman who had come to take Heinrich's place.

"Does it mean I get my transfer," Heinrich asked anxiously.

"Nothing of the kind," the principal returned.

"Then it is the end," Heinrich said. He gathered his few effects together and wandered into the fields. Two of his colleagues, fearing suicide, followed and found him at night. There was a scene with the principal. But the principal revealed nothing of the transfer. It still lay in his desk.

A second night the parish priest found Heinrich wandering aimlessly in the woods. He was taken to the hospital, completely prostrated. Brain fever ensued and Heinrich, his reason temporarily gone, was moved to an asylum.

His colleagues pressed his case further. And at last the story of the tragedy came out. The Minister of Education has ordered a special inquiry. And in the hospital, "Let Petit Chose Be Again" canning the memories of Horace and Euripides—far from the tyranny and ridicule which haunted his sleeping and waking hours.

THOMAS LESLIE ESCAPES DEATH

Was Descending a Shaft When He Lost His Balance

PETERBORO, May 5.—Thomas Leslie of 570 Aylmer street narrowly escaped death yesterday when he was caught in an elevating belt at the Quaker Oats Company. He is now in Nichols Hospital suffering from severe scalp wounds and injuries to his arms and back.

When the accident happened, Leslie was using one of the two main belts in the flour department. These belts are wide and have standing platforms every few feet. They move continuously from the bottom of the building to the top and down, for the use of employees going from one floor to another.

Leslie was on the descending side of the continuous belt at the seventh floor, when he lost his balance and fell against the north wall of the building which is very close by. He struck his head against the wall and fell across the belt which is the narrow width of the elevator platforms pass, so that when the platform descended to the level of the floor his body was caught between it and the floor, there being little clearance.

There was nobody with him at the time but his cries for help brought men running to his assistance from all over floor. They found that his body had stalled the belt which is driven by a ten- horsepower motor. When he was extricated it was seen that his most serious injuries were scalp wounds. However, he was crushed about the body and internal injuries may be discovered.

He was taken to the first aid room in the Quaker Oats and treated. Dr. A. G. Hoxson was called and he was removed to Nicholls Hospital. This morning it was reported that he had passed a satisfactory night and was in no grave danger.

LOVELY COSTUMES AWAIT T HE CHOOSING OF THE JUNE BRIDE

Today's Poem

BRIDE TIME

Bright birds sit on frail twigs and sing,
Hillsides are fair with blossoming
Beneath skies blue and gray,
Like magic, violet rugs appear,
And perfume lingers far and near,
For bride time comes this way.
Each newly-blossomed, tremulous tree,
A bridesmaid, stands in greenery
Of vivid leaf and spray;
And everywhere the keen eyes rest,
Expectancy is recalled,
Impatient to declare
That April comes to us to bide
A little time—a fairy bride—
With bright stars in her hair.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Facial gullies, streaking from the nostrils down to the mouth ends, are sometimes intended, sometimes due to the bony structure of the face, and sometimes are created by the individual who wears the increased pink. They are disfiguring and make the upper lips prominent. If they aren't old settlers, they can be effaced to a certain extent by applying a heavy cream, holding the flesh flat between the first and second fingers of the left hand and given a circular motion of the first finger of the right hand. Begin at the bottom of the line and work upward. Follow, a gentle tapping and patting. Finish with an ice rub.

Blackheads can be removed by a process of dry cleaning. Dip a soft cloth in benzine (not benzoin), let most of it evaporate and go over the skin lightly. Clean the skin surface as you would clean the surface of a soiled glove. Keep benzine away from flames. Seems silly to say that, since everybody knows that it is inflammable, but we don't like to take chances. Bathe the face afterwards with warm water and a bland soap, then apply cold cream. The benzine digs oil and dust from the pores.

If the cuticle about the finger nail is kept free, hangnails will not appear. After washing the hands, lift up the cuticle with an orangewood stick. Snip away cuticle shreds with the curved, needle-point scissors. At night apply olive oil or cold cream to the base of the nail and the sides. Never use a steel instrument to push back the cuticle. That's bad.

To lighten up thick lips, smile and unsmile. This facial exercise strength ens the muscles. Mouth-breathing will cause the lips to become heavy and ugly. For chapped lips there are color less lipsticks. Very effective.

Deep breathing exercise the lungs. It washes them free of stale air. Place the hands on the hips, lift the chest and go to it! Inhale slowly and deeply, exhale deeply and fully. Two hundred deep breaths a day; will improve the complexion wonderfully.

Child Training Important

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

When you read history or recollections of it from your youthful studies, you will remember that the leaders of men who made the most signal successes didn't say, "Go up that hill," or "Charge that machine-gun nest," but rather, "Come up, boys. Let's go. Let us go! What a vast difference there is in the way the command is worded, which by the way, reflects the spirit of the person giving the command.

This principle applies in child training just as well as leading men to battle, or to success in any given enterprise. "We will do it," or "Let us get ready," is much more potent than a command given to the little person to do it himself.

Of course, there are times when a child must be asked to do something in which the mother is not going to participate, but there are many other times when both are preparing for a given activity that the "we" can be used to advantage.

One mother discovered this regarding her five-year-old son's dawdling in dressing. He was not yet allowed to go to kindergarten by himself but was accompanied on his walk by Mother each afternoon. Luncheon was partaken of with an eager childish hunger, yet when it came to washing and dressing the little boy was slow. Everything interested him save getting his neck and hands clean, and getting into his school clothes.

So the mother rearranged her own schedule, not removing her house dress until it was time for Sonny to dress also. Then she said: "It is time for us to get ready for kindergarten, son." Wash your hands and face while I get into another dress."

Then when Sonny had returned to the bedroom and been duly inspected behind the ears, mother continued: "We have to change our shoes. I'll bet I can get mine on faster than you can." A laughing race to get in other shoes speeded up that part of the programme. Then: "I'm all dressed. See how quickly you can get into your suit and maybe we will have time to stop and see Tippy a minute." Tippy was a lovely little Airdale who lived down the street.

Sonny fell into the co-operative idea of both of them making ready to go out and it was not long until he maintained this same speed, whether mother had already dressed or not.

A child doesn't cling to little aversions for very long if we tactfully help him out of them. Pulcra aren't long in childhood, and other interests wash away annoying little habits if we think sanely through the habit.

And linking ourselves, making the act one which we have to do, will help many times where a "you do" tells us that only arouses antagonism both for us and the act itself.

The "let us go" policy has long proved more inspiring in getting others to act than the "you go" command. Try it whenever it is possible to do so.

'Girl Unafraid' By Gladys Johnson

"No darling! Not that! Never that! Oh my dearest—"

Under her touch he sagged like a man suddenly deprived of strength. He slumped into his chair which creaked sharply under his weight; his head dropped forward and his outflung arms and the sound of his smothered sob tore into Ardith.

Ardith saw what Tom had feared. Ken was broken. Utterly gone. She quietly unlocked the door and as Tom burst in she few back to Ken.

Over her shoulder her lips formed the words "It's come."

Ardeths' eyes rested anxiously on Ken. He was painfully thin. There were deep hollows about his eyes, and the eyes had a strained look as though the man were pushed to the limits of endurance.

Ardith, mindful of the girl was a shock to Ken. After the first outburst he was like one stunned. He slumped down in his chair and rested his head wearily on his hands, sunk in an indifference which was almost a stupor. He was content to let others take the reins, all his strength went to holding himself together.

Looking at him, Tom shook his head and beckoned the girl out of earshot.

"The calm before the storm—" he whispered "Ken's due for a crash. He looks like a man who's hanging on to sanity by one thread."

"Tom, I want a doctor's opinion. Can you get one?"

"Sure. Harry Knowles. He's been Ken for years and his office is only a couple of blocks away."

"Get him now. Have him come at once."

Ken did not lift his head when Tom left the office. Ardeth was here beside him, that was all which seemed to matter.

On Edge For Months

His voice came muffled by his hands. "Awfully sorry—you saw. End of the trail, I guess. Weak as hell, I know, but why should a man go on living in prison—"

She pressed his head close to her. Mothering it's damp brown hair. "Hush, dear, it's all right now. Close your eyes and rest—that's right."

After a moment he struggled up in panic and sweat spangled his forehead. "Ardeth—you're not going! Don't leave me—"

"I'll never leave you again."

A quiet finality in that which sooth ed him. He subsided, suddenly like a sick child. Not even Tom's return with the doctor awoke interest in him.

Dr. Knowles pursed his lips when he looked at Ken.

After a brief examination he announced to the other two in a low voice, "Can't say I'm surprised. A man can't go on outraging mind and body forever. Ken's been living on edge for months. And he's sensitive by nature. His nerves are entirely shot."

"What's the thing to do, Doc?" Tom asked.

"Sanitarium. And at once. If he keeps his vanity, he's got to rest. Put him straight to bed. Pump all the milk and eggs and nourishing food that he'll take into him. And no worry. That's all the medicine he needs."

"A sanitarium will drive him insane," said Ardeth quietly.

The doctor eyed her with hidden curiosity while he answered. "But rest is all he needs. This is a case for time and nature to cure. His wife should be notified—"

An awkward pause. Tom cleared his throat. "I believe she's down South."

Ardeth's voice cut clearly across his own. "There's no use of us deceiving ourselves. The worst thing that could happen to Ken is to have Cecile take care of him—even if she would do it. No. Not that. Nor a sanitarium."

Ardath Tells Her Plan

"What then?" asked the doctor, and his glasses flashed as he turned to look squarely at her.

The girl turned to Tom and spoke earnestly. "I have a plan. I thought of it while you were gone, Tom, because I felt sure of what the doctor's verdict would be. Will you let Ken have your mountain cabin for a few months? There's everything he will need there. Quiet and privacy and pure mountain air. And I'll see that he gets the rest and the peace of mind he should have.

"You!" Tom's face went so white with astonishment that the freckles stood out on it unnaturally large and dark. Behind his glasses the doctor's eyes appeared to corrugate.

"Yes," she returned coolly. "I'll give him care no hired nurse could supply. You said all he needed was to give time and a chance." She spoke directly to the doctor. And when he nodded she went on, still with that air of quiet confidence.

"He'll be alone with me, because he'll be content."

Tom's voice shook. "Ardeth you mustn't think—Oh, my dear, can't you see—it will set every old gossip's tongue in the place clacking!"

She gave him a level look. "As though I cared! Tom, I feel that Ken's very life depends on this."

Ardeth, you madness!! A professional nurse will do. I'll supply everything—"

She shook her head. "Ken needs me." There was a lift to the girl's chin, a look in her eyes which told Tom that it would avail nothing to argue.

Nevertheless the doctor was moved to protest. "It's a fine thing for you to offer, Miss Carroll, but I have pointed out it is bound to cause talk."

The contemptuous gesture of her hand was their answer.

She turned to Tom. "You'll drive us?"

"Of course! But—the shop, Ardeth, What about that?"

The girl's slight motion with her hands. "You'll look after that! Sell it, of course. It will be months—"

The quiet words which had dwelt deep down in Tom's heart died in that moment. Tom drew a deep breath.

"All right, Ardeth. I'll do what you want."

She took quiet command of the situation. "We'll start—at once. Before—before others step in to complicate things. There are enough to do. Get Ken in the cabin!—blankets—and linen?" She refused to leave, to go for her own clothes.

"Send Jim for them. If I go away now it will agitate Ken—he'll think I'm not coming back."

They were in Tom's car crossing on the ferryboat before the reality of the thing dawned on the girl. By what a sudden swerve had her life changed. Last night she had been in the grocery of which she had been her through the years. A breath of time and all that was, suddenly changed. And Ken were together. They would always be together now, she resolved in her heart. Cecile had no claim on Ken now other than the empty legal one of his name. Ken was her own. Her own as he had never been. In spite of the world.

With her decision a blessed peace had fallen upon her. She need not struggle to keep herself from loving him.....

She sat quietly beside Ken in the lonesome as the boat plowed its way across the bay. Holding his relaxed hand in her own; and her eyes were deep and very lovely.

EVERY GOWN DISPLAYS FEMININE CHARM

(1) More charming than ever is this bridal gown of white satin which is snug-fitting at the waist and hip, at which flares into fullness in the skirt. The cape is of Duchess lace covered to some extend by the long tulle veil fastened beneath these hip. (2) Oranges and lemons on a cream background decorate this evening gown of crepe de chine by Pam. (3) Here is a charming bridesmaid's frock of petal pink chiffon with bustle bow at the back and self trimmings with shaded centres at the waistline. (4) A smart blouse frock worn by Jean Arthur Paramount star. A tuck-in blouse of gray satin accompanied the skirt of the same hue.

DEAR READERS:

Wedding days are here again and during the next four months many charming brides will go to the alter and cupid will be kept busy scampering around attending to his many customers. All this of course will mean much planning and arranging on the part of the bride, his family, and her friends. The bridegroom, poor man, will not be the least bit important until the wedding day when he will be expected to do his little bit and make a timely entrance to the church. Of course, Dear Reader, the greatest excitement, next to the wedding day itself, are the showers arranged in the bride's honour. And right here and now we are going to give out a few rules and don'ts which go to the success of these charming events. Later dear readers, I will publish a few plans for the giving of showers and their arrangement, but today I will just deal in a general manner with their management. The first and most important thing to remember of course is to include every single friend of the bride, and right here you must exercise great care and see that your list does not omit anyone. The best plan is to consult the family of the bride, so that no one may be left out. Now the second point to consider, and this is almost as equally important as the first, is that when the guests are assembled at the scene of the shower, have a program mapped out and ready to carry through, so that the company will not be obliged to sit around and make conversation for the remainder of the evening. So many girls arranging a shower never give this part of the proceedings a thought. They seem to think that as long as the guests and gifts are there that is all that is necessary. As a result the showers are tiresome for those attending, and after the gifts have been unwrapped, the guests have nothing to do but sit around and wonder how long they will have to keep up a pleasant front. This should not be and will not be if the person who arranges the shower gives it a little thought and attention to the planning of a program. The program itself need not be complicated, and it has been found that card-playing is the most pleasant entertainment at an affair of this sort. Prizes for the winners should also be provided. Refreshments should be served at the conclusion of the evening and not after the gifts have been opened. Now then, dear reader, if your are planning to arrange a shower for a friend, remember the above advice, plan your program with

TWO DECADES OF REIGN

King George this week passed his second decade on the British Throne. With health restored after the very severe illness of about seventeen months ago, the monarch can look forward to probably one or more decades yet as monarch of the greatest empire that has been.

King George, a man of peace, was called upon early in his reign to face the awful ordeal of war which absorbed the entire interests of most nations. Through that period of night for monarchies and empires, when emperors lost their lives or were banished, and kings fell, the British throne steered an even course and today the King is more honored than ever even by the most radical thinker within his realms.

The British monarch is a democrat, with all the ideas of modern democracy existing as easily upon him as his clothes, because he is sympathy with every forward movement.

The joy of the British people is that it is not only a reality but an ideal. In the storm of politics and the tribulations of social classes when old ideals are changing to new ones, there is a place of serenity from which every Britisher can look down upon an Empire to which he owes fealty. That place is the throne on which is seated His Majesty King George. King George has accomplished one of the wonders of statecraft, he had made a feudal form purely democratic without incurring any of the weaknesses of democracy. The crown is more firmly entrenched than ever in the hearts and minds of Englishmen. If ever the throne should pass away, it will not be because the public wish it away but because the monarch relinquishes it. That is the best guarantee of maintenance and preservation.

The King as man and as symbol lives in the hearts of many millions.

PREDICTS PARKING YARDS

Almost everyone is taking a hand in the solution of the parking problem. A good many ideas are being offered and there is no possibility of some developments in the form of parking spaces in private hands.

Considerable talk has been heard of the number of large yard spaces on the west side of Front street, which might be put to profitable use by the development of motorcar parking spaces.

One citizen commenting on the present situation contrasted it with the past when citizens and visitors from the country would not think of tying horses on the main street but drove into yards and there stabled their horses for whatever time was necessary. Every one whose memory goes back over twenty years can recall the busy scenes in hotel yards and stables on market days. Will those days come again with cars being parked off the streets? Indications are that they will return for large cities have parking grounds, run by individuals, by firms for the benefit of their motoring customers, and by the cities themselves and the smaller cities will likely follow the custom.

LIKE TRAFFIC MENTOR

The human being likes a mentor. Of course there are some people who do not want to be guided by anyone or to take the advice of anyone but the bulk of people do.

It is true in regard to traffic. The traffic officer has a beneficent influence upon the motorist who no matter how forgetful he may have been suddenly appreciates that courtesy to the rest of the traveling public is the best policy. Traffic slows down at the sight of an officer. It is willing to be guided without a murmur.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In spite of the gyrations of the wheat market, the amount of wheat in stock remains in spite of the jumping about of stock values on the exchanges, the industries are still in operation. No wonder President Beatty of the C.P.R. tells Canadians to be optimistic and says that business will be back to normal in a few months.

These fine days which have been marked by summer heat have pushed city agriculturists into their gardens in a rate which was not prepared for. Grass is showing the result of the warm spell and there are those who declare that the weather is too warm to last.

Thoughts of examinations are hovering in the offing. While many students will escape the ordeal, for some the great test remains. Adults who passed through the stage of examinations years ago and realize how hot it is in June and July wonder why examinations in those hot months are permitted. There is but one test to apply to all examinations at any time and particularly in warm weather,—are they fair to the student? If they are not they ought to be abolished.

New parking regulations are providing a novel opportunity to a number of men about town. Acquiescing in the mayor's invitation to aid in solution of the traffic problem they are leaving their cars at home and going to the office and store on foot. Walking is good exercise for all, even in warm weather. It is light on gasoline and oil bills.

SIDELIGHTS

PORTRAIT OF A SAILOR

The flashing of the sea is in his eyes,
The waves' white laughter rings upon his lips;
He is an allen under allen skies;
Forever he is captive of the ships.
Though scored and ragged always he may dine
At beauty's board where proudest kings partake:
He drinks the gold of sunrise for his wine,
And starlight is the bread that he may break.

Valencia is like a bell to him,
An amber bell that rings across the sea,
And Yokohama is a song so dim
It breaks the heart to, hear. Eternally
The cry of Venice haunts him; Zanzibar
Leaps in a flame and Singapore cries out
When all-is hushed here with the Northern Star;
Calcutta is a knife; Madrid a shout.

No woman's lips may ever call him hers,
No hearthfire know his feet more than a night.
He must go on with every sail that stirs
Full-masted when the tide goes swift and white.
He holds the world within his hands he knows
Of every wind and wave he is a part.
Through every vein the seas' deep passion flows;
The crying of the gulls is in his heart.

DEADWOOD DICK is dead, only eighty-three years old and practically unknown to the youth of today. The Dads will remember this dashing, daring character of fiction, "Deadwood Dick", who appeared every week in a new adventure. Beadle's Dime Library paper cover, introducing "Calamity Jane" "Poker Alice" and all the rest of the curious characters who were able to keep out of "Boot Hill." Deadwood Dick Clarke who inspired the stories is dead at Deadwood, South Dakota, and thereby hangs many tales which thrilled our boyhood days. These stories were turned out by the yard in New York City in Munro's Printing House down on Vandewater street, near the Brooklyn bridge and sold by the million in paper covers at ten cents each. Deadwood Dick's death followed by less than three months that of "Poker Alice" Clarke, a contemporary character of the old West. The Black Hills has lost the last of the famous characters who fought, gambled, and dug for gold in the frontier days when the Wild West lived up to its name—and Deadwood Dick died with his boots off.

"Now, my children," inquired Cohen, "how many of you vant a nickel's worth of pie?"—Exchange.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—When one finds himself seated at a social gathering near a non-acquaintance, what should he do?

Q.—Should a woman ever register at a hotel without the prefix Mrs. or Miss?

A.—No; it is not considered dignified.

Q.—What is the minimum tip to a waiter in a restaurant?

A.—Ten per cent of the bill.

Front street with curb parking looks like a wide street now. Four cars can pass abreast without interfering with the curb lineups. The wide street undoubtedly makes traffic move with a great deal of ease, and pedestrians can now obtain a clear view of the street. There should be no accidents.

MANY A STAGE HAS BEEN SET FOR A TRAGEDY BY A F LIRTATION, SAYS MISS FAIRFAX TO YOUNG PEOPLE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Should young husbands and wives talk each other everything? meaning, of course, those harmless little heart-adventures with other young men and women that hardly seem worth reporting.

Or is it more sensible and practical to keep such matters in one's self, if one has a wife with a tendency to magnify trifles or a husband too easily made jealous?

It goes without saying that almost all lovers, when the day of marriage arrives, honestly believe that their two lives are thereforward to be literally merged and that not the smallest flick of secrecy or deceit is ever to be allowed to sift into that ideal relationship.

Some married lovers do I am sure, hold strictly to this standard of perfect confidence. In the case of those who do not, how does the first lapse happen and what does it probably ably lead to?

Let me quote from a letter I have just received:

"I have been married six months. Lately a very nice boy who works nights has been coming in to see me in the afternoons. There is no harm in it. We just kid each other. But he has made me promise not to tell my husband. That is what worries me. It seems silly to tell my boy friend he can't come any more when he has kissed me a few times, but I am afraid if my husband found out about his coming he wouldn't understand. He is very jealous."

Don't you see how easily it happens. The devoted, jealous husband away all day, the innocent, rather too innocent young wife with too much leisure, the unscrupulous and probably attractive youth who wants to amuse himself with the pretty wife, to dodge responsibility in regard to the husband and to remain free to start up, if he likes, an entertaining little affair, love affair — the kind that one can escape from at a moment's notice.

The stage is all set, you see, for a highly pleasant drama, perhaps even for a tragedy. We've seen it on the stage a hundred times and we are only too familiar with the deceit, the stolen pleasure, the swiftly-following misery, the jealousy, the discovery, the tortured love that the actors in such a piece have to picture for us.

And nothing can prevent the development of such a drama, even in the most innocent hearts, if the secrecy-loving boy friend, to tell her husband the whole story.

Perhaps it will be awkward and perhaps there may even be a little scene. But that won't matter. The worry of deceit will have been done away with, and that marriage will be saved from going on the rocks.

What these young wives and their young husbands, too, don't understand is that it's humanly impossible to be forever balancing between truth and deceit. Husbands and wives can't be loyal and confidential six days in the week and on the remaining day dabble in secrecy and concealment. It doesn't work. Suppose you begin to be the most cautious wading in that sea of pretense at love-making. A week, a month later, you'll be up to your neck.

Perhaps this policy of complete confidence sounds to you insipid and old-fashioned. Perhaps you've listened to the philosophy of coquetry and have been told that you can only keep your husband's love at a fever pitch by pretending to flirt with other men, or that the way to spoil a wife is to "keep her guessing."

I will suggest only that you do not attempt these artful exploits unless you are pretty sure of your skill. The flirt mustn't bungle.

But any love trickery that's open and public I'm not for the moment discussing.

I am merely urging that concealment in marriage is the most dangerous of practices and just as much so in a "modern" union as it was in your grandmother's day. So, brides and grooms, don't let any one persuade you that a healthy confidence between husband and wife is old-fashioned sentimentality instead of being, as it really is, the bedrock of married happiness.

APRIL ESCAPADE - - - - BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

"About what?" she asked, reluctantly.

"About your—perhaps—liking me," he answered, not looking at her. For a moment the girl made no reply.

"I have. I began so very much about liking you," she asked then, averting her own gaze, biting her lips.

"Well don't you?" Chris countered simply.

"But of course I do!" And she laughed unconvincingly.

"No, I mean really," Chris persisted, unsmiling.

"Surely you want me to like you?"

"You know what I mean," he said reflectively. "I'm sure you know what I mean. If I'm wrong—if this isn't going to leave any scar—if it isn't going to cause you any unhappiness, than I beg your pardon for speaking, and I'm sorry."

Mary Kate was silent, looking at him. Once or twice she swallowed; she made no effort to speak.

"Tell me if I'm wrong, and I'll shut up," Chris said.

Still absolute silence, her ashamed fascinated eyes on his face.

"How about it?" he asked, eyes narrowed, lips pursed a little, as he watched her.

"You're—not wrong," Mary Kate said, at last, steadily, in a constrained voice.

"Well," he echoed, in real concern. The girl put her elbows suddenly on the table, and covered her face with her hands. "I'm awfully sorry!" Chris said quickly. There was a pause. Then Mary Kate put down her hands, looked honestly unsmilingly into his face.

"It doesn't matter," she said, briefly.

"I thought so—when I telephoned last night. I'm so sorry!" the man repeated.

"I hoped it was not so."

Mary Kate smiled and blinked, but her dark lashes were wet. There was a pause.

"Well, what of it?" she asked, then, philosophically. . .

"Only that I wanted to say this," Chris began, after watching her for a silent minute. "That—of course you're not in love with me, you don't really care about me, in the least. And it'd be awfully sorry to have you think you were—to have you think you did."

"Thank you," Mary Kate answered, jolly.

"Don't be angry about it," he said.

"Angry!" And she laughed lightly, if a little crackily, too.

"How old are you, Mary?" the man ignoring the little pretence, presently asked thoughtfully.

"Twenty," she answered.

"I'm thirty-three. I'm nearly thirty-four."

CHAPTER XXXIV

It was after two o'clock now; the music had ceased. The dining room was almost deserted; only a few waiters hovered near the door, only a few late luncheon were murmuring, as these two were, at scattered tables. Outside, the blue sky was clouded again, and the light, irresolute rain was again falling.

Chris leaned across the table, and for a quick second put a warm brown hand over his own. His eyes were smiling, but his tone was all kind.

"It's not going to take you very long to get over it, Mary?"

"All my life's she answered quickly. "Ah, no, no, dear!"

"Not that it matters," she said dully. "I don't know" she began again with a desperate little laugh, "I don't know who told you. I would have died rather than let you know!"

"You've been telling me, all day," Chris answered. "You told me last night, over the telephone."

She accepted this squarely, meeting his eyes. But her color rose steadily.

"I suppose so," she admitted simply, shrugging.

"A feeling like that," he said, "doesn't last —do you see what I mean? I mean—why, we all do that. We all get involved! But the real thing—the things that are tied up with your family, and your friends, and your home town, and — oh, well, a man's success and future, and children, everything—" He stopped.

"I'm trying to say something," he recommenced, with a laugh, as her gravely watching eyes gave him no encouragement, "and I don't believe I'm getting away with it."

"Oh, yes, you're getting away with it," Mary Kate assured him, simply.

"No, but suppose—suppose," he argued eagerly, that the shoe was on the other foot—that the situation was what-do-you-call-it-reversed. Suppose the situation was reversed. Suppose it was begging you to—well marry me. Can't you see that we wouldn't have a dog's chance for happiness? Can't you imagine yourself saying something like this to me? 'I don't known your friends, I don't understand the way they talk about things, they fuss me when they pull German and French on me—'"

"German and French!" Mary Kate echoed, in a pause, looking away, slightly biting her full lower lip.

"Oh, I don't mean German and French! I mean everything. I mean—well, everything."

"The beggar on horseback!" Mary Kate said lightly.

"You know better," Chris reproached her, warmly. "You know what I mean, better than that," he went on, as she did not speak. "You know that all I mean is, that the things the women I know do, would not hold you for one second. They are not real, I know that. I hate the whole crowd of them, dressing and eating and gambling. I don't see you playing bridge every day, "jabbering their jabber. I mean—"

"I know what you mean!" she said impatiently, resentfully, in the pause.

"That—well, that in a way you're the greatest girl I've ever—Chris explained. "Your mother—your family —the man you're engaged to marry all that is real. If I wanted that sort of thing—little sisters and brothers, all needing me, all wanting things that money can buy, I couldn't get it. You have got a marvelous time ahead. You have got everything—"

"Am I making sense?" he broke off to ask with a little self-conscious laugh.

"Of course you're making sense," the girl said, in the most natural tone she had yet used. But her cheeks were aflame.

"Mary, I want to say something to you." Chris said suddenly, with a quickened manner of tone. "This thing has gone very deep with me. I've done darn-fool things in my life, and I thought this was going to be just one more of them. But it's not. I don't mean what happened Friday night. We're going to get out of this Monty business all right: I'm not afraid of that. I'll square him if I have to join the Socialists, and throw a few bombs myself here and there."

"But it's this other thing that gets me. If you're going to feel badly about it—if you're going to think—How'll I put this? I mean, if any unhappiness for you—"

His incoherent sentences dwindled into silence. He made a fresh start.

"Here's what I'm trying to say: You're young, and you're very beautiful—yo urally are, it sounds like a flat thing to say, but really you are—and you're going to be married, and you've got your mother and home here and your brothers and sisters and friends. I've come along to upset all that—"

Another halt. Mary Kate ended the theme by saying:

"You have."

"Damn!" Chris ejaculated simply.

"We'll go to the hospital now," the girl said, beginning to gather her things, "and after that, I'll not see you again. I ask you—I beg you," she went on, "not to try to see me again after today. But something happened to me, last week," she continued very simply, looking down, speaking in a low voice. "I didn't know what it was —cent of—trembling all the time, and that I couldn't eat, or sleep — and yet I didn't feel sick exactly—

"Everything looked so bright, and so—well, I don't know, thrilling to me," she went on, in a dead silence. "Even I—myself, was thrilling—to myself.

"And then, thinking one night, I suddenly knew what it was. I was remembering Burlingame, and all that time last week, and when I came to thinking about you—"

A little shrug, an upward glance from her trouble blue eyes, completed the sentence. She got to her feet.

"So that's that!" sh finished. They could speak again as they left the dining-room.

But in the yellow taxi lumbering through the light, sun-penetrated rain that I couldn't eat, or sleep — and yet I didn't feel sick exactly—

"Oh he was wonderful. He really understood."

Chris had a moment of mortification.

"I suppose he thinks I'm a skunk," he said, uncomfortably.

"I suppose he does!" she conceded, indifferently.

"It's all sort of a mess," Chris mused, after a moment. Mary Kate made no answer.

"Is this man in a jail hospital!" she asked.

"No. Gordy managed that. He asked them that no charge be made against him until we get it all straight. He intends —at least he hopes, that he can claim that it was all a sort of joke—a man he knew, who'd gotten boiled at the club, and so on."

"Could he do that?"

"Oh, it's being done all the time!" Chris assured her.

They were at the hospital mounting the formidable flight of steps that rose at its imposing base. Inside there were certain formalities, and then a middle aged nurse, with a bunch of keys at her girdle, led them through various clean, antiseptic-scented hallways to one of the immense wings of the enormous building. An elevator boy then took charge of them, and eventually they found themselves alone, outside of a white-painted steel door, one of a hun dred similar doors that closely noted a long upper corridor. Number seven-six-seven,

The door stood slightly ajar. Chris knocked upon it lightly with the silver head of his walking stick. He glanced at Mary Kate: she was a little pale now, and looked frightened.

"Come in!" a nurse's voice said instantly.

Chris and Mary Kate pushed open the door, and were in a small, clean, white room, filled with a narrow white high bed, a white chair, and a great white-curtained window flooded with afternoon-light. Bright rain was still falling on the city below the hill.

Chris saw these things after one quick glance at the man who lay bandaged in the bed, his sullen expression look turned towards the door. But Mary Kate's look got no further than the invalid's face.

Her breath rose on a quick gasp. For a second she wavered as if she were going to faint. Then with a sob she was in the little space between door and bed with a few flying steps, she was on her knees beside the injured man, her face against the hand she clasped in both of hers.

"Oh, Mart, Mart, Mart!" she cried.

CHAPTER XXXV

On the following night Mrs. O'Hara went over to see Uncle Robert, as always on Wednesday evenings, escorted by Tim. Martin was left in Mary Kate's care, his bandaged arm carefully propped on pillows, himself comfortable in the big kitchen armchair.

Cass came in, and he and Martin played cribbage, both furtively watching Mary Kate, who busied herself quietly and constantly about the kitchen ,wiping the last spoon, putting it away, brushing the stove with the old turkey wing that hung beside it, wiping sinkboards and chairs carefully.

She was subdued and nervous tonight: close to tears. Mrs. O'Hara had imagined this condition a natural reaction to Mart's accident she had had a turn to herself that she would not soon forget. She had suggested that Mary Kate go with her to Aunt Julia's but the girl had wearily declined. She did not feel like going out, somehow.

The little children straggled up to bed at eight o'clock. Cass made sugary by Mary Kate's paleness and her man ner, wondered if there was anyone to whom they could telephone, for a fourth at bridge. But Mary Kat; also negatived this idea; she said suppress edly that she meant to go early to bed.

Martin had not spoken to his sister since ris return home the day before they had avoided even each other's eyes. Of the shadow on his handsome face she had been fearfully conscious all day; she knew the terrible hour of reckoning must come. And meanwhile it was unbearable to be at outs with Mart. They had been inseparable friends since actual babyhood; they had never quarrelled. It had been a mutual admiration society, Mary Kate thinking that no brother and even

See That Your Child Has Good Teeth

Dr. Bisch Tells How to Do It

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Unfortunately, the average parent does not regard the child's first set of teeth as important simply because at six or seven the second permanent set of thirty-two gradually takes the place of the first "milk" set of twenty.

Yet decayed first teeth are a menace to the child's health as well as decayed second teeth.

Furthermore, when the first teeth are poorly formed or grow irregularly they affect markedly the growth of the jaw, upper and lower, and the biting surfaces of the teeth.

In teeth that are normal the biting surfaces should always touch and dove tail, so to speak, at all places. When this is not the case the food is not chewed properly, the function of the salivary glands in the mouth is interfered with—and these aid digestion—and even nervousness and backwardness in mental as well as physical development may result.

Scientifically speaking, the mother should begin to think of her child's teeth even before the child is born. Therefore the mother should follow a diet which is most conducive to a strong and healthy dentition.

To this end foods should be taken in which there are considerable lime and phosphate for bone growth. Milk, fresh vegetables and fruit as well as cereals should be stressed. Made-over dishes, spicy foods and rich dishes of all kinds are to be avoided.

And in this connection the candy bill of the mother herself should be considered.

If she has bad teeth or teeth missing or malocclusion — the teeth not touching one upon the other—she, too, cannot chew her food properly and therby she courts digestive trouble.

The best food for the infant is, of course, mother's milk. Mother's milk is rich in the mineral constituents so necessary for sound and strong first teeth.

The act of nursing on the part of the baby undoubtedly also helps to develop the muscles masticating and the jaws in general.

It has been estimated that 96 per cent of all the teeth are perfect so far as their health goes when they first grow out of the gums while some 95 per cent of the the children entering school have one or more decayed teeth!

This would prove that the first teeth are much neglected.

Candy has a bad name as regards its effect on children's teeth. The reason is not that sugar directly harms teeth, but that, when given between meals as is done so often, it "spoils the appetite of the child and prevents the taking of foods that are good for tooth building.

Candy should not be withheld from a child, but it is best always to give it after meals.

Prevent Crime by Training Children

By Louis E Bisch, M D, Ph D
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

From statistics compiled by one of our well-known and widely read magazines we learn that crime piles up more loss to the country every year than any other item in our national ledger.

To quote one statement made in this compilation, "The country's crime cost annually is two and a half times the national budget for the same year, more than three times the customs and internal revenue receipts, and at least twelve times the annual cost of the army and navy.

And all this enormous expense incurred by a small fraction of the population—from one-and-a-half per cent of the total!

And where do we find, as a rule, the very first indications of crime appearing?—

In childhood!

Now, then, no two children are alike. Each child is not only actually different from every other child but potentially different as well.

And it is these individual differences that will either "make or break" them as adults.

We hear a great deal of talk about crime and the methods for curbing it. Usually it's about the police, the courts and penal institutions. But seldom is the problem attacked at its source.

What source is childhood!

This statement does not imply, however, that every case of recorded criminality can be traced back to childhood days. But many hundreds and hundreds can. Childhood days are the days when the child is impressionable and open to makign as well as being influenced; the days, also, when in the individual differences present the germ of future lawlessness can be discovered.

The boy is an out-and-out materialist in the early years.

Dependent as he is for everything upon his parents, he comes to accept all things as a matter of course—in rather a selfish spirit.

Thus he soon develops into a petty tyrant in his own sphere.

And it is just in this necessary and unavoidable attitude on the part of the child that the germ of delinquency lies.

Leave him unhampered and unbridled, allow his ever-present demands to be satisfied, and before the sixth year is reached the child has become well-nigh unbearable.

In the decidedly different children those beginnings of social and antisocial tendencies soon become marked. It is not long before the child is a real problem. And from the merely different child to the problem child, the next step to the delinquent child is a short one.

As early as possible the child should be taught self-control.

He must also learn the pleasure derived from giving pleasure to others.

In some degree the child will work out this matter for himself, soon finding that by making an effort to be agreeable to others greater benefits will rebound. Still, no parent will ever regret the time and efforts spent in teaching altruistic ideals to his offspring.

All mentally unbalanced or delinquent children should be placed in proper institutions so that society may be safeguarded.

This would be one of the most effective ways of attacking crime at its source.

Microbes Bow to March of Science

By Louis E Bisch, M D, Ph D
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Disease is growing less and less mysterious because science is discovering the cause of one after another and the general public itself is becoming better and better informed as to these matters.

Although most persons know that it only immediately after lunch or supper as part of the dessert.

All sorts of starch, sugary, mushy foods are to be held to a minimum if the health of the child are to be preserved.

Foods containing fibrous matter are best such as whole wheat and bran, spinach, swiss-back, celery, carrots, cauliflower, etc.

And brushing regularly up and down and sideways at least three times a day after each meal, is highly important so as to prevent the lodging and decay of food particles in the spaces between the teeth.

many diseases such as diphtheria, scarlet fever, tuberculosis, pneumonia, etc., are caused by germs, few seem to have a clear conception as to what, exactly, germs are and how they act.

Germs are very minute—microscopic—organisms, some of which are vegetables and animals so far as their growth is concerned, and some of which are animal and parasitic in nature.

Disease occurs because these organisms enter the human body by way of the lungs, or mouth, nose, or digestive tract, as a rule, then multiply and give off poisons.

It is the poisons or toxins which play such havoc in the human host and which produce disease symptoms, each type of infectious micro-organism giving rise to its own particular set of practices or symptoms.

All disease germs, or bacteria or microbes micro-organisms or however they may be called, have an outer covering of cellulose and an internal substance, protoplasm, which is living tissue. They do not, however, contain the usual green coloring matter of plants—the chlorophyll—therefore, although generally of vegetable origin, they are colorless.

Some microbes are round, other oval spiral, rod-shaped or formed like a thin filament.

When round they are called micrococci. When shaped like a rod they are known as bacilli or bacteria.

Although all these micro-organisms are exceedingly small the different varieties vary in size from one-fifty thousandths of an inch to one five-hundredths of an inch.

Germs multiply by division or by the production of eggs or spores. Strange to say these spores are very hardy and are able to live despite boiling for a few minutes while the mother cells succumb under similar treatment.

It is important to know that moisture and heat favor the growth of all germs. That is why in all diseases of which nature physicians recommend fresh, cool air.

All varieties grow and multiply with startling rapidity. A single bacterium divides into two parts, then into four, then eight, then sixteen, until after twenty-four hours, the number of offspring from a single one runs into over sixteen millions!

One can readily understand, therefore, how dangerous the invasion of germs into the body is. They multiply with frightful rapidity and it takes most intricate chemical and physiological processes within the body to fight such an invasion.

Before symptoms appear—that is, before the patient has fever or rash or pain or feels sick—the particular germs in question have already been in the body and multiplying for days.

This stage, from the time of infection to the appearance of symptoms, is called the "incubation period."

It varies in different diseases. For chicken pox, for instance, it is from ten to fourteen days, in diphtheria from one to eight, etc.

ROOKIE'S HOMER DEFEATS YANKS

Seeds' Circuit Clout is the Winning Margin for Cleveland

NEW YORK, May 6.—Home runs by Eddie Morgan and Bob Seeds accounted for Cleveland's 7 to 6 victory over the New York Yankees before 10,000 in the opening game of a three-game series yesterday, Morgan hit a bases run to deep left field inside the park, off Waite Hoyt, with Perrell who had tripled, on base. In the eighth inning, Seeds, rookie outfielder from Kansas City, hit a home run into the left field stands off Johnson for what proved to be the winning run.

The Yankees rallied in the ninth and put over one run when Lazzeri's second double of the game drove in Koenig. Hargrave, pinch-hitting for Byrd, ended out, Harder to Morgan, for the final out with the tying run on third and the winning run on Perrell started for Cleveland, but was relieved by Harder after he had started the eighth by Walking Byrd. Perrell received credit for the victory.

George Pipgras, who started for the Yankees, was the losing pitcher. Combs hit a homer to left field, inside the park, on his first time at bat in the opening inning.

Washington, May 7. —The Washington Senators broke their three game losing streak yesterday by defeating the Detroit Tigers 8 to 4 in a closely contested game. Marberry was credited with his third win of the season, although he was replaced by Braxton in the eighth. Sam Rice continued his hitting streak, running it to 17 games.

The Nats jumped on Sorrell for four singles and a double for three runs in the first, but the Tigers came back in the second to score one and tied the count in the third. Sorrell held the Nats hitless until the fifth when he was nicked for another run, Marberry was replaced in the eighth after Alexander singled but Braxton retired the side without further trouble.

Philadelphia, May 7.—The Athletics took the second game of the series from the St. Louis Browns here yesterday afternoon by the score of 4 to 1, thus running their winning streak to six straight.

Both Walberg and Gray pitched in mid-season form for both teams, but the Mackmen batted out the breaks. Walberg yielded six widely-scattered hits, while Gray held the A's to five. One of these registered against him, however, was a home run off the bat of Jimmy Foxx, which followed a single by Simmons in the fourth.

An error, a delayed throw, two sacrifices, and a single gave the world champions two more runs in the seventh, clinching the game.

Two singles with a walk sandwiched in between enabled the Browns to score a run in the eighth. Otherwise they were helpless.

Boston, May 7.— The Chicago White Sox fell upon the big Ed Morris for four runs in the fifth inning and defeated the Red Sox 4 to 3, in the first game of their series here yesterday.

Singles by Watwood, Lyons and Cissell, Kamm's home-base walloop and a pass to Frank Hitter Metzler did the trick for the White Hose.

After that young Eddie Durham, making his appearance in the box for the Red Sox this season, held them hitless, but Lyons kept the Boston hits scattered and held his lead.

Both teams played errorless ball.

An Oil of Merit.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and pushed by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept public favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt its power to repair and heal.

WINNING STREAK ROBINS BREAKS

New York Giants and the Braves Were Other Winners in National

Pittsburg, May 7.—The Pittsburg Pirates dropped into third place yesterday as the league-leading New York Giants took the second successive game of the current series 11 to 5, aided by four home runs.

Seven of the Giant runs were direct results of home runs. Terry's blow in the second inning scored Lindstrom ahead of him. Crosford scored in the fifth behind Ott. Reese hit a home run in the same frame and Leach drove a ball into the right field stand in the eighth, scoring Hogan ahead.

Pittsburg made a desperate rally in the eighth scoring six runs on five hits. The bases were filled when Gustafe Suhr grounded the ball to Terry for the third out.

Cubango, May 7.—The seven-game winning streak of the Brooklyn Robins was snapped yesterday as the Chicago Cubs took the first game of the series 3 to 1 in a contest that saw all the scoring confined to the first inning.

Sheriff Blake grounded one for Babe Herman in the Brooklyn first and the slugger parked the ball in the right field bleachers. English tripled to start the Cubs' first inning and Hack Wilson promptly dropped a ball into the left field bleachers. Cuyler singled, stole second and scored on Grimm's single.

Vance then bore down and with Morrison, who relieved him, held the Cubs in four well scattered hits for the eight innings.

Cincinnati, May 7.—Harry Seibold scoring his first victory in five complete games for the Boston Braves with a 4 to 3 decision over Pete Donohue and the Cincinnati Reds here yesterday.

The Braves scored their runs in the first two innings and then protected the lead by backing up Seibold's pitching with some good fielding.

Maranville played a remarkable game at short for the Braves and drove in the winning run. Two of Donohue's seven walks were turned into runs.

COPPER PRICE IS FOLLOWED BY FEELING RELIEF

General Price Movement In Mining Market Goes Lower

By RALPH RADFORD

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

TORONTO — Once again an attempt to buck the ancient laws of supply and demand suffered defeat when the price of copper broke from 18 cents to 14 cents a pound in one more and three the mining market into a mild uproar which was still in evidence when the week under review ended. Actual volume of sales did not react in the manner that might have been expected, but price movements, largely of an unfavorable nature, were broad, carrying the base metal stocks into lower territory that they have seen for some time.

Both gold and silk mascerved in an exemplary manner, and not a little of their strength was attributed along the street to switching from some of the more dubious base metals. That the latter class of stocks was under liquidation was evident from the moment the price cut in copper was announced, and the fact that they did not break wide open is taken as further evidence of the fundamental firmness of the list.

Now that the news is out, a feeling of relief is noticeable in some quarters for the question of copper prices has been hanging over the market for several months. In view of the unsound statistical position of the metal, the huge stocks piled up and the reluctance of purchasers to make commitments in spite of the approach of the big construction season, few economists held forth much hope that the 18-cent level could be maintained. The reduction, therefore, was more or less a foregone conclusion, and it is generally admitted the development was almost fully discounted during the past month or so.

How Canada Is Affected

Four cents less a pound for copper will not seriously cripple our low cost Canadian copper producers like Noranda. It will, however, make considerable difference to the national revenue. Canadian production of copper in the last two months of 1929 was approximately 48,000,000 pounds. Your cents a pound applied to this total would represent a loss of over $1,900,000 for the two months or at the rate of nearly $1,000,000 a month. By the end of 1930 Canada is expected to be producing at the rate of 250,000 tons of copper per year. On this basis four cents a pound would represent approximately $2,000,000 per annum.

Noranda and Nickel Sale

Noranda should have no difficulty in comfortably earning its dividend on 14c copper. Noranda's cost last year were about 11c a pound after allowance for depreciation and depletion. This year costs should be a couple of cents lower than in 1929 so that there is a margin of about five cents a pound profit at the 14c price, in addition to which, Noranda's gold values will help.

International Nickel, while its revenue from copper sales will of course be less, has nothing to worry about with copper around these prices. As a matter of fact the increased demand for copper in the United States may help International Nickel to get rid of its surplus copper stocks which have said to be fairly high.

What Authorities Say

It is too early yet to say how much the drop in price will stimulate the buying of copper and different copper authorities hold quite opposite opinions. The prevailing view seems to be however, that the 14c price is to be the bottom as the bulk of the world's copper is produced at a cost of 12c to 13c a pound. Sir Auckland Geddes, chairman of the Rio Tinto Company, referring to the position of copper at the annual meeting a few days ago, stated "copper may be cheaper, but it has a long decline in price now, look out for famine prices in the not too distant future."

William O. Schaefer of the Copper and Brass Research Association, estimates that by 1934 world production of copper will be about 2,240,000 tons. This means," he says, "that all the copper that North and South America and Africa can produce from its present known mines at present plants can be absorbed in the markets of the world."

Mr. H. Brownell, vice-president and chairman of the Finance Committee of American Smelting and Refining Company, said at the annual meeting a couple of weeks ago that if world consumption in 1930 is only 75 per cent of 1929, it will be just about the present rate of operation in the mines of the world. He expected to see much heavier buying by Germany now that the Young reparations plan has been ratified. And he expressed his belief that the 1930 foreign consumption of copper would be as big as in 1929.

This week's cut in price was timed to precede the usual wave of buying which takes place in May and June. The few weeks therefore, will be extremely interesting for students of the copper situation to watch.

Mr. and Mrs. A. McGie were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Haycock Rich at Abbey Dawn, Bloomfield, on Tuesday.

ESTIMATES OF DEAD

Government Report In Commons Says Government in Control

Lahore, India, May 9 (CP). — Dr. Gopichand, general secretary of the Lahore all-India National Congress committee, was arrested today on a charge of sedition.

Bombay, India, May 9 (CP).—Later reports from Sholapur emphasized the gravity of the situation there. Though two companies of British infantry had arrived from Ahmednagah, it is understood the city, which has a population of sixty thousand and is two hundred and twenty miles from here, was still in virtual control of the natives. More reinforcements are enroute.

London, May 9 (CP).—Rt. Hon. Wedgewood, secretary of state for India, speaking before the Commons today gave the gist of a government telegram declaring the Indian situation well under control despite riotous outbreaks which followed the arrest of Gandhi.

Women Flee

Poona, India, May 9 (CP). — One hundred and fifty European women and children arrived here today, terror in their faces, from Solapur, which they left yesterday as three Mahamma dan policemen were being burned to death by an angry mob of Indians. They said the three policemen were captured by the mob, bound together, their uniforms soaked with kerosene and set afire. The outrage occurred near the sessions court building which was also burned by the mob, which had begun its demonstration in behalf of the civil disobedience campaign and its protest at the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi.

Official explanation of the evacuation said the authorities wished to leave the police free to deal with the disturbance they should occur today or tomorrow, Saturday being the Moslem feast day of Bakrid.

Estimates of the number killed in yesterday's riots varied. Officially it was said, about twelve were killed, while other estimates gave the native dead as high as twenty-five and police dead as high as seven. Many of the refugees thought the casualties must run much higher. About 100 persons are thought to have been wounded. While there was considerable rifle fire, machine guns were not used. A machine gun was taken from the police at the time by an auxiliary force but the mob melted before it.

POONA, May 9.—CP—All European women and children were taken by a guarded train from the effected area and surrounding towns and the city itself was cleared for eventualities which might follow yesterday's reign of terror. European and missionaries were advised to leave Talegaon, thirty miles from here, where raids on a glass factory had been threatened.

CIGARS STOLEN BY HUNDREDS IN MARMORA HOTEL

Youth Handed Over as Ward to Children's Aid Society

SUSPENDS SENTENCE

Receivers of Cigars Ordered to Make Restiction in Case

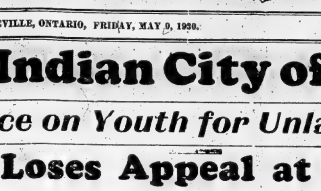
Wholesale theft of cigars from the hotel at Marmora owned by J. O. Potts, was temporarily checked when police court was held in that village yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Casement of Madoc. B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney, prosecuted, and Provincial Constable Percy Grey made the investigation, which brought the participants into court. Thomas Emigh, aged 19 years, alleged to be of simple mind, was charged with the theft of over $500.00 worth of cigars during a long period and four others were charged with receiving stolen goods knowing the same to have been stolen. The boy pleaded guilty and was given over as a ward of the Children's Shelter in custody of Inspector T. O. Ruston and the other four were ordered to make restitution of $5.00 each and pay the costs suspended sentence was then given for six months in each offering.

It is alleged that Emigh was an employee of the hotel and had access to the cellar where large number of cigars were kept for curing. With a stick the boy would reach in and take out the cigars from the humidor and distribute the same to his many friends. The loss became so heavy that Mr. Potts set out to watch the boy and caught him in the act of taking cigars. The matter was referred to the Provincial Police and investigation recovered part of the loot in some homes in Marmora and the charge followed. All of the men implicated, mostly of foreign extraction, were given a stiff reprimand by the presiding Magistrate.

LOUIS M. AUGER LOSES APPEAL

Former Member Appealed Against Conviction on Assault

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—Louis M. Auger, former member of Parliament for Russell and Osgoode Hall law student, failed in his appeal to the second division court at Osgoode Hall yesterday morning before Judge Daly of Ottawa, of committing a serious offence against a young girl who went to his rooms in the Parliament Buildings to seek employment in the Civil Service.



Auger appealed against the sentence of two years in Portsmouth Penitentiary. Chief Justice Latchford said that the Court was unanimously of the opinion that there was sufficient corroboration that the act was committed and that the accused was the person who committed it.

The former member for Russell was first sentenced to nine years on a charge of rape, but on appeal the conviction was quashed and a new trial ordered when Auger was found not guilty. He was then faced with a charge of seduction and found guilty, being sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. It was appeal against this conviction that was refused by the Second Appellate Division today.

SENTENCE WAS SUSPENDED IN WOUNDING CASE

Magistrate Holds That Youth Had No Right To Shoot

CROWN'S VIEW

Mr. Payne Makes Spirited Plea For Young Man

"We should not in this court establish a precedent that a man can shoot on sight," said Mr. B. C. Donnan, when Thomas McDougal, Scotch immigrant, employed by C. U. Clancy in Rawdon Township appeared today before Magistrate Mikel charged with unlawfully wounding Howard Holden and Clelland Reid when these boys came to the Clancy farm to get a hot rack that had been recently purchased. C. A. Payne, who acted for the boy argued that the charge be withdrawn, quoting the code that a man had a right to defend property within reasonable means and he expressed the view that the fact of the two wounded not giving or answering McDougal when he called to them to stop as reasonable means. Magistrate Mikel held that the boy had not the right to shoot but as the injury was trivial he would suspend sentence for six months on each count. Costs were assessed amounting to $23.50 in one case and no costs in the other.

Mr. Payne, in explaining the case to His Worship said McDougal had pleaded not guilty, stated that the boy was at home alone at the time and unknown to McDougal, a man had arranged the sale of the hog rack. McDougal did not hear Holden and Reid come into the yard and when they were driving away the boy brought the gun with him out of the house and ordered the two to stop. Apparently the boys in the car did not hear the command and McDougal shot but not direct and unfortunately both of the boys were hit. It was shown that the house was all lighted and this was in favor of the boy for the men should have stopped at the command, he said. When the court was adjourned, Mr. Clancy presented the bong for the good behaviour of the boy who left in his custody.

Mr. Clancy explained to the press the boy was a good workman and he believed the boy was afraid the strangers on the property were there with intentions on the hen coops as many had been pilfered in that section previous to the night of the wounding. Of course his fears were quite unfounded.

GERMAN SCHOLAR MEETS DEATH IN FAR FROZEN NORTH LAND

Body Found By R.C.M.P. Near Haven of Prospector's Shack

SCANTILY CLOTHED

BY WILFRED EGGLESTON
(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright 1930)

Ottawa, May 10—How a German scholar perished at the end of a lonely trail, though only a stone's throw away was an oil-Prospector's shack with a stove, shavings and matches ready for the fire, is grimly told in the R. C. M. P. report from Hay River, which has just been added to the file marked "Dr. Kurt Faber" in office of the commissioner at Ottawa.

Starving to death, perhaps delirious, his extremities freezing, Dr. Faber, some time last February met death after a perilous attempt to break into the shack, shattering a panel and cutting his numbed hands in the vain effort.

Doctor of philosophy, savant and wanderer, the unfortunate man had set out from Edmonton about the middle of October for Peace River, intending to catch the last boat for Fort Vermilion, thence to Hay River, go down Hay River to Great Slave Lake, and to return via Resolution, Fort Smith and Fort Mckurray. The circuit was nearly half complete when death overtook him on the lonely stretch of country from Hay River Post down to the mouth of the river on Great Slave Lake.

Had he been able to gain entrance to the shack and started a fire in the stove or on the earth floor, he might have regained sufficient strength to plod the remaining 15 miles to civilization—in the form of an R. C. M. P. post. Or the smoke might have attracted the attention of wandering Indians.

At the time of his death he had journeyed some 100 miles of isolated country never used by Indians or white men in the winter because of the difficulty of the trail, and Police are assured that he was able to get so far without collapsing.

Beyond the scanty clothing in which he was found and a few personal papers, he was without possessions of any kind, and a search will be made this spring for his equipment. Neither snowshoes nor dog sled of any kind were found near him. No food but a handful of tea in one of his pockets was found.

An additional touch of pathos is to be found in the fact that the first attempt to locate him in the vastness of the north west was made in January when word was received that his mother, to a letter from a friend in New York to the Commissioner's office here at Ottawa, word was sent out to all posts in the vicinity asking them for tidings of Dr. Faber's parents and let him know that his relatives in Germany were anxious to hear from him.

Shortly afterwards another message was received from Paul A. von Auesberg, then residing at the Springer Hotel, Edmonton, in which he sought information as to the journalist's whereabouts. Faber apparently was the representative of a chain of German newspaper at one time and another.

In that letter he was described as a man of 5 feet 10 1-2 inches, weighing 165 pounds, brown and blue eyes, no glasses, brown hair, a broad forehead, smooth shaven, with a trait of speaking fast and abruptly with a pronounced lisp.

While the German consul as Winnipeg the friends at New York and Edmonton were daily waiting some word out of the north, the sad message came out, curt and without detail that his body had been found.

The news reached Hay River on February 28th. Special Constable Norn came in to the post and reported that four Indians had just reached the settlement from a moose hunt up the Hay River, and that they had found the body of a man lying on the side of the river, about 15 miles upstream. The body had been disturbed by coyotes, and it was the coyotes' activities digging down some two feet in the snow that had aroused their attention.

The location was given as the site of an old oil well, where the Pure Oil company had drilled some years before, and the shack mentioned was left by the drillers.

Though a blanket had been pulled over the man as though he had laid down on the snow to sleep, he was very sparsely clad, and one foot bare, the moccasin missing. Corporal Cook, who made the investigation for the department and reported, said that he did not think the coyotes had carried the moccasin away, but that Dr. Faber had either pulled it off in a delirious state or had tried to rub the circulation back into the frozen member.

At the first visit Corporal Cook concluded that snow drifted high against the door of the shack, which opened outward, had prevented Dr. Faber from gaining entrance. On a second visit he noted the broken window-pane and in light of the cuts noted in the journalist's hands, he was able to conjure up the sad picture of a weakened and weary man at the limits of his endurance seeking to win through to shelter.

The police have no suspicion of foul play. Dr. Faber had received some $500 before he left Edmonton. He took $100 and left the remainder in the bank at that point. When discovered he had three one dollar bills and three 25 cent pieces on him. He had no diary or other documents, only a personal letter in German, and a few notes scribbled on an envelope.

At the request of his relatives in Germany the German scholar was interred at the cemetery at Hay River.

GRAPHIC STORY TOLD OF VISIT

Toronto, Ont., May 8—Elihu Stewart of Culloden, who knew Rev. Josiah Henson of Dresden, Ont., fifty years ago says: "I asked him if he considered that he was the leading character in Mrs. Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and also how he had been received when presented to Queen Victoria. In reply to my first question he said: 'I was living in Baltimore, Md., one winter and Mrs. Stowe, who lived near, frequently asked me to see her home where she asked me a great many questions, about my life and surroundings. When her book came out she gave me a copy.'

"The story of his visit to Queen Victoria was very graphic. He had been summoned to court by the Queen herself and was conducted into a room of the palace to wait for her. The door opened and four women entered, three of them bearing the train of the lady in front, the queen herself. She shook my hand, asked me to be seated and then said: "Mr. Henson, I expected to see a very old man, perhaps on crutches, but I am delighted to see such a well preserved, good looking man as you are. Mr. Henson's reply was unique; touching his forehead with his hand, a negro salutation, he said: 'My sovereign, that is what all the ladies say.'

CAR ACCIDENT ON MADOC ROAD

Lightning Struck Elm Tree During Severe Electric Storm

Madoc, May 7 (By Mail)—What might have proved a very serious accident occurred on the Belleville Road just south of the village on Wednesday about noon, when the car driven by Miss Reta Fleming of Ivanhoe left the road, and took the ditch. The car narrowly missed a telephone pole, and was stopped by the wire fence of Bate Tanner's pasture field. Luckily none of the occupants were injured, and the car escaped without a scratch. Naylor's garage was telephoned and aid was at hand promptly. The accident, it is said, was the result of a lost bolt in the steering gear.

Misses Ethel and Sylvia Richmond entertained several of their friends on Friday evening. A pleasant time was spent at bridge and games. Dainty refreshments added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

Mrs. A. Kincaid had the misfortune to be hit by a large piece of wood fall on Thursday, seriously injuring her feet, and severely bruising her legs. During the electrical storm that passed over the village on Friday afternoon, lightning struck an elm tree near the Anglican Rectory. The bolt entered one of the windows of the Rectory shattering the glass, and passed out of a window exactly opposite, without injury to any one in the house. Mrs. Reynolds who is convalescing from a fractured ankle was sitting in a chair near, but just out of the path of the projectile.

The May meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church met at the home of Mrs. D. Moorcroft on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance. Mrs. S. S. Ashley presiding. The program was in charge of Mrs. L. Ashley and Mrs. M. Maybee. Opening the meeting with a few verses of several familiar hymns, Mrs. Ashley chose "Take Time To Be Holy", "Blessed Assurance," and "I Love to Tell the Story," among others, and Mrs. G. Huffman took the Scripture Reading choosing the story of Pentecost, from the first Chapter of Acts, and prayer by Mrs. Huffman followed. Mrs. J. B. Hough gave a reading entitled "His Witnesses," after which the president conducted the business meeting. Roll call was answered by about twenty-five members. Minutes of last meeting were read by Mrs. F. Dafoe and approved. Correspondence regarding Monthly Literature was read by Mrs. Hough. Reports were given by the chairmen of standing committees and by the heralds of the Watch Tower, the chief interest centering on Angola in West Africa, which Mission is celebrating its Jubilee Anniversary.

Mrs. Rutherford then gave in her own capable and earnest way a synopsis of the chapter, "The Unfinished Task," from the Study Book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," dwelling particularly on the magnitude of the church's task in Asia, Africa, and South America. The Closing Prayer was offered by Mrs. Rivers, after which a social half hour was spent before departing.

BOUQUETS PART COURT COSTUME

One United States Woman Paying $300 for Orchids

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright 1930)

London, May 8—The season of the courts is drawing near, the first having been announced for May 14th. Our young debutantes are already asking the question, "What shall I wear?" The favorite colors this year will be deep parchment, a soft chalky blue and very pale pink.

Many beautiful gowns have already been chosen. One in rich ivory white satin has the fashionable high waistline and ankle-length skirt, with a blue bolero gathered in a diamond clasp on the left shoulder and falling loose over the right shoulder. The court train, of ivory white net has a silver lining arranged to form a panel down the centre, flanked by long lines of embroidery in silver pearls.

A dignified gown was carried out in gold lame that train being of the same material, adorned by a panel of Venetian point lace in a deep cream shade down the middle.

Satin, of course, is a popular material because it lends itself to graceful draping, but lace will also be used either for the entire frock, or in the form of trimmings. One such frock in rose petal pink lace could be seen afterwards for evening. It is worn over an underslip of satin, the skirt fits snugly on the hips and flares wide at the hem, where it is stiffened with horse-hair. A glistening train of silver lame falls from the shoulder.

The old-fashioned grosgrain has been revived for court dresses. It has a dignity all its own and a softness as of crepe de chene. It is used for a gown of deep parchment shade embroidered in green and gold orchids, complete with a heavy gulpire train bordered with the same fabric as the dress. A shower of orchids will be carried with it.

Pans, as usual, are elaborate. One extremely pretty one is of applique Brussels lace on silver net and the handle is of ivory patterned in silver.

Large sums are spent on bouquets. 30 pounds to 40 pounds being paid for the lilies of the valley and sweet pea. One woman from the United States has ordered a bouquet of orchids which will cost at least 60 pounds.

A new style introduced this year, which will be widely followed composed of one kind of flower, circled by quaint, stiff frills of silk. A typical debutante has chosen an attractive posy design in gold and pink and a train inlet with rose tulle sewn on the panel with silk and gold thread.

CUSTOMS FLEET CONFISCATES BOTH RUM CARGOES AND SHIPS

Ottawa, May 8.—The "Fleur de Lis", new flagship of the Canadian customs fleet, commanded by Captain Hubert Coffin, and replacing the "Margaret" of customs fame, has made a notable beginning in preventive work. Despite operation of only five months in 1929, the "Fleur de Lis" listed an impressive total of seizures at the end of the year. Operating mainly in the St. Lawrence until the freeze-up, and then off the maritime coast the flagship seized: 1,496 five-gallon kegs of rum, and the schooner "Francis W. Smith, 163 five-gallon kegs of rum, 8 hogshead of rum and the schooner "Islander."

This information contained in a return tabled recently in parliament, also disclosed that there was an "I'm Alone" piping the rumming trade long before the incident that led to international arbitration. The "Minnie Smith," a harbor boat of the preventive service, seized in April, 1926, a schooner "I'm Alone" and 36 bottles of assorted liquor.

The motorboat appropriately christened "Behave" seized in the last two years such varied items as schooner Marion L. Conrad with 96 cases of whiskey; eight five-gallon kegs of rum; two seizures of six five-gallon kegs of the same; another of two and a half bottles of rum, a bottle of alcohol, thirteen bottles of assorted liquor; a Ford sedan, 24 bottles of whiskey, four five-gallon kegs of rum with 30 flasks of whisky and twenty-four gallon kegs of rum with two-jugs of rum.

Patrol boat number four had a successful year, 1929 season. She seized without assistance the schooner Dorothy M. Smart, with 585 five-gallon kegs of rum; 15 ten-gallon kegs of rye, five ten-gallon kegs of malt, 62 cases and 204 bags of assorted liquor, and the schooner Mary E. with ten ten-gallon kegs of rum and two five-gallon kegs the same commodity, the auxiliary schooner Captain Arpin with 36 cases assorted liquor and thirteen bottles of assorted liquor. In addition to these single-handed exploits, patrol boat number four assisted the Dominion in the seizure of the Minnie May and cargo, which comprised 36 cases of rum, 182 cases and six bags of assorted liquor, 90 cases and 30 ten-gallon drums of ale and two ten-gallon kegs of malt.

RESOURCES

Resources and industries of Hastings County are reviewed in a publication of the Natural Resources Intelligence Service Department of the Interior, Ottawa. This is one of a series covering the counties of southern Ontario, aiming to present in compact form the principal facts concerning the natural resources and industrial development of the county of Hastings. Chapters deal with the situation, area and townships, the history, the origin of place names, population, racial origins, religion, education, school taxes, topography, rivers, climate, agriculture in all its phases, forestry, economic minerals, water powers, recreational resources, transportation, waterroutes, railways, highways, incorporated urban municipalities, list of industries and cheese factories and resources and industrial maps.

The reference to climate is very appropriate at this period of the year. It says: "The climate is temperature with a frost free period of from 123 to 170 days. The precipitation in general but not excessive and there is an abundance of sunshine during the summer months.

"Reliable records place the average date of seeding over a period of six years at April 10th in the vicinity of Belleville and May 6th at Bancroft; similarly the first frosts occurred on October 7th and September 7th."

In Belleville the mean temperature for three months beginning January was 42 above and 28 below, April 70.7 highest, 19.3 lowest; July 89 highest, 45 lowest; October 73.7 highest, 25.3 lowest. For Tweed the average mean readings for the four periods of the year are January 43 highest and 19.5 lowest; April 72. highest, 15 lowest; July 91.5 highest, 44 lowest; October 80.5 highest and 25 lowest.

ELUSIVE MONEY

How money slips away from families is clearly enough emphasized in a despatch from London, England, which tells of researches in the calendar of old Chancery cases showing how Shakespeare's old home was once in the possession of the bailiffs at Stratford-on-Avon to recover judgment for debt. This was after the death of Shakespeare when the house was in the hands of his daughter. The son-in-law of the poet and playwright had contracted the debt which led to the act so recorded," They did breake open ye doores of ye study of said house and rashly seize upon and take divers books, boxes, desks and moneys."

Shakespeare is supposed to have died in the possession of a fair fortune. He owned the best house "New Place" at Stratford and is believed to have been a shrewd man at money making and to have amassed a fair amount of this world's goods. But after his death his money was the way of all money.

The possession of money in one age is no guarantee of its possession in the next. Too many examples of changes are evident to everyone who has seen the rise and ebb of family estates. The second or the third generation often gets away with most of the savings of the creator of the wealth.

In the Shakespeare family there seemed the inclination to get into financial troubles for the poet's father, though a prominent man in the village, did not dare show his head for a time, owing to debts. That fact may have made the poet determined to provide against such in his own life and so he became very successful as producer and theatre owner.

THE STAMP

The postage stamp was ninety years old this week. "Black Penny Queen's head" was the first label. Stamps are so numerous, are changed so often in their designs that the public might almost be excused for failing to realize that this little thing had a birthday, that there was once a first stamp.

What the stamp has meant to trade must be guessed and felt rather than explained. It revolutionized correspondence and it has helped to link up a world. It may also be blamed for lowering the general tone of letter-writing as so many people write today who would not have written had they to wait days before the first stamp. Mail originally cost much and time was required, so that fewer letters and consequently more carefully composed letters were written than today, when one can write as many as he likes.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Reports from all parts of the country tell of the advanced season. Niagara is in full bloom and plum trees are in blossom here. It was only a short time ago the complaint was made of a backward season.

Chairman of the New York Stock Exchange says that the Utopia of cheap money is far off yet. Whether cheap money ought to be called a Utopia is debatable for the real Utopia is in the land of the imagination, and is so far advanced as to be a guiding human hope and star. Utopia leads men by its Merlin gleam, "the light that never was on sea or land." Give humanity Utopia and it will not be any longer Utopia.

TODAY IS SPRING

Soft is the air upon the hill
Bright is the early sun
Clear is the sky, and all the Earth—
A prism—water flung.

This is the Spirit of all Springs
The ecstasy of song
The promise of all things to be
Through all the Ages long—

Yet I am part (for one brief hour)
Of this—this Glorious Mood
Alone, a goddess beauty pleased
In pregnant solitude!

God's Spirit of Great Joy is mine—
All singing caught in me
The glory of His power to know
This brave sweet rhapsody.

Fragrance of hyacinths aglow—
Laughter of waking Earth—
I am a part of Spring today
A Spirit of New Birth!

LATEST STYLE IN AVIATION is the glider, the aeroplane without an engine. Just what it have been waiting for, only applied to motor cars. Greatest objection to motor cars is noise, heat and all kinds of trouble caused by engine not to mention the gasolene bug which eats up the fellow's small change and some of the big stuff. Give me a glider motor car and the rest of the world can go hang.

INTEREST IN THE VISIT of the British airship, R-100 to Canada is bound to be keen. The mooring mast has been placed in position at St. Hubert, Aldrome, Montreal, and all arrangements are being made for the impending visit to Montreal by an organization headed by Brigadier General W. B. King, C.B. Guided before returning to England and during that time will visit Ottawa, western Ontario and Quebec City. It is quite possible that the giant airship will be seen flying over Belleville.

John McCormack, the famous singer, left Ireland a poor boy and won fame and fortune in this country. Where his story reaches into the field of sport is told in the following account given by Captain Denis H. Coghlan, a visitor from overseas and a man with a wide knowledge of turf history in Great Britain and Ireland:

"Leaving Ireland a penniless youth to capture the world with his marvelous voice, John returned to his native soil in 1927, leasing the ancestral home of the Lords of Drogheda—Moore Abbey, Monasterevan—County Kildare, Monasterevan is where St. Erin wrote the life of St. Patrick in the fifth century. Adjoining the abbey demesne is the Kildangan Castle property, where the More O'Ferralls live.

"In earlier and more prosperous days the Kildangan lands possessed some very fine galtops over which my Lords of Drogheda trained many a fine racer. But poverty and time—those twin destroyers—had ruined the 'country' from a training point of view.

"However, John McCormack commissioned young More O'Ferrall to buy three or four yearlings just to see his colours (the spelling is British) on the course. That was in 1928, and I recall the excitement that O'Ferrall and I had 'coping' around the smaller breeders before the opening sales commenced. It was young O'Ferrall's first chance. The purchase money was limited, and he didn't want to make a mistake.

"I have known good sportsmen to buy six to ten yearlings for years and never win a race. It was extraordinary, therefore, that in his first season on the turf John McCormack won races running into double figures, and Golden Lullaby was the crack of the 2-year-olds of her year. She won six races off the reel.

"This success has been maintained, and before sailing for Europe recently, John told me he now has forty-seven horses in training and enjoys the sport immensely."

It's a good story, but it can be made better if the famous tenor will train a horse to win the Epsom Derby or a jumper to take the Grand National. Probably his chances would be better in the Grand National, Irish jumpers usually land that famous prize.

Which recalls a recent note that Billy Barton was being ridden to hounds by his owner, Howard Bruce, in Maryland when this year's Grand National was being run. That's nothing new for Billy Barton. After failing as a flat racer, Billy Barton was bought by Mr. Bruce and used as a hunter in Maryland for several seasons. Then, Billy returned to racing as a jumper and, as every one knows, held the lead over the last hurdle in the Grand National of 1927 only to stumble in the stretch while Tipperary Tim went on to win.

Mother's Day

(By W. H. Mabee)

What is the holiest, the dearest word in our tongue? You think awhile, and likely you will answer "Love". Yes, but love is a sentiment, it is an impersonal word. You never know love except as you know someone loving another. What personal word embodies this word "Love" most and best? And most heads, the world around, will answer "Mother". And as a sentiment embodied in a person is always more and higher than the sentiment itself, "Mother" is commonly reckoned the holiest and dearest word in our tongue. In the first month of May when so many beautiful things spring to life it is especially fitting that Motherhood should be given signal honor. Though the setting apart of a particular day to be known as "Mother's Day" is of very recent origin, the custom of displaying respect, dates back to ancient times.

Authorities say that the earliest record of Mother Worship lies in the tales of the ceremonies by which Rhea the great mother of the gods, was worshipped in Asia Minor, two hundred and fifty years before the birth of Christ. Greek influence introduced the worship of Rhea, (mother), to one of the famous cities of Rome.

Then worship was held in the month of March when people came to present their gifts in the Temple and to enjoy a period of social activity.

It was known as the festival of Hilaria. Christianity changed the mode of celebration, but retained the ancient custom. From the pagan rite in honor of Rhea it developed into an observance in honor of the "Mother" church. The idea of a Sunday known in antiquity as the "mothering Sunday" sprang up. Traces of this observation are found as far apart as the ante-Lenten districts of France, Germany and England. Years have passed by and we are glad to know that Motherhood has become more precious for the whole world loves a mother. The object of the day according to official declaration is "to honor the memory of mothers who have gone" to brighten the lives of those who remain and so to foster among men, women and children, the love of their homes and their parents.

In this busy restless age it might pay all of us to make less of business and more of mother. Make everyday a Mother's Day.

In a log cabin in Indiana a mother lay dying "Abe" she said, "love everybody, hinder nobody, never lie, never strike, never steal and someday the world will be glad that you have lived." Wonderful words of a mother, the great love of this noble Mother for her son and the deep affection the son had for the mother was instrumental in giving to the world one of its greatest heroes in the person of Abraham Lincoln.

Mothers and children would pattern their lives after the example I have just written, the world today would be more like an earthly paradise.

There are today hundreds of dear Mothers who had seen their sons in the great war and for them I would like to quote the "words of Lincoln in a Mother who has lost five sons in the great war. "I feel that words are fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelmingly, but I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that Our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom."

I felt compelled to quote these words of Lincoln for while the great world war is passed and becoming like past history to the most of us with the exception of the mothers who had sons, many of them have borne that great sacrifice that time cannot heal.

How glad we are that the spirit of Motherhood is growing and "Mother's Day" will be observed by a greater number as the years go by.

Mother's Day is becoming more of a day of sehlimenti and sober reflection. Speaking from a National viewpoint I believe that the homes of the Nation are its strongest forts, for the home is the unity of the Nation and the throne in the home is occupied by Mother. Great are her opportunities and greater still her responsibilities, the responsibilities of a nation sink into insignificance besides thy Mother in the home. They need our prayers that they may have strength for the task God has given to them. Remember that "what we put into the first of life we put into all of it," that the impressions now made upon the plastic minds are the lasting impressions".

Again let me say "make everyday a "Mother's Day" honor her by the life you live do something to show that you appreciate what has done for you. Don't wait until it is too late before you offer those words that would help to brighten her days. The love of a Mother is never exhausted it never changes never tires, it endures through all in good repute, or in bad repute, in the face of the world's condemnation, a Mother's love still lives on. Mother love is so different from all other loves of a man's life. Sweetheart's love, wife's love, child's love, friend's love, all these demand some return from the object of their affections, but Mother love is so deep, so truly unselfish, so heroic in its sacrifice that only the happiness of the beloved child is of importance to it, a love that endures while life shall last; a love that welcomes back the prodigal and mourns the wayward one. Such a love has made men great.

In conclusion may I be permitted to add the beautiful words of Helen Young Selder:

MOTHER

I might have sung great songs today—
My soul was in the muse's away,
And yet, somehow I lost my song:
My hands were busy all day long.

I bound a hurt and throbbing finger
And dried the tears that tried to linger;
I buttered bread and bake a cake
I kissed two sleepy eyes awake.

My song is gone—but in my heart
Is music that can ne'er depart ,
The world will never hear its note
It sweet strains did not leave my throat.

But resting softly in their beds
I see three tousled little heads,
And, sweeter sounds than song or other
Come whispered words, "I love you Mother".

NOTE—This year in writing my seventh annual letter, as all were separate in their contest. I felt that I had come to the end of my resources. He thanked me for my work and he encouraged me to carry on his noble work, therefore his encouragement I have endeavoured to do the best I could.

DRAMATIC CLUB HONOR PASTOR

Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Merrick Surprised By League

Cramilton, May 9—On Monday evening May 5th, the Rev. W. R. and Mrs. Merrick were accorded a most delightful surprise when the members of the Cramilton Dramatic Club, with Vice Presidents of the Y.P.S. gathered at the parsonage to spend the evening together in a most enjoyable manner. After a period of social intercourse Mr. Charles Mills on behalf of the Club assembled the members of the club and league for the very helpful services rendered by the Rev. W. R. and Mrs. Merrick to the club and league and in the directing and presentation of the 3 act comedy, "Home Brew". Following Mr. Mills' address, Miss Marguerite Mills and Miss Thelma Bird, presented them with a beautiful bouquet of roses and a lovely flowering pot plant as a token of their esteem.

Responding to the address and presentation Mr. and Mrs. Merrick expressed their great surprise, yet sincere appreciation of their kindness, and the beautiful spirit which had prompted them to come, assuring them that the memory of their kindness would be a fragrant in the days to come as the bouquet of roses were; also thereby they would be encouraged to greater effort in the interests of the club, league and church.

The order of the programme was then changed to a delightful social period when refreshments including sandwiches, cake and ice cream was served to all.

London, May 9—British reporters and writers or "gossip" colums in newspapers came in for some good-natured but sharp thrusts from the Duke of York at the Newspaper Press Fund dinner.

PROMPT ACTION SAVED LIVES IN DISASTROUS FIRE

Family Made Escape Thru. Flames in Night Attire

Trenton, Ont., May 9 (Special by Staff Reporter)—Only the keen sense of smell of an aged blind woman saved a tragedy at Sinney Point late Wednesday when fire caused by, lightning totally destroyed the home of Mr. Joseph Gibson, Mrs. J. Staples, the blind woman, was the only person in the house who realized the danger which was hovering over the household, and due to her efforts in awakening the other members of the family, all was saved. Neighbors declare that had the fire been given another ten minutes start, nothing would have brought the inhabitants out alive.

Mr. Joseph Gibson, 78 years of age, and his wife, aged 72, were sleeping upstairs when the fire started, as were Mrs. Joe Gibson Jr. and her three children. Mr. Gibson Jr. is in the east working on a dredge at present, so the 78 year old gentleman was the only man in the house. Mrs. Staples slept downstairs, and a few minutes after a particularly loud crash of thunder, smelled smoke, awakening the others just in time, all made their escape from the house in their night attire, and short seconds afterwards the whole house, which was of frame construction, was a mass of flames. They were sheltered at the homes of neighbors for the rest of the night.

The loss will be heavy, only one thousand dollars of insurance was carried.

ENLARGE REID CASE FOR WEEK

Albert Reid is Refused Bail on Enlargement for Argument

Evidence in the case of Albert Reid charging with theft from the Shoaldis Bread Company of Trenton was concluded yesterday afternoon and Judge Deroche, who presided at the session in the County Court adjourned the case for argument and sentence till next Wednesday morning. E. J. Butler, K.C., applied for bail for his client but Judge Deroche refused the request and Reid will spend the intervening time at the county jail. B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution and went into every phase of the dealings between Reid and the Bread Company.

Mr. Butler argued that a) the witness for the cash book was not that of Reid but His Honor held that all writing in the cash book was Reid's b) the man who was working with him on the bread wagon.

Mr. Butler again advanced the view that the cash book should not be admitted as evidence as the Crown was not basing its claim for shortage on this record but again Judge Deroche ruled that Reid was responsible for all entries in that cash book. Mr. Vernon Jones, a former foreman of the Bread Company, stated all figures put in the cash book by him when checking the route were by permission of Reid. R. Hogan, a driver of Newspaper reports have revealed that all is not well with the Ontario Baseball Association. The Senior situation, particularly, is one that is causing considerable concern. Last year in Western Ontario the Chatham team ignored the parent association and played the Chicago White Sox an exhibition game and were promptly suspended by the O.B.A.A. This year Windsor have kicked over the traces and have threatened to play independent ball. There will be no Senior circuit in the Border Cities this year. Senior baseball is certainly on the downward grade all over the Province. The Niagara District, Hamilton and Toronto Leagues and one or two other districts are still functioning but so far as the remainder of the Province is concerned, the game is on the downward trend.

On the Sport Trail

To what may this be attributed? Have the governing officials of the O.B.A.A. been too autocratic in past years? Have the Leagues outlived their usefulness fairly well? It would appear that there is something radically wrong and the root of the evil should be probed. Possibly the trouble lies with the fault of local clubs. Athletes have in the past few years been hired more and more each year by the clubs' dollar and as a result these Professional Leagues in various branches of sports have sprung up like mushrooms all over the Province.

It is indeed unfortunate that Senior Ball cannot be placed back on the pedestal where it belongs. Baseball is not dead in many localities, but nevertheless it is the most popular of summer sports and a campaign should be inaugurated to revitalize it. The Ontario Baseball Association has in Mr. R. A. Elliott of Deloro, one of the most able, efficient and competent baseball men in the Province. It was not Mr. Elliott's fault that the Central Ontario League has been reduced to two teams this year, Belleville and Kingston. He has worked hard for the past three weeks to reorganize the loop but the clubs found the task too great to tackle.

Some clubs regard the regulations as laid down by the Ontario Baseball Association too stringent. This was done to curb the reckless importation of players and in this sense the right rules had their desired effect. Perhaps the smaller clubs could not compete with the wealthier organizations and the January list rule made it almost impossible for Clubs to harbour players all winter and turn them out on to the diamond in the Spring.

Possibly the parent body have not relished on a number of things when they decided to the Leagues and Clubs. At any rate it is obvious that there is something wrong when the Border District, mid-western Ontario and Central Ontario are "without being fed." It is also suggested that a competent Commission be appointed to probe the situation thoroughly, note the defects and recommend steps that might be taken in order to place Senior Ball back where it belongs. Why?

There is still a strong possibility that Belleville and Kingston may play a series of games this year and while it will not be the most suitable plan it will be better than having no baseball at all. Last year the Canada Cement of Point Anne who be represented in the local intermediate group competing the towns in the Bay of Quinte district.

HOME RUNS WON FOR THE CUBS

New York Giants Won Out in Slug-Fest Over Pirates

Cincinnati, May 8.—The Cincinnati Reds moved into a fourth place tie with Brooklyn in the National League by virtue of a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Braves who dropped to fifth position in the league standings. The Reds took the series three to one.

The Reds failed to get a man to third until the eighth when Bürgess walk, Ford's safe bunt to Cunningham a sacrifice by Lucas to Cunningham Gelbert, McInnan's sacrifice fly and who threw to third too late to get Crim's short sacrifice, totalled two runs.

SPORTS—TORONTO

Toronto, May 8.—When the Leafs defeated Reading 2 to 1 down at the stad here yesterday before some 2,000 fans they extended their winning streak to four straight games, all at the expense of the Keys.

They also assumed the leadership of the Charlie Knapp boys, the Bisons taking a beating from Newark and dropping to third place. The Leafs have a half-game margin on the Orioles, who are running second.

It was quite a pitchers' battle that Sam Gingrich and Norman Plitt. The Reading veteran and former Coast League righthander, staged. Plitt had a little, not much, on Gibson after the first inning.

The game was won in the first after two men were out. Joe Rabbitt and Jack Bracely hitting successful triples and Les Burke following with a rousing single to ride Leaf's two runs.

Of the seven hits off Plitt four were three-baggers. Rabbitt hit another of that length in the third with two men out and the runways unpopulated. He was out at the plate trying to stretch the blow which carried the ball to the centre field fence, into a home run.

Buffalo, May 9.—The Buffalo Bisons suffered a disastrous jolt when they lost the third game of the series to the Newark Bears and plunged from the top of the league heap. The score was 7 to 2.

Andy Cohen, former Bison, was a ball team all alone for the Bears, ramming two home runs and a triple in addition to drawing a walk for a perfect day. Cohen blasted five runs over the pan.

Rochester, May 9—Baltimore won the ten-inning slugging bee from the champion Red Wings here, 14 to 13.

Trailing by nine runs going into the last half of the eighth, Rochester started a rousing rally that netted five runs in his inning and four in the ninth.

Jimmy (Dip) Collins led the attack on a trio of Oriole hurlers with three triples and a pair of doubles.

St. Louis, May 9.—Bill Hallahan, Cardinal's left-hander, won his fourth game of the season 6 to 5, holding the Phillies to four hits and striking out eight men.

The Cards bunched hits in the first two innings for their six runs, getting six of their eight hits in those innings Sweetland was effective the rest of the way.

The victory safely removed the Red Birds from temporary danger of going into the cellar, and placed the Phillies more firmly in last place.

Chicago, May 8—A four-run rally marked by two home-runs in the eighth inning, gave the Chicago Cubs a 7 to 4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday, and a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Art Bell looped one into the stands in the Chicago seventh, and in the next frame with two on base Kiki Cuyler duplicated the feat. Hack Wilson then promptly drove his sixth home-run of the season into the right field bleachers.

Pittsburg, May 9.—The second slugging exhibition in two days ended in the tenth inning yesterday with the New York Giants in possession of a 13 to 10 victory over the Pittsburg Pirates a three-to-one edge in the current series an ditheir first winning margin in competition with Western teams.

The Giants, led by Freddy Lindstrom, who hit two singles, a double, triple and home run in six times at bat, pounded five Pirate hurlers for 18 hits.

Discovery of a beer bacillus that brews oil was announced recently.

ATHLETICS WON FROM BROWNS

Jones Rung Up Third Straight Victory Over Detroit Tigers

Philadelphia, May 8.—The Athletics took the deciding contest of the series from St. Louis yesterday afternoon, 7 to 5.

Bill Shores, who pitched for the Athletics, held the Browns to four hits. One of these, a home run by Heinie Manush with Hale on base, gave the Browns two runs in the third inning. Their other run was scored in the same wild throw by Dykes and a sacrifice fly.

Nine of the seven runs gained by the Athletics were the result of home runs Foxx lifted one into the left field bleachers in the fourth inning with two mates aboard, and Dykes who had him thrice during the game, hit a homer with none on in the seventh.

Washington, May 8.—Sad Sam Jones rang up his third straight win of the season, holding the Detroit Tigers to eight hits, while his mates pounded three Tiger hurlers to win, 6 to 3.

Sam Rice continued his batting streak, running his string to 19 consecutive games while Buddie Myer continued his stellar fielding not having an error chalked against him this season.

The Tigers jumped on Jones in the first and fourth innings for two runs each, while his mates pounded Carroll and Page for eight. Herring went to the box in the fifth and held the Nats to two hits the rest of the game.

Boston, May 9.—The Boston Red Sox made it two straight with the Chicago White Sox, winning yesterday's game behind the effective pitching of Jack Russell 3 to 1.

Russell was in complete control at all times. Al Thomas was served on the mound for the White Sox, yielded 12 safe hits, one of which was a home run by Charley Berry with the bases empty in the sixth.

KID CHOCOLATE AND TAYLOR

Chicago, May 9.—Bud Taylor, the Terre Haute, Ind., "Terror" and Kid Chocolate, Cuban featherweight, have been signed for a ten round match at Ebbets' Field, Brooklyn, June date not yet definitely for June 18.

CUB PITCHER IN HOSPITAL

Chicago, May 9.—Guy Bush, pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, has been sent to a hospital for observation, and probably will not be available for duty for at least two weeks. He suffered an injury to his pitching arm in the home opening series. Loss of weight, however, caused Manager McCarthy to order him away for medical attention.

ENTERTAINS ROYALTY

London, May 9—An unemployed lighterman, with his wife in a hospital and little chance of getting a job, yesterday entertained Queen Mary in a humble flat of London's east end, where Her Majesty had an opportunity of seeing how the other half lives.

The Queen was visiting a nursery training centre and said she wished to see one of the model flats built by the Deptford council.

BOW-WOWS WHICH CAN TALK SOON TO BE DEVELOPED

London, May 9.—Possibility of developing a breed of dogs that could talk is envisaged by Dr. W. L. English, a well-known dog breeder of Crewe, England.

Such a breed could be developed by intensive training through the life of a few human generations, according to Dr. English, who in an interview declared that the information gained in developing a breed of talking-dogs could be used in laying the ground work for the development of the prophesied "super-man" of the future.

CAPONE AND AIDES JAILED IN MIAMI

Miami, Fla. May 9.—Scarface Al Capone, Chicago's roving gang-leader, was back in jail for a short time last night, less than two months after he had completed a prison term in Philadelphia for carrying concealed weapons.

Alphonse and three of his henchmen, including his brother John, were taken in custody as they drove a large sedan along Biscayne Boulevard here. They were booked on a charge of investigation. Capone and his guards were released after more than an hour's angry argument, most of it from behind cell bars.

UTOPIA FAR AWAY

New York, May 9—An inescapable conclusion to be drawn from recent developments in industry, business and finance is that "Utopia is still far away, and that the laws of arithmetic and the principles of economics have not yet been abolished," according to E. H. H. Simmons, President of the New York Stock Exchange, who, in his report for 1929, discusses at length the events that led up to the stock market's collapse last autumn.

DENIES HE IS SCOLD

Pittsburg, Pa., May 9—Charles Rizzo opened a legal fight against his conviction as a common scold in Criminal Court yesterday through Attorney F. J. Lagorio. Rizzo contends that he cannot be sentenced as a scold because the law defines such a person as "a gib woman with a too active tongue." Furthermore, if he is sentenced, the County Commissioners must build a ducking-stool.

An ancient State law provides for the punishment of common scolds by being ducked three times in any open body of water. A jury found Rizzo guilty after a hearing before Judge A. B. Smith.

EMPLOYER JAILED AND FINED

Peterboro, Ont., May 9—Found guilty of assaulting and accosting bodily harm to Arthur Goodhall, a 17 year old immigrant farm helper, Albert Seymour, his employer, was today fined $200 and costs and sentenced to the punishment of common scolds by ...ed to fifteen days in jail.

HOUSE NOT SOON TO BE DISSOLVED

Members of All Parties Anxious to Express Views on Tariff

Ottawa May 9.—Hope of prorogation less there is a sudden dissolution. Mem bers there is a sudden dissolution. Mem bers that expect to be in Canada to express their views on the tariff changes and as tomorrow is to be devoted to ordinary business it will be continued on Monday, when there will be a Conservative caucus which may determine to prepare the budget to go into the committee.

Many Progressive sub-amendments presented by W. R. Bawlf, Last Mountain, is inacceptable to either of the major parties. While Conservatives agree that a British preference increases mean nothing to Imperial trade, yet they cannot subscribe to the open attack on British industry and the continent. The deplorable condition of the Canadian textile industry was vividly portrayed last night by A. M. Edwards, South Waterloo.

HORNS OF DEER WHICH ROAMED HILLS HERE TO BE PRESERVED

Copyright 1930)

Thornhill, Ont., May 8—Two hundred years ago, in the area now built up and inhabited by citizens of Thornhill, great herds of deer roamed up and down the hilly district and fed upon vegetation which grew in abundance.

Today, after all these years, about a dozen deer antlers were dug up by workmen at Thornhill Golf Club. The antlers were taken to W. T. Pritchard, proprietor of the hotel, and men found them safe, removing part of a knoll, beside the creek which flows through the course to gentle slopes on the banks of the creek. A. Butler, club manager, has ordered that the antlers be preserved as historic relics.

EIGHTH CANADIAN PROVINCE TO GET CONTROL OF LIQUOR WILL HAVE BEER PARLORS

Wine and Beer Will Also be Served in Hotels — To go Into Force on July The First

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer Copyright 1930)

Halifax, May 8—After thirteen years of dry legislation, practically arid dryness, Nova Scotia has taken the plunge which puts her in line with those of the other provinces in the matter of sale of liquor. Last week, the bill establishing government sale of liquor in Nova Scotia passed the Legislature, and it now lacks only the Royal assent to become law. With the proclamation of this act, Prince Edward Island is the only dry province in the Dominion.

It was stated by Premier Rhodes before the bill was drawn up that it would embody the best features of the control acts in the other provinces, and that it would attempt to reduce abuses to a minimum. The general consensus of opinion among both drys and wets seems to be that an honest attempt, at least has been made to accomplish this end, and throughout the province, everybody is waiting anxiously to see how the new act will work out.

A brief summary of the act follows. It provides for the purchase of beer and wine without a permit. Beer parlors may be established in those towns or municipalities which voted wet in the plebiscite held last October; wine, spirits and liquor must be purchased at the government stores or by mail from the central store.

For the purchase of hard liquor, a permit, valid for one year is required. This permit will cost the thirsty one a dollar. Purchases are recorded on a book issued with the permit, and if the amount of liquor bought seems to be excessive, further purchases may be refused.

Hotels may sell beer and wine with meals only. They will not be permitted to have beer parlors or liquor stores.

A padlock clause for places in which illegal sale of liquor across counters and stiff fines for the proprietors, are provided.

The act will go into force July 1st.

VALUABLE COWS DIED INSTANTLY

Tree Was Struck By Lightning and Animals Were Killed

Trenton, Ont., May 8—(Special by Staff Reporter)—Two valuable cows, the property of Mr. Philip Sevenpiper, who lives on the Lake Shore a few miles east of Brighton, were killed when struck by lightning Wednesday night, the owner discovered late yesterday. The animals, valued at over one hundred dollars apiece, were found dead under a large elm tree when their owner went to look for them after they had failed to come in from pasture. There were no marks on the remains, but the tree was split where the lightning had struck, and it is thought that the animals received the full benefit of the charge through their bodies.

SECOND SECTION

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1930.

Thirty-Sixth Annual Meeting of Y.M.C.A.

The thirty-sixth annual meeting of the Belleville Y. M. C. A. was held last evening in the Association auditorium and was attended by a number of well-known citizens and young men. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Dr. Seager, Bishop of Ontario, whose address was much appreciated. Mr. B. F. Jennings, President presided and fulfilled the duties in a most acceptable manner. Supper was provided by the members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Association, and was all that could have been desired. After the singing of "O Canada" the assembly was pronounced by Rev. Dr. C. W. Bishop, principal of Albert College. After supper reports of the activities of the Association were presented and they were of an encouraging nature.

The chairman spoke briefly in extending a hearty welcome to all the guests who were present. It was an especial pleasure to welcome our distinguished guests, Rt. Rev. Dr. Seager, Bishop of Ontario. It was also an honor to have Mayor Reid present upon this occasion. The Y. M. C. A. of this city was going forward steadily as the reports showed. He was pleased to be associated with the Y. M. C. A. as it was doing wonderful work.

Mayor G. A. Reid congratulated the officers of the Y. M. C. A. upon the excellent reports presented. All were pleased to have Bishop Seager as a visitor in the city and he extended to him a hearty welcome.

Mr. John Elliott in a few well-chosen remarks introduced Rt. Rev. Dr. Seager, Lord Bishop of Ontario.

Bishop's Address

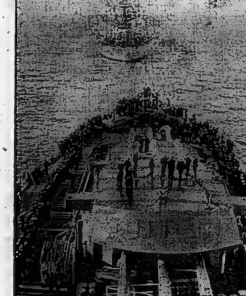
His Lordship in his opening remarks referred to the delight it was to visit Belleville upon this occasion. We at times become divorced from certain activities other than those in which we are particularly interested. He was particularly interested in the Y. M. C. A. for he was aware that it was an Association that was Christian. He felt warm to the Y. M. C. A. because it stood for Christianity and because it was an institution that appealed to the rising generation. Congratulations he extended to the officers upon the splendid reports presented. The keynote of His Lordship's address was an analysis of Christian life. We do not always realize the changes that are taking place in the world today. Do we fully realize what a wonderful and somewhat bewildering time we are living in, yet there never was a day in which spiritual interpretation was so easy as today. All human problems are solved by a process and are they not to some extent crystallized today. The human mind must find a unit for our thought and feeling and we find ourselves at home because we believe in God. A practical universe, belief in God is general; broadly speaking everybody believes in a God. Atheists do not exist as they used to. The popularity of Jesus Christ is going on in leaps and bounds. More and more men are beginning to see that Jesus is the leader of the day as He was in His day. The spell of His personality is more and more apparent. There is to-day also an ever increasing popularity of christianity. In mind, heart and will, we grow content in His work. The Y. M. C. A. was engaged in christian work and especially among the young. Tell them that Jesus Christ represents divine love for them. God made the young people christian leaders, was a message he desired to leave with them.

A hearty vote of thanks moved in a most acceptable manner was tendered to His Lordship by Mr. G. H. Griffin, Vice-President of the Association, which the Bishop acknowledged.

Director Elected

The following were elected Directors of the Association for 3 years:—P. C. McLaurin, G. F. Catrom, M. P. Duff, R. L. Brown, Rev. Dr. C. W. Bishop, S. Lierce, R. F. Wotten, and Jos W. Imlah.

Mr. F. C. McLaurin moved a vote of thanks to the ladies for providing the supper also for their efforts on behalf of the Association. The vote was unanimously adopted.



Mr. H. Ackerman referred to Mr.

ONE SEA GIANT TOWS ANOTHER

An interesting experiment was carried out recently between Great Britain's newest battleships, the H.M.S. Rodney and H.M.S. Nelson. The Rodney took the Nelson in tow (as shown above), and its speed was maintained only by three knots even though the 23,500-ton giant was being towed. The weight of the cable used was so heavy that it sank beneath the waves and is therefore not visible.

John Elliott leaving the city in a few days to attend the Imperial Chamber of Commerce meeting in England and on behalf of the officials of the Association wished him bon voyage and safe return.

Mr. Elliott fittingly acknowledged the kindly sentiments.

The meeting closed with the benediction pronounced by Rev. Dr. Bell of Bridge Street United Church.

At the annual meeting of the Y.M. C.A. held last evening, President B. F. Jennings, said:

"During the Association year just closed, several important factors are outstanding. To these I wish very briefly to call your attention:

"An increased activity, both within and without the building and a larger service to the community.

"The development of a very close relationship with the home, the church and the school.

"The prevalence of a christian atmosphere in and around the building

"A widening of the Association outreach through service to the boys and young men of adjoining towns and villages.

"A most democrttic move in the development of the Older Boys' Council; (b) the Young Men's Cabinet, each of these groups having representation on the Senior Board of Directors."

Boys and Girls

The report of the Boys' and Girls' Work was presented by Norman Edwards, Chairman. He said:

"In the Boys' division are boys from 10 to 17 years of age, separated into four classes of groups. These groups elect their own officers and, with the assistance of the Association staff, conduct their meetings. The programme for these groups is four fold; Physical, Intellectual, Social and Spiritual. These boys delights in Hallowe'en parties, sleigh drives, hikes, camps and other activities that are arranged for them. They grow through their experience in public speaking, debating and conduct of meetings. In the summer a splendid camp was conducted from July 3rd to 14th at Moira Lake and was in every way satisfactory."

Religious Work

Howard Clarke, Chairman, reported, on Religious Work, as follows:

"In all its activity the Association seeks to keep before the Boys and Young Men the christian challenge. In addition to the many opportunities for personal contact and interviews, the Association has conducted during the past season the study of the Life of Christ, among the Prep. Boys, a similar study with the boys in Junior School; a Bible study course in the Summer camp and the study of the boys in other lands.

"In addition to the religious work among the membership there are two religious services in the building each Sunday and one each Thursday evening."

Educational and Social

Harold Holton.

"Special features have been conducted among all the Groups, Y's Men, Business Girls, Junior School and Preps. For the first time Christmas Carols were sung by members of the Y's Men's Club on Christmas Eve for the benefit of the community.

"During August a Men's Canoe Trip was conducted to afford holiday opportunities for business men."

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PHYSICAL DEPT.—1929-30

R. L. Brown, Chairman.

"Along with other departments of the Association Work, the physical department experienced a very active, and we trust successful year. Following in so far as possible the trend in Association physical programmes this department endeavored to give to its patrons the type of activities which they appeared to want rather than following a hard and fast programme without regard to particular requirements or wishes of the members.

Gym Classes Increased in Number

"With the event of the members of the Belleville Fire brigade coming into the Association for physical training the business men's group as a result became too large to properly accommodate the combined attendance and as a result additional classes were formed to look after the members of the brigade.

Basketball

"Represented by a team playing under Y's Men's colors in the intermediate section of the O.A.B.A. the Y.M. C.A. and city received some good publicity as a result of the local entry advancing to the Ontario finals, losing out only to the Niagara Falls team who were ultimate Dominion champions. This is the be. showing that a local cage team has ever made so far as existing records show down through the years.

Volleyball

"Although local teams did not take part in any tournaments either at home or abroad, there was nevertheless the usual amount of the game played with the business men, firemen seniors and business girls being the chief participants.

Handball

"This game was not played during 1930 nearly as much as during the previous year and this can be accounted for owing to the fact that the hand ball court which is on the gymnasium floor, was not available for use nearly as frequently as during the previous year. A hand ball court apart from the gymnasium is a necessity in order to promote and foster this great indoor game and such a development is well worth the consideration of the committee and directors.

Track and Field

"Although out door athletics, particular track and field events, are not as yet participated in by a large percentage of the Association's membership, interest in this department of the Association programme is growing.

Swimming and Life Saving

"In spite of the fact that the Association's swimming pool is of restricted dimensions, a goodly number of other men, women and children learn to swim in it during the year. Through the Aquatic and Winter special classes have been conducted for non-swimmers and at the present time life saving classes for both girls and boys are being organized.

Ki-Y Soft Ball

"In co-operation with the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, the Y.M.C.A. again promoted the Ki-Y Softball League in which seventeen teams participated under three age groups. The league extended from the month of May to the second week in July and during this period over ninety games were played by the various teams comprising the league.

Heralding

"Although the events of the Association were participated in by the junior members of the Association no official returns were made this year to the National Council.

Ki-Y Hockey

"Similar to the Ki-Y baseball, a Ki-Y Hockey League promoted for boys up to 20 years of age, proved a big success and under the capable supervision of General Secretary Joe Short, nearly twenty teams played through to a conclusion a schedule of fixtures for the three age groups included in the league.

Special Features

"On Thanksgiving Day, a team of Y members who had journeyed to Cobalt, competed in the running and walking events staged by the Cobalt Road Race and Cross Country Run Association and although only one of their number succeeded in finishing amongst the prize winners, all four acquitted themselves well.

Y.M.C.A. 3rd of June Races

"The events run off on the 3rd of June by the Association consisted of a Bicycle road race from Trenton to Belleville and a bicycle handicap over the same distance.

Across-the-Bay Swim

"This annual event, taking place on the morning of July 1st, commanded the usual interest from both participants and spectators, who turned out for the fourth annual race sponsored by the Y. M. C. A."

Endowment Fund Growth

"While the most satisfactory feature in connection with the Association finance is the gradual growth of the Endowment Fund, these Funds bequeathed to the Association are invested in Government Bonds, the interest being used year by year for the carrying on of the character building programme among boys. This is a very satisfactory plan for those who desire that after death a portion of their accumulated wealth shall be continuously at work in the interests of the boys and young men of the community. Leading citizens comprise the Endowment Fund Committee, ensuring the proper handling and investment of all Funds. The Fund stands at present as follows:

Mu Kappa Gamma Club	$1,000.00
Mrs. Margaret Lazier	500.00
J. V. Sinclair	500.00
Misses M. and L. Hart	1,000.00
Ladies' Auxiliary	300.00
	$3,300.00
Add:
Bonus Residue of Estate of Misses Mary and Letitia Hart	$1,799.17
Bequest from Jennie Anderson Estate	101.00
Bequest John J. B. Flint	500.00
Bequest Bert Frederick Y...	500.00
	$6,200.00

"The Financial Committee of the Association desire to express their very great appreciation of the services rendered by business and professional men during the Fall financial campaign; the result of their efforts made possible a most satisfactory year. We also appreciate very greatly the assistance of all those who through subscription, contribution or other service aid in carrying on the Association programme."

Bowling and Games

R. J. Wray.

"The year 1929-30 has been one of the busiest in the history of the Alleys. In the early Fall new pins and balls were added to the equipment and the Alleys re-surfaced adding up splendid shape. Some 40 teams were bowling from time to time throughout the season; afternoon ladies' league, afternoon church group league, afternoon teachers' league, evening ladies' league; junior men's league; senior men's league; industrial league. The Alleys show an increase in earnings of some $700.00 over the previous year. Estimated number of bowlers who used Alleys throughout season, 300 to 350; two tournaments run off, social reservations for parties; number of prize winners, 225.

"The Alleys were supervised by Alan

Another very interesting sight is when the parents of, say nest number one, darts in at the window, fifty feet away from the nest, the hungry mouths in that nest will go up, proving that each one of fledglings know their parents as soon as they see them at that distance. .

Another great satisfaction to me is that there are now swallows' nests in almost every house-barn of this neighborhood. The great question is: What food are they? We have made a careful study of this point. I have time and again put a piece of paper under the nest, and when these five fledglings are at their best for consuming flies, there is about one-half cupful of droppings thrown overboard every twenty-four hours. I have seen our car and cart-house and our self-starter all time lying down in the shade of the shed, and comfortable as could be because here were a dozen swallows dipping up and down after every fly that appeared. Now scientists tell us that these hybrids flies will carry grund. Seeing during the hot days, then bite catches and devours the fly that is on its way to your house with that dreaded disease, then it has dropped your disease germs, it may be well with the e, and that thou mayest prolong thy days. "

There are six different varieties of swallows that visit this part of Canada. The purple martin is by far the largest, and his warning voice should be heard around every country home in the great ter pention of America, because he is so easily attracted. Thirty-five years ago there were a few in this country; they usually built their nests in old, deserted woodpeckers' holes. I knew a chestnut stub that afforded several pairs a home for the summer. But the first martin house I ever saw was on Mr. Desgrosse's building in the town of Kingsville. Then a Mr. Elliott, who kept a summer hotel near the lake, built houses and had good "scores." This gave me the martin fever very bad, so I hooked up the self-starter and drove to the lake and secured them. The dear old gentleman's voice trembled as he said, "Jack, I had twenty-five or thirty pairs around my houses, but the boys bought it fun to shoot them. They would go up the lake shore for nothing else, only to hunt my nests; and now I only have three birds left. I am going to pull the houses down because I would rather not have them come than see them shot."

The question we, how could I get them coming to my place? I am three miles from the lake and seldom see a purple martin out here. Finally I saw an advertisement in the little journal known as Our Dumb Animals, published in Massachusetts: "J. Warren Jacobs, Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, manufacturer of martin houses, shipped three carloads last week." Just then I caught myself thinking that these birds would know his houses wherever they saw them. I at once send an order for a twenty-roomed dwelling, but when the house arrived the wild geese were continually sitting where I wanted to erect it, so to avoid frightening them I waited till they left for the breeding grounds, still farther north. On the evening of May the 2nd, 1913, I had all the boys in neighborhood come and we raised the house on a pole sixteen feet high. The questions I was asked that evening would surely have puzzled a Philadelphia lawyer, as to "How soon would the martins come?" and so on.

The next morning, before I had my working harness sufficiently buttoned to avoid an embarrassing accident, I took a peep out the window to see what the bird house looked like in daylight, and really my breath was almost taken from me, for here was a pair of martins hovering around the house, and when the schoolboys went by they shouted, "Uncle Jack," and as they shook their little dinner pails and hands ed they said, "There are two blackbirds around your martin house."

In less than a month there were thirteen rooms occupied. This, of course, taught all of us children, old and young, what a purple martin was.

In August I counted sixty-three hovering around the house at one time.

Now I have built two of what I call "martin castles," but it took me three years to induce the birds to come to them. Today they have almost discarded the frame house, and are in the "castles" the fact that the "castles" are warmer in the spring and cooler in the summer possibly accounts for this. But the brick house is altogether too expensive.

CHAPTER XIV

Wild Duck Hunting

The following, I know, will sound strange to most readers. But the fact is duck-hunting is the one sport above all others for me.

Yes, it is true I have hunted the swift ruffed grouse, which is sometimes called partridge, and as this beautiful bird darted through the undergrowth I have downed eleven of them without a miss.

In northern Ontario I have time and again got the wind in my face and slipped up and peeped over a hill at a doe and fawn that were calmly feeding near. I have stood with the crisp breeze cutting my eyes, watching Nature in all her beauty and recently a big fellow stepp ed from some concealed spot, nibbles a little browse, or perhaps walks up to a sapling and rubs his antlers. There he is, perfectly unconscious of the fact that a deadly enemy is unfolding his arms from around a balsam rifle; and in the folds of life he is in death.

The lordly moose is another of our Canadian beauties (I said "beauties" when I believe I should have said "homelies") and more than once have I had an ordinary carload of these noble animals at the mercy of my rifle. There they have stood, watching their leader, die, apparently unconscious of what had taken place.

I have crawled head first, down into an old, deserted bear den, and to my astonishment and surprise almost rubbed noses with Mr. Bruin. Needless to say I didn't require telling to back out. I have seen the whole den of course, when the bears were hibernating.

On another occasion, one still, frosty morning, I stood at the top of a hill and answered, the howl of a timber wolf, and to my delight he replied. Then with my mouth close to the ground I again imitated that lonesome blood-curdling sound; and in about one minute, he answered back. Then in a few seconds I very carefully let out another call, and while I was exanning and cocking my rifle he again answered. Now I was sure he was coming my way. There I stood, waiting, for over five minutes, with the crispy air in my favor, every nerve keyed up with anxiety. Just as I was about to turn my face to call again, I saw this monstrous, shaggy wolf break from the green cover out into a beaver-marsh scarcely a hundred and fifty yards away, and as I pressed the rifle firmly to my shoulder a low whistle from my lips brought him to a stand, and I had the great satisfaction of seeing him give one tremendous leap in the air as that two-hundred-grain bullet blew his heart into fragments. I mention this incident because our timber wolf, the great red-deer destroyer, may be poisoned or trapped, yet owing to his keen smelling powers, hearing, and sneaking ability, very few sportsmen—yes, very few of even the most experienced trappers—have ever had the satisfaction of getting him with a bullet.

Yet in spit: of all these experiences, which are the height of thousands of sportsmen's ambitions, I can recall no line of hunting that afforded me more pleasure than duck-shooting over a flock of home-made decoys. And before I attempt to tell you some things that the wild ducks have taught me I want to give you a glimpse of a real duck-hunt my brothers Ted and I had, way back in boyhood days, shooting from what is dollar bill would blanket a horse.

Somehow or other we had gotten our duck-boat up at a place on the north shore of Lake Erie called Cedar Creek, a distance of about five miles southeast of our home. I had whistled in nearly every night of the winter, making a flock of decoys, and brother Ted did the painting. This particular spring we were splitting rails to finish fencing in one hundred acres of bush; so one Monday morning about the first of April, father gave us a stint, to put up so much fence for the week, and at it we went. At half-past five Friday evening we had our week's work finished, ready for a duck hunt on Saturday.

After supper we got everything ready in an early start, and as we shook the powder in the flasks and sized up the amount of shot we had in our leather pouches, the anticipation of the next day worked on us until one said, "Let's go up there tonight. We can build a fire in the cedars and sleep under the boat." Enough said; here we go! Dear mother scoffed at the idea, but she packed our provisions, and said, "If you are bound to go, I will put you up a basket of food." "No, no; we are not going to carry a basket of grub all the way up there. Just give us a small lunch to put in our pockets for breakfast."

Well, just about sunset found each of us with six wooden decoys some in our hunting-coat pockets, other strung around our necks, and with each a pair of those old-fashioned cow-hide boots on. We started by hand over monotonous, swampy wolf break from the those soft, sticky, newly-built clay roads, a great percentage of it running, and as I pressed the rifle firmly to my shoulder a low whistle from my lips brought him to a stand, and I had the great satisfaction of seeing him give one tremendous leap in the air as that two-hundred-grain bullet blew his heart into fragments. Mrs. N. Beaudrie Uses Them For Lumbago and Her Husband Backache

Madoc, Ont., May 8 (Special)—"Having derived much relief myself from Lumbago by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I would never be without them," writes Mrs. N. Beaudrie, R.R. No. 2, Madoc, Ont. "I always keep two or three boxes in the house. My husband takes them for Rheumatism. He says there is nothing helps him like Dodd's Kidney Pills. We trust that these few lines may be the means of helping others."

The natural way to treat Rheumatism and Lumbago is to treat the Kidneys and the natural way to treat the Kidneys is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Rheumatism is caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood. If the Kidneys are doing their duty they will strain all the uric acid out of the blood and there can be no more Rheumatism. Therefore, use the Kidneys in shape to do their duty by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

KILLED BY TORTURE

Chicago, May 9—A gangland inquisition ended in excruciating death for an unidentified man here when he apparently refused to reveal some secret his tormentors wanted to know.

They almost choked him to death with his own necktie, and again before reconstructing the crime. Still he wouldn't talk. So they gouged out both his eyes.

When he remained silent after that they stood him against a tree and poured a machine gun head with bullets from a sub-machine gun.

"Girl Unafraid"

By Gladys Johnson

The road led through aisles of red-woods through groves of oak and cedars. Rustling over wooden bridges which spanned mountain brooks brimming with spring rains. Through tiny hamlets, little more than a handful of houses clustered about a general merchandise store.

Ardeth thought of the first time she had come on this road. It was long ago now party. She felt wonder and a stirring of faint pity for the romantic, untried girl she had been then. She had loved Ken then as a girl worships a story-book hero. Not with the brooding fiercely protective love she now knew.

In that long ago time, Ken had been the gay and aggressive one. Now she was bringing him up here, weary and beaten. Bringing him up here to the healing quiet of the mountain. What did the people of the world she was leaving matter now! she thought grimly. The world had pushed them hard enough. The path ahead was suddenly clear—no matter where it led.

"It Was Love"

Ken had fallen into an exhausted sleep when the jolting of the mountain road, for the most part lifted to break. Now and then his eyes would unclose and look anxiously for Ardeth.

Her low word—her touch—brought the shadow of a smile to his lips. He slept again, content to know her hand was in his own.

Tom's thoughts were bitter on that long silent ride. Not until it was all had he realized the strength of that secret hope in his heart.

All over now. No longer may use to dream of the day Ardeth would change her mind and turn to the steady home he could give her. Ardeth was going with Ken. Well, he should have known it would turn out that way. He'd had plenty of warning. It always had been Ken, with Ardeth. She was the sort of girl who only gives her heart away once.

No more dinners. No more little Sunday trips....

And this was love. But God, how ironic that he should be the one who was aiding here driving her out of his own life.

Ken Tries to Protest

Up and up—through groves of silver pines, where the late sunlight flung long bars of deep gold across the brown road. Past mountain ravine, like an ox-cropping of green jade where black hawks hung on poised wings. Up to the little cabin waiting in the singing stillness of the mountains.

Shadows were long and the swift chill of mountain night had descended when they reached the cabin. Ken looked about with a puzzled frown when they helped him into the house. The long sleep had somewhat collected his thought. He protested weakly.

"Ardeth.... We can't do this.... You mustn't....

She was gently firm. "Don't think, dear. I'll do the thinking."

Sick as he was, the stronger will swayed him. He sank back into the plaid couch which covered him like a warm and restful cloak. After all,..... here was Ardeth saying she would not leave him..... Good, simply to let things alter around him so long. Good to be up here away from the troubles of Cecile—of the stock market—a man could rest up here.....

He made no protest when Tom took him in hand and put him to bed in the adjoining bedroom whose board walls still smelled of the pine forest. Ardeth kindled a fire in the living room. Her thoughts went back to the time she had been here with Ken and Phyllis Hawkins and the Durand girl. How they would talk—those days when she had known through the shop.....

She shrugged. What did it matter? Ken was here! Here received with joy swelling in her heart. The dice were flung. Ken needed her—what she could count.

She went around the house in a strangely cool frame of mind, planning for the life of the next few months. Fortunately the necessities of living were on hand. Plenty of warm blankets and clean linen p'ed on the shelves of the cupboard and closet. Sufficient dishes stacked in the kitchen, where a square wood-burning stove and a sewer failing supply of fuel attended to their cooking needs.

She could get the necessary supplies at the small store down the road. Tomorrow she would make arrangements to buy butter and eggs from one of the ranches. Eggs and milk and fresh fruit—Ken would need little else for a while. Sunshine and rest and a mind at rest, the doctor had said.....

When Tom went down to the store for the last she had made out, she went into the bedroom. Ken had fallen into profound sleep. For a moment the girl stood looking down at the brown head and thin face and felt a fierce little prayer began in her heart.

"God, let me keep him....God, I'll take care of him.... don't let them take him away."

Tom hesitated unhappily in the doorway of the living room when it was time for him to leave.

Tom Has to Leave

"If it wasn't for that directors' meetin glomorow I wouldn't leave you like this, Ardeth."

"Please don't—like you can do, Tom," she said softly. Her gaze came up, a little wearily, to rest on his face, and for the first time the thought of Tom pierced through her concern for Ken. She realized that Tom was suffering. Her eyes softened, grew a little sad.

"Tom—dear old Tom——"

His jaw tightened, her eyes where it had gone to his arm. "Well—I guess it just wasn't meant to be, Ardeth, and you've always been generous. You didn't want me to believe it—but—well, I'm the original book, I guess, I hate to leave you here, though. The world isn't kind Ard, and it won't look at this in the way you do it. It will make you suffer."

There was a small disillusioned smile on her lips. "I'm not afraid, Tom, when I'm with Ken. Nothing the world can do will hurt me worse than that.....'

A Strange Dream

She spoke of the store then, spoke with a curious indifference. The little cabin which for so long had been the dearest thing in life was suddenly a thing outgrown and therefore of little value. And the clock. Close it out. When the current bills were paid there would be sufficient sum left to support her for a time. After that—Ken would help.

Tom was gone, the headlights of his car dying out along the road. Black night had fallen down about the cabin; the sharp spring night of the high places.

Ardeth sat before the dying fire in the living room, listening to the whisper of the pine trees outside, and to Ken's deep weary breathing in the bedroom.

It seemed a strange dream.....

SAM M'LAUGHLIN C.P.R. DIRECTOR

Montreal, Que., May 8—Robert Samuel McLaughlin of Oshawa, Ontario was elected a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at the annual meeting held in the board room, Windsor Station today.

Mr McLaughlin who is 58 years of age, is a well known figure in Canadian finance and industry, being president of General Motors of Canada Limited, Vice President of General Motors Corporation, New York and director of the Dominion bank.

Directors reelected to the board included Charles Gordon, Hon. H. McMaster, Rt. Hon Reginald McKenna, James A Richardson and W. J. Blake Watson.

U. S. WONDERS WHAT IS WANTED BY CANADA FOR EXPORT BAN

Think Some Return is Desired—Kindly Feeling for Dominion.

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

Washington, D.C., May 1.—Smuggling on the Canada-United States border is going to be both unhealthy and unpopular when the new treaty now being considered is put into effect here.

So was the intention of both governments to have a conference of officials to talk things over and arrive at an understanding. This has been called off or postponed indefinitely and instead there will be an exchange of draft treaties which will form the basis for correspondence and, if necessary conversation later.

The United States authorities are not quite certain yet as to just what Canada wants. They are sure that the Dominion wants something and they are prepared to give almost anything for there is no more an emotionally kindly feeling towards Canada.

With the coming into force of the new Canadian legislation prohibiting the releasing of liquor from bond or the removing of liquor from a bonded warehouse or other storage place for export, or the granting of a clearance to any liquor-laden vessel or the making of any entry for exportation of such liquor; when such liquor is "destined for delivery in any country into which the importation of such liquor is prohibited by law," there is of course, need for implementing regulations. In fact the act says that "the governor in council may make such orders and regulations as he may consider necessary for giving effect to any of the provisions of the act."

Reason for Treaty

The Canadian government is desirous that similar regulations shall be passed by the United States, hence the proposal for a treaty.

Just what Canada wants the United States to agree to, or to chat the American people should agree to has not yet been disclosed. There is much speculation in the state department upon the subject. Some say the ocean-to-ocean fisheries question may be brought up, but the general opinion is that no material benefit will be gained by it.

The Americans are prepared to urge that stringent regulation be entered in regarding the ownership and conduct of vessels. They say that, if having been made illegal for the liquor to leave Canadian shores for the United States, it should also be made illegal for Canadian vessels to transport it.

In an interview recently, an official of the state department talked of what other nations had done. He cited the reciprocal treaty with Cuba as being a fine and effective one. It provides that the high contracting parties bind themselves to prevent vessels from clearing even to a port in another country when evidence is produced that the goods or any part of them, whatever the ostensible point of destination may be, is intended to be landed by introduced into the territory of the other high contracting party.

It also provides for a back list and when any vessel is placed thereon a bond will be required that the goods have been actually discharged at the port for which the vessel cleared.

Penal Offence

"Norway," said this official, "has made it a penal offence for Norwegian vessels to engage in or render assistance in smuggling into other countries."

Under the terms of this law one Norwegian vessel Bru was fined 2,500 kroner. The evidence in the case was in the form of affidavits furnished by the United States state department.

Great Britain has hitherto been exceedingly ready, to co-operate. In a note from the British embassy dated Sept 17, 1923, it is stated: "No spirituous liquors are cleared direct from United Kingdom to United States." A new bill is now before the British parliament empowering the board of trade to cancel the papers of any vessel engaged in smuggling liquors into the United States.

There is an interesting document in the United States state department. It is a copy of a treaty between the Baltic States, Germany, Denmark, Esthonia, Finland, Latvia, Lithuania, Nor, Poland, Sweden, Danzig and Russia by which the contracting parties pledge themselves "to take such steps as may be possible to prevent all alcoholic liquors destined for a national port from being conveyed to a foreign port."

The treaty also undertakes that no objection will be taken to the extension of the customs laws "twelve miles from the coast."

An effort will likely be made, according to this official, to get some provision in the treaty covering not only the carriage of liquor by Canadian vessels from Canadian ports bound for the United States, but also from any other country.

There is fear that Canadian liquor on Canadian boats will simply detour to the United States via St. Pierre and other places.

But the big question they are asking in the state department is, what odes in the state department is what does the proposed treaty?

SECRETARY'S REPORT

J. E. SHORTT

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen,

In as much as the Reports from the Chairman of each Department of our Association work will give you a glimpse of and the figures for each Department, there is little for me to say. I want, however, to acknowledge and express my appreciation of the loyalty of the Staff to the Association enterprise. I also desire to express my heartfelt thanks to the many friends and organizations who through personal service and co-operation with our Directors and Staff, have made possible the work accomplished in the past year.

I want quickly and briefly to introduce to you the Officers of our Boys' Group. These splendid fellows are the men of tomorrow. They will be leading citizens within a few years. This city will be permeated with their influence and their leadership:—

Boys—Edgar Muir, Jack Dickens, Clare Ridley, Jack Peoples, Harold Williamson, Walter Gerow.

Juniors—Raymond Harris, Sidney White, Arthur Cole, George Ostrom, Robert Austin, Fred Sprague, Floyd Henry.

During the year a new departure has been set up of an Older Boys' Council composed of representatives from our Employed Boys and our High School Group. It will be the duty of these boys to consider the service rendered and the programme set up for boys of their age, and to carry to the Senior Board of Directors such suggestions as they may have, in the interests of older boys for extension of Association service. The council is composed of the following:

Buck Calher, Glen Orlik, Frank Hitchen, Jack Graves, Arthur Looker, Joe Miles, Arthur Tilbrook, Archie Boyd.

The next group is one of Young Men; our Young Men's Cabinet, whose duties will correspond very much with the Older Boys Council or with our Senior Board of Directors, but whose responsibility will be the programme for and the work with young men. The members of the cabinet:

With these boys and young men cooperating with a large group already giving voluntary service I see every reason why the year 1930-31 should be a successful year, not only in finance in membership, in programme, in physical activity, but religiously. Our spiritual and moral lives can be vastly increased. Just as the harvest of wheat follows the ploughing and harrowing and the sowing of wheat, so Christian character follows the making of right choices, and our choices are daily being determined by our appreciations.

If we would see men and boys motivated to worship, prayer, Bible study clean living, altruistic service, strength ening of the church, community upbuilding and world brotherhood and at the same time experiencing life's highest satisfactions. We must lead them to form sound and adequate appreciations of God, Jesus, right and wrong, the church, and their fellowmen. Let us dedicate this year 1930-31 to a thorough effort to develop these "appreciations."

PROSPECTIVE MOTHERS NEED OVALTINE

DOCTORS the world over strongly recommend Ovaltine, the delicious tonic food beverage, for those months when extra nourishment is so essential. It encourages a rich milk secretion and builds up the health of the mother.

Made by a scientific process from ripe barley malt, creamy milk from England's richest pastures, and fresh eggs. Ovaltine is easily digested, quickly assimilated — and especially rich in the natural food elements a prospective mother must have.

WARNING

Ovaltine's tremendous success has brought many imitations. Put your own and baby's sake, do not be misguided. Ovaltine is a scientifically correct food — different from all other food beverages. It is recommended by doctors throughout the world.

Advice to Lovelorn

— By Beatrice Fairfax —

SHALL HE RISK IT?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-one, so say that I am always miserable in company and afraid that people do not like me. Shall I ask the young girl I am deeply in love with to marry me, or wait until I am more self-possessed. You see, she might marry someone else, meanwhile.

TIMID LOVER.

If you really, at twenty-one, are in a financial position to ask any girl to marry you, I should ask this one. I do not think she will be any less inclined, because of your shyness, to return your love. In any case, your talking to her of love will make you more interesting to her and thereby put you in a better position than if you had said nothing, so that if she does not already love you, she may learn to. In what way are you planning to become less shy? Success in life would be. I should say, the best possible remedy.

HE IS PUZZLED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am thirty-two years of age and have been going with a girl of twenty-one for more than a year, who is married. I am single. Her husband is a very cheap type of bootlegger (ships it) and does not treat her well. She has grounds for divorce, but disclosed herself to be talked out of it.

When I suggest a divorce, she always brings up her mother's disapproval, though that lady knows she goes out with me. What I should like to know is if she really cares about her husband and is just making excuses: I have offered to marry her.

L. E. W.

As you have asked this girl to marry you, you are entitled to a straightforward answer on her part. Such an arrangement as you describe, must be pretty hard on a man of your honesty and good intentions. Ask the girl if she is in earnest, as you find the present state of affairs too uncertain for your peace of mind.

MUST DROP HER ACQUAINTANCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

You have helped so many people out of their troubles, perhaps you can help me. I am in a very embarrassing position. My folks have objected to my keeping company with one of my girl friends. I don't know just how to break the news to her without making her feel hurt. If you can tell me just what to say to her I would appreciate it very much.

WORRIED.

Why discuss the matter with her at all, as you think it would be too embarrassing? There are times, unfortunately, when we have to drop people and the kindest thing is to do it as painlessly as possible. You can tell the young lady that work, studies, obligations at home will prevent you from going about. You can speak politely when you meet in public places. These things are often hard to do, but your family, who know all the circumstances, doubtless know best.

As Oil of Merit—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and pushed by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept public favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt its power to repair and heal.

DEAR READERS:

Sunday we celebrate that very special event, Mother's Day, when the mothers of the world come in for particular tribute. That only one day in the year has been set aside for mother is a mere little enough, if one looks at it that way. But surely no one neglects mother other days in the year, and then tries to make it up on Mother's Day. No, that isn't the idea. While one should do thoughtful little things for her all the year round, it is nice to feel that when a special day has been set apart to honour all Mothers you have not forgotten yours.

Chocolates and flowers make delight ful gifts and those who remember mother with gifts of this kind are sure to find that their presents have a welcome reception.

There are other things one can get for mother, too. I am sure that if you will think, you will recall some little thing that she has been wanting to get, that she is sure to appreciate. There is just one thing to remember. Please make your gift personal, something she can use or wear herself. This is not the time to think of the home. It is poor son or daughter who can get think of at least one article that dother would like to have.

Some suggestions include a dainty scarf, kid gloves, a pretty flower for her Spring coat, hosiery, any pretty articles of apparel. When there are books, one she has been longing for, or an old favourite that she will dearly love.

There is one other kind of tribute that will delight Mother, that is, if all her sons and daughters manage to send her some kind of message on Mother's Day. If they are in reach at all by long-distance they should call her up to say "hello." That will make her smile. At least one can send her telegrams of congratulation.

The custom of wearing flowers for Mother on Mother's Day is well established and generally adopted. The practice is to wear a coloured flower if your mother is living, and red across to be the favourite shade. If your mother is not living it is usual to wear a white flower.

Sunday is Mother's Day, and I hope all the mothers of the city will be suitably remembered on the occasion.

Fashionably yours,

THE BEAUTY BOX

All manner of influences demolish the soft under tissues of the face, causing the outer casing to fall into wrinkles. Metabolitics does it. Dyspepsia and late hours are beauty wreckers. Ill health is a common destroyer of the elasticity and tone of facial tissues. Emotional excesses and the bad habit of twisting the face into knots when talking are swell little wrinkle makers. Prevention is easier than cure. Every woman should keep in her mind' eye a picture of herself as she would like to be ten years hence. It will spur her to action.

Health is fashionable. The woman who sing-songs about her aches and pains is a tiresome companion. Health lights the fires in the human lamp. It keeps the lips red, the skin of good, clear color, the step alert and the brain keen. The woman who doesn't keep fit might as well stop chasing the beauty rainbow. She is out of the running.

Decaying teeth lodged between the teeth act up a state of fermentation, create destructive acids and breed bacteria, all of which is bad for the health and beauty of pearly fangs. Brushing must be of the kind that makes a clean sweep. It must include the side walls of the teeth and the bases close to the gums. After the brushing, it is advisable to use a mouth wash, rushing it between the teeth, cleaning the mouth and tongue thoroughly.

Oily hair is benefited by a change of the shampoo medium. Rubbing the bar of soap on the heavenly hair by bad business. Pfrottles of the soap adhere and gallons of rinsing water will not remove them. Unless the suds are thick, lively and crackling, the shampoo is likely to be a wash-out. Oiliness is often nothing more than soap scum accumulated through years of ineffective head scrubbings.

APRIL ESCAPADE

When the last claim of the children above eight had been satisfied for the night, and when the gate had clicked behind Mrs. O'Hara and Tom Martin suddenly put the cribbage cards aside and jerked his head affectionately in the direction of his sister.

"Sit down a minute, Mary Kate, I want to talk to you," he said.

Cass gave her an apprehensive glance, and turned red. But Mary Kate obediently sat down, and turned a tired and miserable young face toward her brother.

"Does Ma know any of this"? Martin asked, without preamble.

"About what really happened? No."

"How much do you know, Cass?" Martin asked.

"I know it all," Cass assured him, promptly.

"You know it all!"

"I told him," Mary Kate explained, very white. "I didn't want to marry him without telling him."

"You didn't have to tell me," Cass said, embarrassed.

"You know how I know you were down there, Mary Kate?" Mart asked.

"Yes. You told me, in the hospital. You said that you had driven Doctor Dan Answorth home. And that you saw me at Mr. Rountree's."

"Where'd you get the dress?"

"Mr. Stevens bought it."

"I might have known!" Mart said. He looked ten years older than his twenty-two years, tonight, and as he spoke put his hand over his eyes, with a gesture of despair.

"You can't take that time with me, if you are in trouble!" Mary Kate said, trembling, but in a restrained tone.

"Look here, I understand the whole thing," Cass put in suddenly, "and it isn't half as bad as you think, Mart."

Mart moved his haggard eyes to him.

"I don't get you," he said heavily.

"Why, look here, Mart. All Mary Kate did was go down there—Bill Chris Steynes had a house party, and she pretended to be a girl he was engaged to, Gladys Rountree knew all about it—there was no harm done!"

"Did he?" Mart asked, with sudden incredulous hope in his eyes, of Mary Kate.

"Certainly he did!" she said coldly.

"And how many people were at the house?" Cass supplemented, encouragingly.

Mary Kate could ignore this question for Mart merely simultaneously.

"I thought you pretended to be his wife, Mary Kate?" . . .

"No," she answered unhesitatingly, "—just—just his girl."

"Oh—?" Martin said. But look here," he went on, rushing on, "I—went up to Rountree's door, after I saw you—I had been home to change my clothes —and I went in. Mrs. Steynes was there, and the girl said that Mr. and Mrs. Steynes had just gone home. That was after one. Then I went to the Steynes house, and everything was dark."

The girl shuddered. She was sitting sideways at the table, her elbow resting on the red oilcloth. She leaned her cheek against her hand looking down at the floor, her face, her whole aspect, desolate.

"I wish you'd taken Tess or me along with you!" Martin said, suddenly. "I don't think Mother or you would approve."

"And how many people were at the house?" Cass supplemented, encouraged.

"It wasn't such an awful thing to do," Cass said generously. He had his nerve to ask her. But I don't think it was so bad!"

"I lay in the hospital there, trying to think how I could get hold of you. I knew there must be some explanation," Martin said, with a somewhat mollified glance at his sister. There was distinct placation, appeal in his tone. "I wanted to die," he said, simply.

Mary Kate did not change her position. Her sorrowful gaze was lowered to the floor, with its old linoleum of red and yellow, black and white. Now the tears began swiftly to fall, running down her cheeks, splashing on the little frilled collar she wore on a plain blue dress, and on the thin young hand that looked forlorn and helpless, somehow, curled in her lap.

"Why couldn't you tell Rountree that you couldn't do it?" Martin asked in what was almost his unusual gentle tone with her.

"I thought—" she said huskily, in a lowered tone, "that you could use the money, Mart. I thought you could go to Germany."

"The money!" he echoed, with a scowl.

"Yes. That was what started it."

"He paid you?"

"But why should I have done it, other wise?"

"You mean you thought I'd take his dirty money!"

"Mart, don't talk that way."

"I might have murdered the fellow, and you take his money!" Mart said bitterly.

"But I couldn't know that," Mary Kate reminded him, openly wiping her eyes, looking at him through sopping lashes. "I am as sorry as I can be," she said. "But— but you have no right to be so hard on me, Mart."

Just then there was an authentic tive knock on the kitchen door. And instantly she knew it would be Christopher who stood in the opening, when Cass had opened it—as indeed it was Christopher.

He took a quick glance about the orderly, homely room, and came in. Hardly a word was exchanged as he took off his hat and overcoat, and hung them on a peg by the hall door. Martin nodded toward a chair, and Chris sat down in it Mary Kate was rooted to her own chair. She could not move. Her lashes were wet and dark with tears, her shining hair had slipped back into a careless cap of waves and loose tendrils, her face was pale and stained with tears. She continued to rest her head on her hand; she did not look up as Chris came in.

"Am I late?" Chris asked. His voice was strangely like an actual pain, and her senses whirled about in a sort of vertigo.

"No, it's not nine," Martin assured coldly.

"What's the matter, Mary?" Chris asked, in an undertone, leaning from his chair to bring his face within a few feet of her own. She twisted about, doubled both arms on the red oilcloth, and burst into silent, tuneless sobbing that was all the more violent because of her effort to restrain it. "What's the matter?" the man asked. "Have they been riding you?"

"I wanted to ask you a few questions but my sister answered some of them already," Martin began, in a measured tone. His uneasy eyes moved continually to Mary Kate, who had controlled herself and sat frozen with fear He faced Chris.

"You and she were alone in the house on Friday night, weren't you? Your house, I mean, in Burlingame?"

"My servants were in a garage room that is attached to the house—yes," Chris answered, somewhat surprised.

"And she had been introduced that evening as Mrs. Steynes, hadn't she?" Martin pursued, after a moment of excited silence.

"Didn't she tell you that? That was the plan," Christopher countered, in annoyance and surprise.

CHAPTER XXXVI

Mary Kate had stopped breathing. All was lost now. She raised her head and looked defiantly, steadily, at her brother. Martin's face was ghastly.

"You said that there were others in the house. Sly?" he asked, almost in a whisper .The eyes of sister and brother met, and they might have been alone in the world.

"There weren't," Mary Kate answered hardly audible.

"And he did call you 'Mrs. Steynes,' didn't he?"

"Yes, Mart."

Mart's tone was suddenly gentle, all brotherly.

"How much money did you take from him, dear?"

"None—" she had been planning to say ,while he spoke. But the little tender word disarmed her, and she faltered out an indistinct unintelligible, and was silent, hanging her head.

"Tell me the truth, won't you, Molly? You know no one in the world loves you as much as I do," Mart pleaded.

Her armour was pierced. Through eyes suddenly drenched again she tried to smile at him.

"Honestly Mart, I didn't do anything wrong! Honestly, Marty!—"

"I know you didn't mean to," Mart said. "But you let him buy you clothes you took his name, you went to his house and spent the night. Ah, don't now, Molly—" he protested. For the tall girl had left her chair, and taken three steps toward him, and was on her knees with her face against his cheek. "And you took his money," he finished the arraignment. "Why, you know what all that looks like!"

"But, Mart, it it isn't what it looks like and if I didn't take his money!" Mary Kate sobbed.

"Don't cry, Molly—" he said, crying himself. His well hand was on her shaked drippery head. He looked across at Christopher and spoke with a simple and broken dignity.

"I sent for you today, Mr. Steynes," Martin began, "because I thought there was only one thing to be done. And I still think so."

Cass Keating laughs, as an older man laughs at a boy's dramatics; Mary Kate brought her head up suddenly, and stared amazedly into her brother's face. Christopher pursed his lips thoughtfully.

"You have your father's word for it, and you have mine, Mr. O'Hara," Chris presently said, in his poised, leisurely way, "that nothing wrong took place."

"I know that," Martin ascented.

"But that isn't enough for you?"

"It isn't that," Martin said. "But you're not quite family, and you are several years older. She's very poor, she hasn't a penny or an influential friend —you're a very rich man, and accustomed to buying what you want. Yachts, houses, horses for your polo, jewels and I suppose women, too."

"You can suppose what you like, naturally," Christopher said, in a sixty tone. He lighted a cigarette with a shaking hand.

"She went to your house, when there was no other woman," Mart pursued; "you called her your wife before your friends, she wore clothing you had given her, and spent the night alone with you. That there was a perfectly innocent reason wasn't your fault, but—"

"I'll tell the world it was not!" Chris agreed scornfully, as Martin paused.

"Now you say, and she says, that it was all a practical joke, and I believe you." Martin resumed reddening a little, "but in other words taking any notice of Chris' manner. "But you must see that you have done her a terrible injustice. She has been engaged to Mr. Keating here—"

"My dear, Mr. O'Hara," Chris said airily, all the charm of the world, "you are taking all this far too seriously. Of course we took a chance, your sister and I. But just because something didn't happen, it doesn't mean that you have to treat the girl as if she'd outraged all the laws of God and man! Mary Kate is a sensible girl, she'll be all right," Cass added. "You mustn't make too much of it."

He spoke to Martin's side, and held out his hand to Mary Kate, and she got to her feet, and shot over to take the proffered hand. Martin sat with his arm on it, with his arm about her.

"She told me about it," he said. "It was all a mistake."

Mary Kate learned her head against his arm, and closed her eyes. He was being so generous, so kind. And it mattered so little!

"When she says that everything was straight and aboveboard, why, that's enough for me. It was straight and aboveboard!" Cass said cheerfully.

Martin looked from one man to the other gloomily.

"It's not afraid of what people think of her reputation, Cass," Martin presently said, with a glance at his sister. "It doesn't cost him anything to hush it up, buy me off, pay my hospital bills —that's nothing to him."

But if I'd gotten him that night—as I wish to God I had," the boy went on, levelling a sudden look at Chris, "I'd have killed him. I'd gotten him that night, then he would have paid. Then he would have paid!"

"He has would have paid, too, and Mary would have paid," Chris remind ed him, unperturbedly.

"I'm pay anyway," Martin returned sharply.

"I was a fool," Mary Kate whispered, her head still resting heavily against Cass' arm, her eyes still closed. "But that was the worst I was!"

There was a moment of silence, when she could feel, like tangible currents through the air, the hostility of the glances the men exchanged. Then there was a stir, and she opened her eyes and started to her feet as her mother's voice struck suddenly across the other voices.

"Well, what is all this? What's going on here?"

O'Hara, rosy and breathless from walking, her widow's veil dangling from her dingy bonnet, her cotton gloves in her hand, was standing open in the hall doorway. She had come in from the front of the house; Tom was peering sleepily, curiously, over her shoulder.

Christopher rose politely to his feet, extinguishing his cigarette with a quick manipulation of his fingers against the little ashtray on the sink. Martin, trapped, looked desperately about him, and his eyes came back to his mother's face Mary Kate, her face tear-stained, her hair dishevelled, her breath coming shallow and quick, went to her mother. She took off the widow's veil with her own loving experienced hands and carried it, as she had carried it many times before, into her mother's room. She came back to smile, gallantly if a bit elderly woman.

"Nothing's the matter, Mother!" she said.

"Don't tell me that!" Mrs. O'Hara replied her sharply. She crossed to the chair Mary Kate had just vacated and sat down, staring bewilderedly from face to face, "Whatever's happened, Mart?" she asked.

For a full minute there was the silence of utter confusion. Christopher and Cass sat down again, and Mary Kate took the chair she had first occupied at the table, and rested her chin in her hand again.

"You've met Mr. Steynes, Mrs. O'Hara?" Cass remembered to say, then rather flatly.

The olde women acknowledged the introduction only with a shrewd appraising glance, and a brief nod.

"What's come to all of you?" she demanded.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Again for a moment nobody spoke, in the orderly kitchen, with its wiped shabby table oilcloth, and its ancient linoleum that was worn into brown circles. The clock ticked and the hot water faucet dropped an occasional pearl upon the dry zinc surface of the sink. Only one lamp was lighted, the green-shaded light on the table, where the children did their evening lessons; the drop light over the sink was dark.

"Mother, we're been in —sort of—trouble, the last few days," Martin then began, haltingly. "And perhaps we ought to tell you about it."

"I couldn't go out," he added as in sheer confusion Mrs. O'Hara was still, and none of the others spoke. "So I had to ask Mr. Christopher Steynes why syllables were so many threats.

Had to ask Mr. Christopher Steynes to come here," Martin repeated, with a flattering look at the visitor, as if to Uncle Robert's until at least eleven."

"Your Uncle Robert's in very bad, and I promised I'd go into a ward there and go back and sit with him," Mrs. O'Hara said automatically, her mind not upon her words, her anxious eyes upon her children. "I don't know why you had to keep anything from me, Mart," she added, her look moving from one member of the silent self-conscious circle to another.

"In this case, Mrs. O'Hara," Cass said, "there was no reason why you should ever have been bothered by it!"

Mary Kate's mother gave him a flattered glance, and with a gesture giving all the resentment of the reticent proud woman whose private affairs are indecently and unfairly made public.

Then she turned her expectant eyes toward Martin again. ,

"Tell me what on earth is goin' on Mart?"

"Mother—!" Mary Kate began impulsively. But her mother stopped her. "Let your brother speak!" she commanded. Mary Kate subsided into silence, her whole slender figure drooping as she sat at the kitchen table, her softly tumbled coppery head resting on her hand.

Then Martin began, this Mr. Steynes here is a friend of Mr. Rountree's, and they asked our Mary Kate, last week, if she would pretend for two days to be married to Mr. Steynes."

A sharply horrified look at her daughter was Mrs. O'Hara's reception of this. Chris seemed to speak.

"The reason being—"he was beginning, when Mrs. O'Hara silenced him as she had her daughter.

"Just a moment, please!"

"The reason was," Martin resumed accepting Chris' opening, "that some woman was pursuing him and hoped he'd ask he to marry him. She had followed him all from New York."

"You didn't see yourself mixed up in that sort of thing?" the mother asked, with a stern and incredulous look at Mary Kate.

"There was to be money in it," Martin pursued relentlessly.

"Green us and all harm! Mrs. O'Hara whispered.

"Look here, Mr. O'Hara, you're giving your mother an entirely false idea of the whole thing," Chris interrupted impulsively.

"I'll take it the way my son gives it, if you please," Mrs. O'Hara told him. And again Christopher fell silent.

"Mary Kate wanted the money for my German trip," Mart conceded, before continuing.

"Mart," his mother plended, "don't tell me she knew no better than that!"

"Well, anyway," Martin went on, "she and Mr. Steynes bought clothes and she went down there to Burlingame—she didn't go to Sacramento at all—"

"Molly—?" her mother questioned, heartbreak in her voice. Mary Kate made no answer; she did not raise her head.

"She told us she was going to Sacramento," Martin pursued, "but she went to Burlingame, and when she went to dinner at Mr. Rountree's, she went with Mr. Steynes, here, and was introduced as his wife."

"Don't say such things Mart!" Mrs. O'Hara rebuked him.

"It's true. I drove the doctor home that night," the boy said, 'and I saw her. His place is just opposite the Rountree place, and I was starting for home, when I saw the coms out in a sort of terrace there, all dressed up—oh, my God!"

He put his hand over his eyes. There was absolute silence in the kitchen, except that Mrs. O'Hara drew her breath with a sort of whimpering sound.

"I went kind of crazy, I guess," Martin said. 'I started to come back to the city, like I always do, leaving the doctor's car down there, and all of a sudden something seemed to burst inside my head—"

"Oh, blessed and merciful Lord," Mrs. O'Hara whispered. Her eyes were shut.

"I came in her round midnight, or later," Martin said. You called out to me, remember? Anyway, I stayed in my room upstairs until I thought you were asleep, and then I changed my clothes, and emptied my pockets and drove myself back. I went to Rountree's, there were still lights there, and a maid answered the door. I said that I had come to get the young lady—the red-haired young lady—that I was to call for her—and she said, "Oh, that's Mrs. Steynes. She and Mr. Steynes went home long ago!" I went back

Mrs. O'Hara looked at her son for an endless moment.

"And Mary Kate wasn't there at all!" she whispered.

"Oh, she was. She was upstairs, in his room."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Peggo Woods—who was Margaret only on her birth and marriage certificates—was mopping the kitchen floor when the telephone rang. It was Ruth her dearest friend.

"Peggo are you going to the city with me to get that fur coat? You know——?" Peggo did know. Ruth had talked about a fur coat all season planning to wait for the January sales. Although she had a great deal of money she was loyal in the matter of bargains.

Thinking only of the pleasant drive she would have with her friend of whom she was very fond, Peggo replied enthusiastically. "Of course I am! Say when!"

Ruth said nine o'clock the next morning.

At breakfast, the following morning, Peggo hesitantly asked Beck if he could give her some money to spend. Beck was generous at heart, and like all husbands waited more than anything to seem a success to his wife. He slowly produced a single dollar bill, feeling very small.

"Will that be enough?"

Her heart sank, although she should have known that he would not have any money left this late in the month.

Beck said hastily, "I'm sorry, Honey —maybe I can sell out this year and get into something else—and then you can have a fur coat too."

Sell out! How often had she heard that. It was an old a story as the vacation they had been going to take for the last eight years.

Still it was not Beck's fault that people went to the cut-rate hardware store instead of his. It would have been better to carry a cheaper line.

Peggo managed a Chile. After all it was a nice day, even for January—and it would be a holiday from dishwashing and the children. It was nice of her mother to look after them for the day.

"Of course that will be enough, I have only my luncheon to buy."

Outside Ruth honked vigorously.

"Bye—Lover."

"By honey, have a good time."

Arriving in the city, Ruth went at once to a suave and opulent shop which had advertising a gigantic sale. Here, surrounded by long mirrors Peggo began to wish fervently that she had not come. For she was all wrong. Her hat was wrong, her coat was wrong—but most of all her dress was wrong. It was much too short.

In the small town where they lived they had felt rather patronizing about the new long dresses. Now she felt positively naked!

Ruth, being short and a little bowlegged—although she never would admit it—always wore her dresses rather long, so she did not seem to notice so much. Anyway she was so intent on the coats that nothing else mattered.

Peggo was resentful and bitter. As a girl she had been courted and admired and now at thirty-eight, she suddenly awoke to the fact that she was slipping—slipped.

A tall tenctifully groomed woman came towards her. Her black dress appeared to be molded to her figure, and fell in silken folds around her feet. Her coiffure was flawless, her skin perfect She might have been twenty-five—only Peggo had a feeling that she was older.

"Can I interest you in our new cosmetics? We are putting in a new line—the Lady Betty——"

Peggo said, "No, thank you," rather shortly.

"There is no obligation to buy," the demonstrator went on smoothly. "If you would only let me show you what these preparations can do for your skin——" She went on explaining—skin freshener tissue cream, night cream, muscle oil. And finally after rendering, Peggo found herself in a deep wicker chair, with an immaculate white apron-like affair about her neck, while the suave demonstrator did things to her face. Peggo did not like the growing circle of interested women who stood and watched, but she thought—oh well, no one knows me anyway! After the final dusting of swansdown powder and the final brush of dust the right shade of rouge, she was handed the mirror, and invited to look.

"Oh——" She gasped involuntarily. She had lost ten years. And then she felt cheated. The preparations including everything, cost $16.50. She could not explain to Beck the necessity of sixteen dollars and fifty cents worth of cosmetics at this time, hard up as he was.

"So she said simply, "Thank you. I will send you an order in the near future." And yielded the wicker chair to the next impatient customer. Miss Beck, as the other women called her, turned to Peggo hesitatingly, "Do you mind my saying that you have lovely hair? Such an unusual shade of brown. Try parting it in the middle and let it fall in soft waves on each side of your face."

Then Ruth came on. She was jubilant, after getting a table coat at half price. She also confided that she had bought a couple of dresses.

"If you'll notice," she said, the skirts are really longer."

"Yes," replied Peggo, "I've noticed!"

During luncheon she was rather silent, but happily Ruth was too engrossed in her own affairs to notice. On the way home, by a determined effort, Peggo kept up her end of the conversation, but she was glad to have her own front door close behind her, and to be there alone.

She began to cry. All the years of worry and drudgery, of lost youth, of bright and happy dreams unrealized were caught in that flood of tears. And presently, when she had quite ruined the lovely effect of her facial, she dried her eyes and began to consider. There must be some way to make money. It would, of course, have to be something she could do at home.

As if in answer, her favorite magazine offered a prize of $2000.00 for the best short story, by a new author, of two thousand words. She considered. She had never written anything, but she could at least try.

She lay awake half the night considering plots. It seemed to her there was a trend of stories about young love, so she finally fell asleep with an idea.

The next month, every spare moment she worked on the story. Finally it was ready. Beautifully typed by the one finger method, correctly punctuated and mailed in a flat folder, it was pleasing to the eye at least. About the story, she was dubious. It was such a simple one—with no tricky arrangement of words—no attempt at cleverness.

Perhaps that was the reason it won the prize. Perhaps her own lost youth, and suppressed longings breathed a subtle something into the little story.

Congratulations and a check for $2000.00 were enclosed. Just as easy as that! Peggo took one look at it and began to sing at the top of her voice.

"A coat! fur coat! fur coat!"

Her first impulse was to run to the telephone to tell Beck. And then she decided to wait until he got home and have a real celebration. She made his favorite butterscotch pie and veal birds with a singing heart, and as she worked she spent the money. Fur coat—all those lovely things for her face, a new dress and hat, and accessories, and a little car. Wouldn't it be wonderful to look like something again, to feel pretty and well groomed, to gaily ask someone to ride with her instead of always having to "accept" a ride herself!

And then Beck came home with a long face. The veal birds and pie made no impression. So, waiting with her grand surprise, Peggo asked him, "What in the world is the matter?"

"The matter is that I could make the business go if I had a little capital. There was a salesman in this morning with a line of hardware to sell at low prices to compete with this cut rate store near me. If I could put that line in, we'd be saved."

"But you spoke of selling out," said Peggo with a sinking heart.

"No one wants to buy a store that's losing money," Beck pointed out shortly. I would simply have to give it away. I doubt if I could get enough to cover my loans at the bank."

"How much would it take?" asked Peggo slowly.

"Two thousand would do it nicely—and it might as well be two million," said Beck bitterly.

"I would have to be the exact amount," thought Peggo to herself. Then she threw up her head. "For better or worse," she had declared. And though in her heart she did not know now whether Beck was a good business man or not, she could not let him down. She reached into her coat pocket, drew out a neatly folded slip and tossed it to him.

"Will that do it?" she asked quietly.

"Two thousand," gasped Beck. "Where did you get it?"

Peggo explained, leaving out the fur coat. Of course Beck said wistfully that he did not want to use her money. And of course Peggo insisted—keeping up an air of bright gladness until he was gone, jubilantly hurrying off to hunt up a suitable salesman.

"Well, that's that!" She went into the bedroom, aimlessly took down her hair, and started to part it in the middle. She looked up and smiled to herself, a crooked little smile.

"Oh—you poor sap!" she said.

IT FILLS STADIA

In the January 25th issue of the Saturday Evening Post, John R. Tunis says this about daily newspapers:

"The thing that has made football what it is to-day, that has pushed it into the front wave of sports in the United States, is the press. Newspaper publicity fills stadia, and don't you forget it."

And daily newspapers fill more than football stadia

They fill manufacturers' pockets and retailers' cash registers with the proceeds of the sales of those products which are in constant demand because they are consistently advertised in the daily press.

It is daily newspaper advertising that keeps this brand of tea or that make of cereal in the "front wave" of consumer preference.

It is daily newspaper advertising that leads housewives in every part of the Dominion to buy this make of soup or that brand of soap.

It is daily newspaper advertising that influences men from Halifax to Vancouver to buy this razor or that collar.

It is daily newspaper advertising that maintains a constant flow of goods from maker to merchant to consumer.

Daily newspaper advertising is the most powerful instrument available to manufacturer, distributor or retailer for influencing buying habits—either of the nation as a whole or a particular section of it.

And well do they realize it because years of actual experience have shown them that the results secured from daily newspapers are far greater than can be obtained from any other advertising medium.

Daily newspapers sell most goods because they are read by most buyers.

President of Canadian National Congratulates Trenton Rotary

DOMINION IS RICH

Stock Market Crash and Wheat Failure Is No Deterrent

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, Ont., May 10—Sir Henry Thornton, President and general manager of the Canadian National Railways, in his address last night before the Trenton Rotary Club and the heads of Trenton's industries, stated that the real basis for prosperity in Canada rests on the fundamental natural resources of the country. He stated that Canada was as rich today as she was twelve months ago, even though the stock market crash had come in the meantime, and on account of his belief, he had deliberately set out to preach Prosperity to Canadians.

"Are we going to allow the stock market crash and the subsequent failure of wheat in Western Canada to move to stop everything?" the speaker asked. "My answer is 'No.' Be of good cheer, the Dawn is nigh at hand. Crops in the west are looking exceptionally good, and next autumn we will be laughing at the troubles of today."

In opening his remarks, which were brief, Sir Henry noted the fact that Trenton had made distinct progress since his last visit here from an industrial standpoint, and he congratulated the Rotary Club on their successful attendance record, for which they had been presented with a shield.

Dealing with the Canadian National Railways, Sir Henry referred to the company's policy of last winter to keep its employees at work instead of laying them off. He believed such a pol-

GANG WAR FATAL TO YOUTH OF 16, 2 ARE INJURED

Two Boys Arrested on Charge of Manslaughter in Toronto

DEATH IN HOSPITAL

Fatality Followed Alleged Insult to Girl by Dead Youth

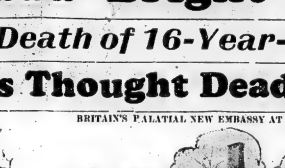
TORONTO, May 10.—Gang fights, organized attacks by groups of youths ranging from 16 to 21 years of age, rerifled last night in the death of one 16-year-old youth and severe injuries to two others who were rushed shortly before midnight to the General Hospital. Both attacks took place in Riverdale Park. Two youths will face charges of manslaughter this morning in police court, and it is expected, others will be apprehended today.

The dead youth is William James Elcan, 18, 10 Wyatt street, who succumbed as the result of a kick during the fight.

Injured: Robert Granton, 17, 295 Bumach street and Sidney Parrish, same address. Both were attacked while walking through the park by unknown assailants. Both are in the General Hospital.

Arrested shortly after midnight: Morris Silverstone, Sydenham street, Norman Ryckman, Sumach street, Wilham Pell, aged 20, Deans street and Agnew Burley, aged 23, Dundas street east.

Silverstone is said to have been the girl with whom he was walking and a fight followed his remonstrance. His said Elcan was kicked by an unknown youth while lying on the ground. Elcan died just after reaching St. Michael's Hospital.



Early this morning police, working under the direction of Inspector of Detectives Alex. Murray were holding five other youths at the Riverdale district for questioning. Two more arrests, it was stated, were expected at any minute. The body of the young man was taken to the morgue where it was identified by his widowed mother.

Elcan was carried into the police station at 9.45 p.m. by three youths who stated they had found him "knocked out cold" in the park. His forehead was bruised, his ear cut and his face was covered with earth as though he had been held on the ground while he had struggled.

Police immediately rushed the boy to St. Michael's Hospital in the ambulance from the division, but he died just as he was entering the emergency department. Chief Coroner Dr. J. M. Crawford was notified and on arrival at the hospital he ordered the body taken to the morgue.

Sergeant Parrish, Detective Moshier and Acting Detective Warner of Dundas East Division immediately went to the spot where the boy was alleged to have been found and make a thorough investigation of the area. Evidences of a struggle were clearly observed, it was stated.

GUARDSMEN QUIETED RAGING LYNCHING MOB

SHERMAN, Texas, May 10.—CP—A reign of terror by a raging mob which burned and wrecked homes of Negro buildings after killing a Negro who had attacked a white woman was ended here today with the arrival of three hundre d additional national guardsmen who promptly arrested twelve alleged leaders of the riot.

Straggling remnants of the mob which last night blazed open the vault in a ruined courthouse it had burned earlier and then paraded through the town with the body of the Negro dragged by a chain to a motor car, were standing around watching embers of numerous fires in the Negro district, when the troops arrived.

The Negro was placed in the court house vault by rangers who fought to save his life. Though the town claimed a population of fifteen hundred negroes, not one had been seen in town since early yesterday afternoon. After the negro's limp body was taken from the vault and rolled down a ladder, it was tied to a length of chain and attached to a motor car and dragged through the streets, later to be hung to a tree and cremated.

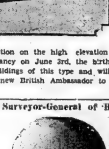
Police Reported to Have Been Mutilated At Sholapar



Bombay, May 10 (CP)—Unusual protective measures were put into force today throughout India to prevent communial rioting between Hindus and Moslems on the occasion of Mohammedan feast of Bakrid, in commemoration of Abraham's sacrifice of a lamb.

In Sholapar, the scene of sanguinary rioting Wednesday and Thursday, in which unofficial estimates of 10 dead and 400 wounded resulted, an order was issued forbidding assembly of more than five persons. Everything was quiet at beginning of day. There were reports here that five policemen missing at Sholapar had their eyes gouged out by rioters and were then thrown into a well to die. Three others were tied together and burned to death.

Frank Shane Sees Own Car On Front Street In City

Probably the Chevrolet touring car owned by Frank Shane, Donald St., and stolen from in front of the Belleville Arena on January 7th last never left this community. Yesterday the owner of the car noticed a car something like his own proceeding up Front street occupied by four young men. He followed the car and after the boys had parked the car and went into the Belle theatre, Shane made a close inspection and found by the serial number in his car. The police were notified and Sergt Harman investigated. When the car was stolen a 1926 license plate was on it but this had been changed to a license of 1929. The police had the car removed from the garage place to the police station but did not wish to have the supposed owner to come out of the theatre, thinking he would come to the police station when the car was missed. Four of the boys came down to the station but could not enlighten the police as to how the car had come into possession. Mr. Shane has his car and the police will hide in the car awaiting the return to the scene of the car at the time of its confiscation.

District Masons Fete Grand Master

to this district, especially during my term of office." The District Deputy told the Grand Master of his many visits to lodges in the district and found the lodges functioning perfectly and performing their ritual in a creditable manner.

Mayor Reid in welcoming the brethren to the city, said he hoped, that many more such visits would result. He congratulated the Grand Master on attaining his high position, explaining it was not a day's work but unceasing labor that won the award. Mayor Reid also expressed pleasure in having as another guest the Deputy Grand Master and was sure that he too, would be an excellent head of the craft in a few short years. His Worship suggested that when the members returned to their several homes, they would become better citizens and take an active part in the government of the community and live up to the obligations of the craft.

City Is Its People

Rt. Wor. Bro. J. O. Herity in introducing the speaker of the evening, stated the character of a city is represented by the character of its men. Masonry, Freemasonry and masonry is shown also by the men, that are employed in the high places. The Grand Lodge of Canada was formed in 1855 and down through those years, some highly capable men have held the position of Grand Master. The last one of Col. W. N. Ponton, John Ross Robertson, Sir John Gibson, Hon. John S. Martin, Hon. Thomas Mayhew and others mentioned. "We would be poor indeed and bewildered in our outlook," said Rt. Wor. Bro. Herity, "if Masonry was not producing men of that calibre in these times but we have two outstanding men in Most Wor. Bro. Dargavel and Most Wor. Bro. W. S. Herrington." The speaker traced the history of the Grand Master, explaining that the Scottish ancestry was born in Eastern Ontario. "He is a man of practical common sense," said the speaker, "and before joining St. George's Lodge in Toronto in 1906, his rise in Masonry has been meteoric. In eight years he was Master of his lodge. Four years later, a district deputy Grand Master in Toronto district, two years later, a member of the Board of General Purposes of Grand Lodge, in the next two years, chairman of the Board of Benevolence and in 1927 elected to the position of Deputy Grand Master."

Honors For Grand Master

Rising to speak to the toast of the Grand Lodge, Most. Wor. Bro. Dargavel was cheered to the echo, and in opening his remarks thanked the brethren for the reception, the district had given him. He wished, he stated, to establish a point of contact in making Masonry the emblem of truth and justice and to make some contribution to the needs of the community, while in office. The power of Masonry does not rest in secrecy or ritual nor in numerical strength but rests on the moral and intellectual qualities of the brethren who compose the order," said the Grand Master. "Masonry should not be looked upon as an outward show but as an inward possession. Masonry does not exist to satisfy the ambitions of members nor for a small part to be proficient in the ritual. It is not a material institution and numerical strength is not the measure of prosperity." The speaker advised the lodges not to let the door of membership swing inwardly too far and to the masters of the lodges he exhorted them to appoint committees on applications of old tried brethren of the craft. An application should be entertained under two heads, good judgment and strict morals, and there is no room for the selfish, proud and fault-finding person. How to make Masons was a question asked by the speaker and he considered three essentials, first through efficient thorough and dignified teaching of the ritual, second by giving attention to the educational and intellectual aspects and third more practical and applied Masonry. Masonry should never be a political institution and the ills of the people can never be cured by edicts and laws, "or what do they avail if we do not recognize our personal responsibility." The Grand Master told his listeners of the Memorial fund explaining the objective of $250,000.00 which had been reached and soon, he said, the Masonic craft would be able to educate every orphan of a Mason and also help the widow.

Past Grand Master

Most Wor Bro. Col. W. N. Ponton, in his own inimitable way proposed the toast to Grand Lodge Officers. He made a plea for smaller lodges, where all could become acquainted. He welcomed Deputy Grand Master Herrington, not as a historian, not as a hero, not as a king's counsel but as a friend of every tried and true Mason. The speaker also referred to the many landmarks of British and Canadian history explaining on May 10th 1897, the Indian Mutiny broke out and was quelled and hoped that British rule would again overcome the menace, that is now threatening that vast country. Courtesy of Lacapenga.

Deputy Grand Master Herrington speaking on the symbolism of Masonry explained that the greatest creation of man was the creation of language. If children were segregated they would cease to talk and convey their meaning by mimicry and signs. He classified the three stages of the creation by the pictorial age, the symbolic age and the phonetic age. Dealing chiefly with the symbolic age he showed the Chinese language as pure signs and symbols and if taken away, that people would have nothing left. No organized body made more use of symbolism than the Christian Church and the speaker showed in what way. For the Masons present he explained the symbol, the squares and compass, the designation of the Masonic order. The gathering was dismissed with the singing of the National Anthem and "Auld Lang Syne".

KEN MAYNARD IN BULL PICTURE

Rapid-fire action and thrills every minute of "The Wagon Master," Ken Maynard's Universal picture at the Regent Theatre today, Monday and Tuesday, Matinee daily at 2.30.

Maynard, with the aid of his famous horse "Tarzan" opens a new bag of riding tricks that confirm him in his position as a leading western star. There is fighting and riding of every kind and variety throughout the picture.

"The Wagon Master" is a story of the wagon freighters, a bold and reckless breed of men who carried supplies to isolated mining camps and army posts in the days of the old West. The plot of the picture concerns the efforts of Maynard, as "The Ramblers" to break an unscrupulous monopoly that is starving out the camps of the region through the high prices charged for supplies.

The film is featured by a whip fight between Maynard and Al Ferguson, his rival in love and trade. Edith Roberts makes a most attractive heroine. Others in the well balanced cast are Frederick Ivan Finch, Ethan Laidlaw, little Jackie Hanlon, Bobby Dunn, White Horse and Frank Rice.

A two-reel Buster Brown Comedy and a thrilling chapter of the popular "Fire Detective Series" completes the program.

TEACHING GIRLS LIFE-SAVING AT THE ASSOCIATION

Thursday night at Y.M.C.A. the opening class of a series of bi-weekly classes in instruction of the programme of the Royal Life Saving Society, took place. This class which is under the direction of the physical director is open to all girls and ladies in the membership (over fourteen years of age) and meets twice weekly on Monday and Thursday evenings at 8.15 p.m. Some twenty odd young ladies were present last night for the opening class and it is expected that this number will be considerably augmented on Monday evening at the next class session.

A thorough course of training will be given the members of the class between now and the 1st of June and it is anticipated that a goodly precentage of the class will be able to qualify for the Royal Life Saving Society's awards during that time.

Girls and ladies outside the member ship of the Y who are interested in life saving and would like to join the instruction class now being carried on can do so through the medium of a short term or summer membership. Any ladies who contemplate joining the class should do so at once that they may get the full benefit of the course of instruction.

ARGYLL REGT. WERE HOSTS AT UNIQUE DINNER

Battalion Will Go to Camp at Cobourg Within Few Weeks

Officers, non-commissioned officers and members of the Argyle Light Infantry were guests at a complimentary dinner at the armouries at the conclusion of the drill last night. The affair was unique in the history of the Regiment and the spirit manifested by all ranks, augurs well for the success of the training this year.

Previous to the dinner the Battalion paraded the streets for the first time this year and lead by the Pipers' band they presented a splendid soldierly appearance. The class of instruction which has been functioning during the past few weeks has been the means of increasing the interest and last night's dinner capped the climax. A novel program has been outlined for the Regiment, the chief of which will be the camping exposition which is slated for Cobourg, the week-end of May 24th or June 3rd. The members are looking forward to this outing. Regt. Major Holloway of the Instruction staff of Kingston who is specializing in the training for Bren Gun work, was on hand last night and put the men through their paces. Captain Edwards of Kingston has been in charge of the winter course.

Col. Keeler announced last night that the Argyle will parade to St. Thomas' Church on the morning of Sunday May 18th. He also emphasized the camping trip to Cobourg and promised the Battalion a splendid time. The date was not definitely given. Col. Keeler praised the men on their excellent appearance and the keen interest they are taking in the training. The strength of the Battalion this year is in the neighborhood of two hundred.

Lieutenant Jack Silver of the Canadian Machine Gun Corps, Kingston, who is attached to the Argyle for instruction purposes, delighted the gath ering with a number of songs last night. He was accompanied by Lt. Carson.

Regt. Major Richen also contributed a song and lead in the community singing.

Major Dilmour, Adjutant of the Regiment spoke enthusiastically of the Cobourg camp and proposed Lewis Gun competition which is one of the interesting branches of the training. During the course of the evening the pipe band rendered a number of selections.

At the close, three hearty cheers were given for Colonel Eric Keeler, who promised the men another dinner either prior or after the annual inspection which will take place during the first week in June.

Altogether it was a most successful dinner and the men were well pleased.

Mrs. S. Johnson, 54 Cedar Street, was caterer for the Argyll Light Infantry Banquet.

COTERIE OF ARDENT ENTHUSIASTS PREPARE FOR ANNUAL WORSHIP AT SHRINE OF GREAT GOD GOLF

Bug Strikes With Venomous Force in Merry Month of May

(By Observer)

The grass widow can now don her weeds!

The golf season has started!!

They go hand-in-hand!! The golf bug, that gay little insect that hovers about early in April, strikes with venomous force about this time. He wreaks untold damage during the year and is the cause of more trouble in the court of domestic relations than any other locale. He is invisible, filling him and there inflicting damage that can never be repaired. The ubiquitous little beast is responsible for late dinners, is the originator of heretofore unknown cuss words and a multitude of other sins. He is the reason why the children ask who that strange man is at occasional meal hours.

In short, the population is flocking to the golf courses where the mutter-and-putter game is in full swing or will be within a few weeks.

Green-keepers are at work, tractors are humming, lawn-mowers are buzzing and the professionals are diligently plying their talent in paraphernalia for the approval of devotees for the one grand game. I found "Jock" Mitchell, the professional at the Belleville Golf Club hard at work fashioning drivers, repairing brassies, cleaning mid-irons and polishing niblicks at his little rendezvous out at the course yesterday.

The old pro, known only "Jock," He is right on the scene of action perpetually during the summer months and if he cares to try out that new putter, he has but a few steps to go. To the average golfer, he lives the life of Riley. But it is not so. He has his trials and tribulations, just as exactly as every other man has in his own respective line of business. He is preparing to initiate a flock of new pupils at the shrine of the great god golf.

He toils with them, correcting the little defects which cause that disconcerting hook and that disastrous slice which are the bane of any golfer's existence.

But he spent six years learning all about the game from one of Scotland's leading professionals, John McAndrew at Cruden Bay. In his youth he caddied for the golfer's at this renowned course which is situated thirty miles from the city of Aberdeen, Scotland. With the other youngsters he was taught, under Mr. McAndrew's wing and after learning the game from the ground up was told he was a qualified golf instructor.

Women Apt Students

One glance and one would not be impressed with his ability to whang a ball straight down the fairway for two hundred and fifty yards. He does tip the scales at more than a hundred and fifty pounds, is but five feet in height and does not possess the brawn or stature that the average layman would expect to find in a finished golfer. But the way he rapped that little pill around the course is nobody's business.

"Jock" does not say so, but he implied that he would rather teach one woman than any five men. "They listen to instructions and go out and try to follow them," he said, "while the average man forgets all he's been told when he takes his stance at the tee."

He is an expert club-maker and the beech and persimmon shafts, treated in Scotland are transformed like magic into well-balanced, light and shining golf clubs. He spends his winters in remaking clubs to satisfy the most exacting players.

An Unique History

"Jock has an interesting history. He served in the British Navy and sailed the seven seas. While serving as a Gunner on a vessel which was cruising the North Sea from Russia where a difficult one, but Mr. Naylor's efforts achieved success. James Grimmon was the other member of the company. He was called upon to play the role of the Marquis of Karnaby. This elderly character was well done by Mr. Grimmon.

The play deals with the appearance of His Highness at the southern home under the name of George but the girl has seen beneath his assumed name and realizes he is "The Prince." His fine sense of humor, his desire to escape for a brief space from the routine of the official life to be himself and meet a fine young girl, and the emotional consequences which follow are revealed in the play.

Miss Tutle deserves high commendation on her work of directing the play. The performance was one of which she, the players, and college may be proud. It was a worthwhile addition to the local dramatic season.

Musical numbers of Stephen Collins Foster's southern melodies were played by Prof. Sam Anglin and created and sustained the real atmosphere in which the play moved.

AIRWAYS BLOCKED

Colds and Catarrh frequently clog the air passages so that breathing is difficult. Let "Nostrilline" help. "Nostrilline" clears away all congestion and gives such welcome relief at the first touch. Soothing and pleasant. 60 cents from McKenzie's Drug Store.

The Play

Albert College Players Present "Just Suppose" at Memorial Hall

"Just Suppose," the brilliant comedy of rich sentiments and tender passion, the work of A. E. Thomas, a supposed romance built up on the visit of the Prince to the United States some years ago, was presented by Albert College Players at the College Memorial Hall on Friday evening. The production and the setting were adequate. Through the three acts the large audience sat entranced by the clever story, the intense dramatic interest and the rich sentimental values and by the very clever acting of the college players.

The play is one of the cleverest from the dramatic point of view that has been presented on the United States stage. It is rich in dramatic situations and in sentiments and in dialogue. The characterization is excellently drawn. From the point of view of timeliness the play served an imaginary situation and constructed upon it a love story of the best consequence of drama which appealed to two continents.

As put on by the College Players, the production was one of the best in the dramatic history of the institution. Settings were ample, they suggested the South, the Virginia of today. The acting of such a comedy naturally requires experience and the reserve which experience brings. This was actually achieved by the players, who reconstructed the sentiments and the situations in a life-like manner. Alex Finlayson as Kingsley Stafford, son of Mrs. Carter Stafford, an old lady who recalled dancing with the Prince's grandfather when she was a girl, gave a fine portrayal of the middle-aged southerner of wealth and family. James Pullen took the part of Hannibal, the darky, and conquered the difficulties inherent in the idiom and the idiosyncrasies of the southern negro, his expression and gestures revealing a clear study of the type. Isabel Sutton played Mrs. Carter Stafford, the grandmother of the heroine, and caught the trick of the character very skilfully. Howard Purchase as Montgomery Warren, the lover, who was rejected in favor of the ideal and who, withal preserved his friendship for the girl, was capital in the part. Miss Mildred Lloyd had one of the difficult roles to support, that of Linda Lee Stafford, the girl whose heart was touched and enriched by the romance with George Chester, the Prince, and who sacrificed her feelings for the sake of the honour of the man she loved. This was a part calling for consummate acting. Miss Lloyd's success in the role was proof enough of the attention she had given to the study of the part. To make real scenes of such tender emotions without allowing them to drift into sentimentality was a real achievement and that was what Miss Lloyd accomplished. James Cook took the role of Hon Culverton Shipley, a rather dramatic part with so many opportunities of comedy. He kept the audience in uproar with his interpretation of the lines. Indeed the dialogue in some of the lines given to this character was the richest in the whole play in their interest for the audience from the standpoint of history of character. Jack Naylor took the role of George, "The Prince." Peculiarly fitted by natural resemblance to the part suggesting the heir to a great country's throne, he caught the sense of freedom, the boyishness and inherent manliness of the hero. The role for various reasons was a load of ammunition had been delivered two German submarines were sighted and soon they were pelting torpedoes at the helpless boat. The unwelcome visitors succeeded in sinking the craft, the crew took to the lifeboats and after a day and a half were picked up and taken back to England. He has been down the Suez, across Africa, and played football with Italians and Turks but he hopes to make Belleville his future home.

Coming to Canada six years ago he tutored with Percy Barrett, Canadian champion at the Lakeview Country Club, Toronto. Later he went to Muskoka and afterwards came to the Bay of Quinte Club here. He is now instructor at the Belleville Golf Club.

He is impressed with the local course which he says will be one of the sporting links of the district when completed. Another new green has been added this year.

"Jock" despite the fact that he has spent all his life teaching duffers how the game should be played, is unable to explain the strange fascination which golf holds. The new corteie of ardent enthusiasts will soon be on deck, pleading for assistance to become the world's greatest golfer.

LOCAL RESIDENT WILL CELEBRATE 94th BIRTHDAY

Stephen Brownell Has An Optimistic View of Life

Stephen Brownell, Burton street will celebrate his ninety-fourth birthday on June 20th. Mr. Brownell is eagerly looking forward to the occasion. The Ontario Intelligencer found him yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Oscar Reddick.

Despite his extremely advanced years, Mr. Brownell has an optimistic outlook on life. His hearing and his sight have been impaired in his waning years, but instinctively he is able to find his way about. He wields the axe with agility and chops the wood daily for his daughter.

Eight years ago Mr. Brownell came to Belleville from Eastern Ontario, where he spent almost his entire life. Of United Empire Loyalist stock he is decidedly proud of his ancestry. His father fought in the rebellion at Prescott in 1837 and was one of the pioneers of Richmond County.

Mr. Brownell worked at the carpentry trade while he followed agriculture for many years. He remembers well when the Cornwall Canal was built over eighty years ago. Roads were laid of corduroy and horse-drawn stages completed the trip from Montreal to Toronto in relays. Good time was made over the winter roads but the summer roads made travelling particularly difficult, according to Mr. Brownell.

Cornwall, the nearest town was twenty-two miles away and pioneers went to the rural centre at intervals for newspapers and mail. Twenty-five years ago his sight commenced to fail and despite expert medical attention the malady took its toll. He has never used tobacco in any form and has not used intoxicating drinks to any excess.

Mr. Brownell attributes his longevity to hard work, early hours of retirement and the good care which he always given himself. He operated a wheelbarrow when the old Grand Trunk line was first put through. Two years were occupied in building this road.

He is very careful of his diet and hopes to live many more years. His health has been good within the last few years.

Five sons and daughters remain—Mrs. W. Phillips, and Mrs. Oscar Reddick, both of whom live on Burton street in this city and John, James and George Brownell of Stormont Township. He plans to visit his sons in Eastern Ontario this year. F.S".V:P:

THE POET LAUREATE

John Masefield is poet laureate of England.

He is the choice for the office, created when Chaucer, father of English poetry, was high in affairs of state in England and did many official offices for the English king on the continent.

In the long line Masefield is a legitimate successor to the inspired bards who have numbered some of England's greatest. Wordsworth and Tennyson were the greatest of the laureates of the nineteenth century. Their muse inspired by the office did some noble work. Masefield's art may be expected to do the same.

The "hobo poet" who washed dishes in a New York restaurant after a youth at sea and who comes of be great blood of England, seems admirably fitted in this democratic age for the office. Who could challenge his supremacy as bard at the present time is doubtful, not even Kipling great as is his art, being able to reach the unfaltering height of fancy and imagination of Masefield at his best. He can write with a pen dipped in blood and he can be as mild as any cooing dove, he can touch the tenderest passions with a grace of which any world poet might be proud. He can descend to the ring and to the story which in ordinary hands would be sordid but which he idealizes with the strength of his genius.

Masefield shows how it is possible to be thoroughly modern and yet pipe sweet pastoral to write rhyme. No one can call this man, who knows what life is, a weakling poet. He has all the tenderness of greatness.

The office is a worthy one, and he will adorn it. He will not write unless he is inspired and no demands in the old form will be made upon him.

Court poets held a high place in the early Renaissance and late Middle Ages. Masefield can restore some of the glory in this age in the world's history, with which he is in complete sympathy and understanding.

FOOTBRIDGE AND BICYCLES

Boys riding bicycles have been causing trouble at the footbridge which is crowded at times with pedestrians. It is difficult enough for pedestrians to make their way across passing a citizen walking with his bicycle, but there is no reason at all why any one should think of riding across the bridge or through the gangway.

Yesterday a man was struck by a boy. True the boy apologized and expressed regret but he had no right to be seated on a bicycle in that place.

"O, WHERE IS MY LITTLE DOG GONE"

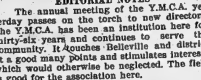
There was once an old vodeiling song now little sung but it may be revived to suit the sentiments of owners who have "lost" their dogs. It is the "O where, o where is my leedle dog gone."

In other words in two days Belleville will have a dog catcher and a pound keeper for wandering canines. He will start to business on Tuesday morning with the authority of the council.

There are nearly three hundred unregistered dogs in the city, which will be affected by Monday night's appointment of the catcher.

Doubtless the pound will be a place of reunions of dog owners and lost dogs for do what the masters will some of the canines are bound to find their way into the dragnet.

The executive committee of the city council did a graceful act in passing a resolution Thursday evening, expressing appreciation of the efforts put forward by the members of the fire department to recover the body of a boy who lost his life in the river mouth in March.



Daylight Saving as suggested in the petition of the Manufacturers has not been dealt with by the city executive, but decision is expected on Monday night. Many have made guesses as to what may be done by the city council.

The arrival of cement at the site of the new bridge is a sure and certain indication of the rapid progress which is being made by the Holdcroft Construction Company in their work of preparation for the new bridge. The cribwork which is necessary to the laying of concrete has now practically stretched across the river.

How many would not like the life of a vagabond. To many the life is natural. The greatest of the vagabonds was of course Francois Villon. He preferred vagabondage. Vagabonds today are the men who have largely failed through inherent weakness in character, they are not men like Villon who took to vagabondage by an act of the will and by preference. Villon by his brilliance of character, by his richly endowed poetic genius (his songs are among the greatest of the Middle Ages and yet live and will live forever in the wealth of humanity with which they are saturated) and by his brilliant wit and love of intrigue was a unique individual. If all vagabonds who spend a night in Belleville police station were Villons Belleville would be one of the greatest places on earth. But they are not. Villon did not choose the easiest way: the trouble with the run of vagrants is that they take the laziest route to nothing.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A. yesterday passes on the torch to new directors. The Y.M.C.A. has been an institution here for thirty-six years and continues to serve the community. It touches Belleville and district at a good many points and stimulates interests which would otherwise be neglected. The field is good for the association here.

SIDELIGHTS

MY MOTHER

She has a garden in her soul
A garden that can heal life's hurts,
Her mind has poise and self control
That gives sweet calmness to her face
So all who look, look long, turn back
To look again. They comfort take
And peace which they before did lack
Quiet and unafraid her eyes,
True mirrors of the thoughts within,
And her sweet voice its cadence plays
On hearts as from a violin
With words of love in wisdom given.

PUTTING THE ZOO ON THE AIR is not as simple as it sounds. Down in New York the broadcasters arranged a jungle jingle on the air and went to the zoo with mikes and everything necessary but the animals weren't interested. The wolves always howl when the nook whistles blow, whether as a sign they're ready for lunch, or not, but they absolutely refuse to howl into mikes for radio or the talkies and there you are. Likewise the lion, tiger and bear and even the elephant hens draws the line and can see nothing in the micdaphone to laugh at. Here in Belleville there is a dog which howls every time the town clock strikes, and how he howls! We nominate him for Hollywood and the Talkies.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR., AND EDSEL FORD had lunch together at a big New York city eating place recently. Corny was out of cash and tendered a check to the lady cashier who did not seem to recognize his classic features. Seeing her hesitate C. V. jr. said "You see I've just had lunch with Edsel Ford." Bang went the cash drawer, this was a bit too thick, two such celebrities couldn't by any possible chance drop into her day dreams at one time, and it was an old trick trying to persuade a millionaire to get away with a free meal. And so Corny had to go to the credit manager.

YAMS, YUCAS, PAPAYAS are eaten in large quantities in the black belt of Manhattan, called Harlem for short. The West Indian negro prefers them to fried chicken and corn pone. The yams come from Cuba and Jamaica and are something like sweet potatoes, only bigger and sweeter. Yucas look like tulip bulbs, papayas resemble a long pumpkin, have a kind of a cucumberish taste, and are be eaten raw, fried or boiled, Sabadillas or "sugar apples" are the prime delicacy from Jamaica, gray-green in color with a kind of marshmallow inside.

TWILIGHT OF THE PROVERBS

Science and civilisation are hard on old proverbs. Some of them cut a sorry figure in the modern world. It is a wonder that the cynics and realists have not noted their demise.

"Two's company, three's a crowd." There's mid-Victorianism for you! We moderns recognize the triangle as part of the accepted order.

"Rain before seven, clear before eleven." A very loose, and inaccurate statement. It all depends on whether you are talking of Standard Time or Daylight Saving.

"An honest as the day is long." But how honest is that if the earth slows up a little sometimes, as astronomers maintain? Perhaps a man who stole only a few hundred dollars a year would qualify.

Even "tempus fugit" has fallen on evil days. Some of the experts say it just slips around the corner and comes back again.

If that is so, there is at least one proverb that should continue in good standing. Two-way time is certain to give new meaning and force to "All's well that ends well."

GET YOUR SPECKLED BEAUTIES

A new means of taking trout from the San Jacinto Mountain streams has been discovered.

It appears that two local fishermen were having poor luck whipping Strawberry Creek, when one suggested that the bait be soaked in some of the bootleg one of them happened to have brought along. This was tried, and at the first cast the rod bent nearly double, and it took the combined efforts of the two sportsmen to reel in the prize.

Then it was discovered that the worm had seized a big fish by the throat and was choking it.

LETTERS to the Editor

V. O. N. WORK

Belleville, May 8th, 1930.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer:—

May I be permitted a few, brief lines of appreciation in your paper regarding the splendid work being done by the local Victorian Order of Nurses?

Th weekly, well baby clinic particularly is an institution which should deserve the thanks of all mothers who are interested enough in their baby's welfare to take advantage of the scientific knowledge and practical experience this service affords, at no expense to them. This, to many who can not afford the services of the doctor for baby's every minor ailment, is filling a long felt need, and has done much to encourage greater knowledge in child upbringing.

Miss Webb, the very capable nurse in charge, deserves much commendation for the extremely efficient and kindly services she daily performs, and it is safe to assume that very many children we are now healing and reabout through methods of proper feeding and habits encouraged by her would have missed out on all this through lack of knowledge on their mother's part. My own experience has proved this to be true.

Yours very truly,

J. D.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gibson Now Living in Garage

Special By Staff Reporter

Trenton, May 10.—The family of Mr. Joseph Gibson, of Sidney Point, where home was destroyed by fire after it was struck by lightning the other night, are now living in the garage, which has been fixed up into living quarters, it was ascertained today. Within a few days it is expected that the neighbors will gather at the home and hold a house building bee, the house to be erected on the same foundation as the one which was destroyed. The Gibson family are deservedly popular in their district, and all their neighbors have been helping out as best they could since the fire.

Mother's Day Observance

Mother's Day which will be celebrated tomorrow, is undoubtedly bringing to Belleville merchants increased business and revenue. If we are to judge by the quantity of flowers chocolates, stationery, and other articles which were sold today, for that purpose. Florists and drug stores enjoyed the greater volume of trade and even as early as eleven o'clock this morning florists were unable to supply customers with certain varieties of flowers. Daffodils were sold in large quantities and vied with roses in popularity. Sweet peas were scarce and quickly picked up. Lilies, tulips and carnations were also readily disposed off. The local drugstores supplied hundreds of boxes of bon-bons which will tomorrow greet many mothers in the city, the packages for the most part were special Mothers' Day editions, attractively boxed.

The two telegraph offices also report a very heavy business today, and the two telegraph offices also received their share of increased business and many telegrahs conveying messages of good wishes and congratulations were received and sent today. These messages will continue all day tomorrow. The ready-to-wear departments in the local shops were next in line for business and hosiery, gloves, lingerie and other wearing apparel was purchased for presentation tomorrow.

And to make one of the loveliest days celebrated on our calendar still more beautiful the weather man promises fine weather, the probabilities reading "fair and mild".

PRODUCE MARKET BUSTLING SCENE

With perfect weather, this morning's market was a scene of bustling activity. Appearing in large quantities for the first time this year, asparagus was a prime favourite with the housewives, selling at ten cents a bunch, three bunches for a quarter. Another fresh vegetable that has prominently featured today was rhubarb which was offered at five cents a bunch or six bunches for a quarter. Green onions sold at five cents the bunch and lettuce for ten cents a bunch. Beans were offered at twenty cents the quart and potatoes at forty cents peck.

Eggs took a little jump in price today, selling at prices ranging from twenty-five cents to twenty-seven cents a dozen. Butter remained stable in price selling for forty-five cents a pound. A number of boxed flowers and plants were offered for sale today, pansies selling of twenty cents a box and sweet alyssum at the same price.

OUT DOOR CLASS

This morning the Y.M.C.A. boys enjoyed their first out-of-door gym class, when the Junior and Preps went to the fair grounds for their regular Saturday morning session. Under the supervision of Mr. Ralph Moden, physical instructor the boys were given practice in running, jumping and other track work, in preparation for the 24th of May and 3rd of June events. At eleven o'clock they returned to the Y.M.C.A. for a swim.

Today's Poem

MOTHER'S DAY

Who'll wear a rose for Mother's Day,
A half-oped rose and white,
Plucked in the morning while the dew
That gathered over night
To kiss its petals like a gem
In its pure heart appears,
As pure and sweet as mother-love,
As rare as mother's tears?

Who for a Mother's Day will wear
A blossom pure and white
Above his heart, wear it from dawn
Until the shades of night,
Come in upon the perfumed breeze
And wrap the world and him
As softly as the mother-love
Wrapped him in days grown dim?

A white rose just to honor her
Whose rose was purer far
Than any gem the world has known,
Than snow-white roses are;
A white rose for the mother-love
That knows nor stop nor stay,
That up the heights or in the depths
Goes with him all the way.

—Judd Mortimer Lewis.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Hats with brims and larger crowns are decidedly welcomed. Middle-aged women find them more flattering than the skull-tight helmets which reveal every furrow on the brow. Younger women take to them for the reason that they permit the more bouffant coiffure. It is time that the slapped down water wave gave way to a softer fuller hairdress. Coiffure styles are dependent upon hat models produced by designers. Older gals remember "way back" when the enormous lid with the brim turned up all one side carried a load of false hair. The hair was sewed to the hat. When hat came off, so did hair. Can you beat that, Mrs. Bumpendorfer?

The eyes are the most expressive features. Little disarhearts should remember that when they plaster their pouting lips with rouge of bright Chinese red. The cerise mouth catches the eye, and eyes aren't noticed. There are girls whose natural beauty is killed and slaughtered by an excess of paint. A little is enough. Their mirrors should tell them that.

Naturalness is the beauty note of the day. Naturalness of figure, complexion, hair and manners. It all makes for a more glorified womanhood. The uproar about the pinched in waistline was all about nothing; women wouldn't lace and haven't. The new figure is prettier than the bed slat shape of the boyish type with bust lashed down. Curves are where curves should be.

Foolish for the short dumpy woman to yearn for a swanlike neck. She couldn't get it if she tried, and if she had it, her lines would all be out of kilter. Her policy should be to keep the neck from getting ring-lines. She can do this by carrying her figure "tall," by keeping the head erect, chin lifted.

Miss Isobel Cockshutt, daughter of Colonel Henry Cockshutt, former lieutenant-governor of the province, and Mrs. Cockshutt of Brantford, and Mr. Eardley Wilmot, son of Mrs. C. Wilmot, of this city, whose marriage will be an interesting event in June.

Perhaps You've Heard

Miss Berta Ruck in a recent lecture on "Some Girls of Yesterday" contended that the modern girl does not differ essentially from the girl of yesterday. "I do not believe there is such a thing a a modern girl," said Miss Ruck. "You might as well speak of a modern baby. I do not believe that there is any difference in the girls. They are what they always have been and always will be. But I do admit," she went on, "that there is an enormous difference in circumstances, in discrimination and I think, considering how different circumstances are today, it is quite wonderful that girls remain so much what they were. I do think the chief characteristic of our sex is adaptability." Miss Ruck quoted as the novelists of yesterday's girls, Miss Rhoda Broughton, whom she said would come back into her own again.

Did you know that there was once a book published at one pound, which brought at auction, some three hundred years later, eight thousand, six hundred pounds? It was resold for one hundred thousand dollars, and the chances are that were it put up to auction today it might run to forty or fifty thousand pounds. That book is the First Folio Shakespeare of 1623 —the Comedies, Histories and Tragedies, printed by Isaac Jaggard and Edmund Blount.

Douglas' Egyptian Liniment should be in every household. Stops bleeding at once, cauterizes wounds and prevents blood poisoning. Kills sore inflammation and proud flesh.

L. M. Montgomery's book "Magic for Marigolds" the latest by this popular Canadian writer, has been translated into the Dutch language. In the story, the following reference was made to the one of the characters: "She was a W.C.T.U. and an I.O.D.E. and most of the other letters of the alphabet." The translator thought it well to put in a foot-note to enlighten his readers. He got the W.C.T.U. correctly explained, but evolved this original and enlightening explanation of the I.O.D.E.: "The Independent Daughters of Prince Edward Island."

"..... of Cabbages and Kings"

ART

Art is a whip of dreams.
Its many thongs last many sorts of men
And good them to the tasks,
They cannot leave, and yet cannot fulfill,
As slaves so born in tyranny
They cover bondage, since they know
Their only freedom is in yielding to the last,
Which, though it bruise their bodies,
Gives their spirits immortality.
A kinship to Creation, forming worlds from words.

—Elinor Lennen, in Canadian Bookman.

Now that it seems such a casual thing, this going abroad, it won't be any time before practically everyone has been across at least once. There are tours of every kind and description, to fit every purse. There are even tours for which you pay on the instalment plan! Yes, indeed. You make a "convenient down payment" according to the language of advertisia, and the balance in monthly instalments when you return. That you may take the trip now and spend the rest of your days paying for it is not, of course, hinted.

But the adventurous spirited would be tempted to do just that very thing; and come home to find that the most sage has fallen due on the old homestead or some like calamity. But they would have seen Europe, at any rate. Still it's bad enough saving up months in advance for your vacation, mild as it may be, without spending the intervening period fitteen it and your next holiday paying for pleasure, the cost of which seems suddenly to have swollen to the size of the national debt.

But whether you are going abroad for the first or the twenty-third time, or are merely one of those to whom travellers send postal cards, you must read Irvin Cobb's "To Be Taken Before Sailing." Of course, you have read "Speaking of Operations," that slim little volume that is guaranteed to chase away the glooms before or after the operation. If you read it just before the stitches are to come out, you won't need the services of the doctor for this little affair.

His latest book "To Be Taken Before Sailing" describes Europe as seen from the guide books, and is a volume that no traveller, or would-be traveller should miss reading.

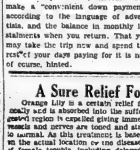
Fashionably Speaking By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

It is so nice to have handy in your wardrobe these breezy spring days, a remainder or coat frock. They are ideal for the cool evenings and can be worn all summer long, whenever a cool spell occurs. Some of the newest models are made up in feather-weight tweeds and they are lovely affairs fluffed, smart and neat looking, and just the right weight. They are the practical thing for shopping and ideal for the countryside ramble. For travelling they cannot be equalled and made up in plain woolens they are very smart.

Tweeds which have enjoyed so much favour this season make the most attractive models. Flecked and nubbed weaves in mixtures of black with yellow, black with lime, and black, navy, green or bluebell, with white are lovely combinations. These shades are fresh looking and a pleasant change from the beige and brown tones which were worn all winter long. Basket weaves are also lovely and the woman of every type and every complexion can be suited if she exercises a little care in choosing her colours and designs. The frocks display delightful little vestees made of linen, pique, silk, chiffine, and sometimes cuffs to match. Turn-down collars and jabots in dainty materials sometimes take the vestee's place.

As the cape has come back into favour, both in the coat and dress mode, many of the frocks are sporting the delachable cape, and if you are suited to this item by all means have it on your frock. They add variety and warmth and if fastened with buttons and buttonholes they can be removed when a topcoat is wear.



It is of the the utmost importance to have accessories to match the coat frocks, and they will increase the chic of the ensemble. The simplest addition to the frock is a handkerchief to match the vestee and it merely needs to perk out of a pocket to be entirely chic. A scarf in the same material may also be worn, or it may be in a tweed to match the frock. Hats and bags may also be worn in tweeds, linen or crepe de chine, so you see it is not difficult to link up your whole costume. If you did not purchase a new spring coat, dear reader, the coat frock ensemble would be just the thing to be worn both now and through the summer and autumn. Give it a try, I know you will be delighted!

QUEEN VICTORIA LOST BALL GAME TO KING GEORGE

A league game was played Friday afternoon on King George School grounds between Queen Victoria and King George Schools, the following were the line-ups, the latter being declared winners:

King George—Bennett, lf; Locke, ss; Harvey, 1st; Millar, p; Donnelley cf; Barber, 2nd; Saunders, 3rd; Hannah, c; Green, rf.

Queen Victoria—Morgan, 1st; Yeomans, c; Hammett, 2nd; Nunn, 3rd; Angel, lf; Hall, ss; Dickey, rf; Rigby p; Mylcraf, cf.

Umpires—Mr. Bateman on balls and strikes; Mr. Brown on bases.

Excitement was intense, there being no score the first five innings. Millar pitching for King George, pitched a very steady game and was well supported by his team mates, while Rigby for Queen Victoria was at times unsteady and did not get as good support. In the sixth, King George got five runs on four hits, Queen Victoria players havin gfour errors. In the seventh, Queen Victoria got two runs on one hit, King George having one error, and in the ninth they again made four runs on three hits, a walk, and King George having one error. King George coming to bat, one run behind in the ninth, forged ahead by getting three runs on two hits, Queen Victoria player making one error after two men out. Bennett in left field made four put outs and Green in right field, three put outs for King George. For the winners, Bennett, Harvey and Hanna were the outstanding players, and for Queen Victoria, Yeomans, Nunn and Angel.

An O.I of Merit.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and pushed by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept public favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt its power to repair and heal.

GALLANT FOX WINS PIMLICO

Veteran Earl Sande Rides Winner of Rich Preakness

Baltimore, Md., May 10.—Gallant Fox carried the silks of the Belair Stud to victory in the fortieth running of the historic Preakness Stake at Pimlico, Friday, and also carried Earle Sande, America's best known jockey, to his first win in the $53,070 racing classic.

The gallant son of Sir Gallahad III. defeated Thomas M. Cassidy's Crack Brigade in a stretch duel by three-quarters of a length, with W. J. Salmon's Bostfake another length back and Michigan Boy fourth. Seven fillers of the best 3-year-olds in train ing, trailed.

After a poor start due to the behavior of Armageddon, Gallant Fox was always well up in front, though the pace was set by one of the last-minute entries, Tetrachal, of the Howe Stable, and Crack Brigade.

Earns $51,925 for Owner

Sande's mount earned $51,925 for William Woodward owner of the Belair Stud, and possession for a year of the Woodlawn Vase, prized turf trophy dating from 1866. This Mr. Woodward received from the hands of Governor Albert C. Ritchie after the finish, as the crowd estimated at 47,000, cheered the victory of the lone Maryland entry.

It was the fifth time Sande had ridden in the Preakness. Last year he rode his own entry and finished last.

Gallant Fox was the pre-race favorite, both because of his victories in three stakes, the most recent being the Wood Memorial at Jamaica, and the presence of Sande. The boy colt took his place among such turf immortals as Man o' War, Whiskaln, Sir Barton and Display, and became the favorite for the Kentucky Derby at Louisville a week from today as well as the season's leading 3-year-old.

Sande is scheduled to ride the Belair entry in the Derby, but whether Mr. Woodward would send the colt to Louisville or keep him in the East for the Belmont and other big stakes later remained a question.

ALL MAIL CONTRACTS ON EIGHT-HOUR BASIS

Ottawa, May 10.—Protest against the low salaries paid to postal workers was renewed in the House of Commons last night. Dr. Murray Maclaren (Conservative, St. John-Albert) believed the letter-carriers were entitled to higher salaries. He paid tribute to the work of these men, and said that it was only justice that the Government and the Postmaster-General should take action to bring about increases. Hon. Peter J. Veniot, Postmaster-General, said, with respect to the complaint voiced by Robert H. McGregor (Conservative, York South) several days ago in connection with the low wages paid to postal workers by mail contractors in Toronto, the Minister said that in future all contracts would contain the eight-hour day clause, and one providing for minimum rates paid in that district for that particular class of work.

3RD JUNE RACES ARE REPEATED

So successful was the programme of events held on the morning of June 3rd, last year that the Association is resolved to repeat them and within the course of a few days the entry forms will be mailed out as well as being available to prospective local entrants. Last year's events composed of a medley relay race with the route divided as follows, 1-2 mile, mile, 2 mile, 1 mile and five mile, created no small interest both in this city and Trenton. The Waitell Hardware Trophy donated for this event was won by the C.O.E. team of Petrboro but this year the local runners claim they will bring the Big Mug back to the home city. The handicap bicycle race will give the local cyclists a real incentive to get out and push her along which they will sure need to do in order to compete successfully against the many opposition they are certain to encounter in this event.

FINE PROSPECTS FOR BALL LOOP

Youngsters Will Play Hard Ball on Corner Lots This Year

Prospects are more than bright that the boys between the ages of 12 and 20 will have their chance at playing hard ball this year, and the aspirants who have signed the lists which are to be returned to Allan Meagher or Walter Gerow Sr., today have done their part to help out the plan. It is now understood that the Ki-Y will operate these leagues and the Belleville Recreation Athletic Association Officials who are in hearty accord with the plan will be returned as requested in order that everything will be in readiness for the organization meeting. It has certainly been a good move and those who have advocated the change for the Junior players are more than pleased with the prospects of success.

Y.M.C.A. FOSTER SPORT EVENTS

Two Races Will Be Staged on Morning of May 26th

The local Association will help in the observation of Patriot Day by staging two races for the morning of May 26th. Both of these events were formally run off on Thanksgiving Day but from now on will be a part of whatever programme the Y promotes for its Victoria Day activities. The first of the events to take place at 10 a.m. will be the inter-public school relay race in which teams of six runners from each school in the city as well as from the Ontario School of the Deaf will be pitted against each other. Both this event as well as the three mile open run will take place on the track at the Fair Grounds unless weather conditions and the state of the track do not permit in which event they will take place as road races over the old Hill three mile circuit. In the relay race each participant will journey once around the exhibition grounds track, each runner doing a half mile. As the speedsters will pass the baton at the grand stand each round, this will make the event all the more interesting to follow. On the last two occasions this race has taken place it has been won by a team from the School for the Deaf and Johnny O'Gorman, member of this year's team, declares that his boys will add their third name plate to the Deacon Shirt Co. trophy.

The three mile open run in all probability see all the principal middle distance runners of both the city and district in action. Some of these boys have already put in a couple weeks on their training programme and when the starter gives the command to "take your marks" they should be in good condition for the event. Earl Barber, the first runner of the Y's Men's Club, will most likely enter this race for the first time in several years. Other runners to take part will no doubt be Bert Girling, winner of the Stroud Trophy on the Fair Grounds track last year, Charlie Murphy, Jack Carter along with some of the members of the Collegiate track team.

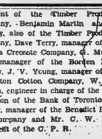
ity worked to the advantage of the company, as in the end it built trade. He believed that it such a policy were observed more generally it would make for industrial peace.



Sir Henry, in outlining the great strides made by the company in recent years, including the addition of equipment, stated that it was the company's aim to provide something of usefulness to the people of all sections of the country and to establish a part ership, believing in fair dealing.

Mr. Ralph Bonner, President of the Trenton Rotary Club, presided as chairman for the first part of the evening, while Mayor Fraser acted as Chairman of the latter part. Solos were rendered during the course of the banquet by J. Arnold Thompson, James McLaughlin, Charles Allore, Al Stillman and Sandy Burrows, with Leo Riggs of Belleville and Harry Hurst of Trenton playing the accompaniments.

In introducing the speaker, Mayor Fraser explained how the meeting came to be called, explaining that it was first broached as a Rotary meeting, but later broadened into a Trenton Industrial Night. He lauded Sir Henry Thornton as the man who has done the most to consolidate the integral parts of Canada by making the great Canadian National Railways a paying proposition, and after Sir Henry's speech, introduced the following captains of Trenton industry, who all spoke briefly: F. W. Warner, president of the Timber Products Company, Benjamin Martin and J. McLurg, also of the Timber Products Company, Dave Terry, manager of the Canada Creosote Company, G. Munkwitz, manager of the Borden Milk factory, J. V. Young, manager of the Hamilton Cotton Company, W. B. Wilson, engineer in charge of the construction of the Bank of Toronto, M. Parker, manager of the Beradict Procter Company and Mr. C. W. Lott, president of the C. P. R.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARTHA McWILLIAMS

Madoc, May 10—Following an illness of several months, Martha, widow of the late Charles Bidwell McWilliams, passed away at her residence on Madoc Street, at 12.30 a.m. on Monday, in her 80th year.

Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Conley of Hawdon Township.

She was the mother of seven children, all of whom are living. They are Walter of Rochester, Harry of Sesterboro, Mrs. George Shaver of Rochester, Mrs. Arthur Rapleton of Marmora, Mrs. Roy Snell of Toronto and Misses Susan and Hellen at home. She is also survived by one sister Mrs. J. Faulkner of Toronto.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, service at St. Paul's Church Rev. A. B. Caldwell officiating. Interment in the Mariatown Protestant Cemetery.

The sympathy of many friends is extended in the sorrowing relatives.

LATE DOUGLAS MARSHALL

J. Douglas Marshall, who so suddenly passed away in Trenton after a slight operation, was laid to rest in Belleville cemetery yesterday afternoon. Many gathered at St. Andrew's Church where the funeral service was held and among them were members of the elder boys' department of the Y.M.C.A.; boys of St. Andrew's Sunday School and drug apprentices in the city besides many intimate and personal friends of the family. Rev. T. A. Seymour conducted the service and paid a sterling tribute to the deceased. "In the passing of one, who has passed the three score the earthly career has been well rounded out," said Rev. Mr. Seymour, "but these circumstances for which we are gathered are different and tragic. Here was a boy gifted with an unique mental equipment and was dedicated for higher service. His gentlemanly bearing and winsome personality made him a friend to all and in boys' work he was an outstanding Christian type. Indeed he looked on the serious business of life and was equipping himself for the struggle when Christ took him home." Rev. Mr. Seymour drew from the early passing the lesson that God in His faithful wisdom had need of this young man in other realms and took him home to fill that purpose for which he was sent."

At the conclusion of the service the casket was opened and all were privileged to look for the last time on the face of the departed. The bier was heaped high with floral tributes testifying in a small measure the esteem in which the deceased was held. The bearers were Jack Marshall brother; Basil Marshall, brother; Charles Stocking, Wesbasmuster; T. W. Dwight, Toronto; J. P. MacGregor, Toronto, and S. G. Brown, Colborne.

MARJORIE MATTIS

Miss Marjorie Mattis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Enoch H. Mattis of East Moira street, passed away in Peterboro yesterday. The deceased was seventeen years of age and the remain will arrive this afternoon in Belleville. She is survived by four sisters and one brother, Mrs. J. Pratch Rochester, Gladys, Thelma, Mildred, Reginald, all at home. The funeral will take place on Monday.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Dear me how long will this state of affairs go on I wonder? All the rest of the summer months I suppose. The reception we are getting lately, local is the subject under discussion in each and of you came in late.

Now we're getting some action at last during the Amos 'n' Andy period and the results back the time has slowed up but we still couldn't wish for more complications. Andy is in just about as deep as it is possible for a human to get and I'm neither he nor any body else knows how he's going to get out on terra firma again.

Will Rogers with his American humorist is going to say a few well chosen words tomorrow night during the broadcast of over WABC at 6 p.m. EST. His message is coming right from Hollywood to us. He tells us all he knows about the movies and as a result it should be interesting told in true Will Rogers style.

Freddie Rich's orchestra will also be heard in musical interludes. Assisted by the chorus and Mr. Alley tenor who will be heard singing in Mr. Rich's special arrangement of "The Chant of the Jungle."

Not long now before the Old Timers we see before us for to-night's entertainment the announcement that the Happy Gang is scheduled for 7 EST and that means fun for all. Philip Carlin and Marcella Shields are headliners in this program WJZ.

Later on from WJZ the Dutch Master will be heard with a new and snappy collection of jokes by their end men. Paul Dumont and Al Bernard. New songs by Carson Robinson and new tricks on his banjo so taken altogether everything points to a large evening.

Phil Spitalny in another dinner pro gram tonight at 6:30 EST over WEAF and later same station at 7.30 the Del Monte program. Of course we must remember S. A. Rorie and his Lucky Strike orchestra at n'ne EST, WEAF.

Lannie Ross as Troubadour of the Air can't something to tell us to night during his broadcast over WEAF at ten EST. Rudy Vallee at eleven same station too.

Wrecked from Asthma. Strength of body and vigor of mind are inestimably impaired by the visitations of asthma. Who can live under the dread of recurring attacks and keep body and mind at their full efficiency? Dr. J. D. Kelloog's Asthma Remedy disciplines the cloud by removing the cause. It does relieve. It does restore the sufferer to normal bodily trim and mental happiness. J.A.

FRANKFORD MAN HALE AND HEARTY AT 100TH MARK

John Bruyea Hopes to Celebrate Many More Birthdays

Special By Staff Reporter

Frankford May 10.—Hale and hearty despite the wear and tear of over one hundred years which have passed over his head, John Bruyea, one of the oldest pioneer residents of Hastings County expects to see several more winters before he passes on, he informed the Ontario Intelligencer yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bruyea, who was born on Preston Hill, a few miles from Wooler on October 1st 6th, 1830, visits back and forth between the home of his two daughters, Mrs. Ida Loren of Frankford and Mrs. Alex Orrill of Trenton, and is a familiar figure on the streets of both towns, where he is well known, and where he has hosts of friends.

Asked as to what he attributed his long life to, the hearty headed centenarian replied that "only the Good Man above us can answer that question. He gave me good health, long life and a measure of prosperity. I have always worked hard, both on the farm and in the shanties in the winter, and today my health is so good that I can eat as well as many men forty years younger."

Mr. Bruyea, although his memory has failed him on certain points, remembers well the time when Frankford and Trenton were composed of only a few odd houses, clustered for the most part around the sawmills. When he was born in 1829, his father's farm was absolutely surrounded by dense forest, and the trail into it from the outside was blazed on the trunks of the trees. His parents came to Preston Hill from Montreal, and their parents had reached this country about two hundred years ago from France.

Mr. Bruyea married while quite young, and six children blessed the union. Of these, five are still living, although Mrs. Bruyea died about seven years ago at the ripe old age of eighty-four years. The daughters are Mrs. Lyons, of Frankford, Mrs. Orrill of Trenton, and the sons are William and Joseph of Trenton and John of Rochester, N.Y. One son, Herbert, died some thirty years ago.

The aged gentleman, who still walks stiffly erect, declared that if he was sure the pilot was a careful one, he would like to go for an airplane ride. "I once had a chance to do it a few years ago, but I didn't like the look of the pilot so I changed my mind," he declared. "I can take a drink or a smoke, or I can leave them alone, they don't bother me at all," was the proud boast of this sturdy pioneer who later stated that he had never had a day's illness in his life.

This one hundred year young gentleman is much different from the picture brought to mind by mention of a person aged one hundred years. He is clean shaven on the cheeks, but wears a small mustache and goatee. His hearing is not quite as good as formerly, but he can still hear the ordinary conversation, and his eyesight is perfect. Never having had the opportunity to go to school as a child, Mr. Bruyea cannot read or write, but his knowledge of current affairs in a man his age is astounding. He walks to church almost every Sunday, and only very bad weather keeps him away. All in all, it is more than likely that he will live to reach an even riper old age than his former friend, John Anderson, of Anderson's Island in the Trent River, who passed away last year at the age of one hundred and five years.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

"Oh, Mama, how pretty the moon is tonight;
'Twas never so lovely before,
With its two little horns, so sharp and so bright—
I hope they don't grow any more!
If I were up there with you and my friends
We'd rock in it nicely, you see;
We'd sit in the middle and hang on to both ends,
And what a nice cradle 'twould be!

We'd call to the stars to get out of our way
Or else we would rock on their toes,
And there we would sit till the dawn of the day
And see where the pretty moon goes.
Oh, there we would rock in the beautiful skies,
And through the bright clouds we would roam;
We'd see the sun set, and see the sun rise
And on the next rainbow come home."

Soon we made our way into the cedars and found our boat just as we had left it. Then we carried the decoys back to the lake shore again, and we put them down on the sand, Ted suggested we carry old driftwood and build our "blind" ready for the morning's hunt. Even with this we weren't satisfied, but we also waded out in the shallow water, threw out our decoys, and had the pleasure of seeing the sinking moon glitter over the ripples waves of beautiful Lake Erie on to the sides of our newly-painted decoys. Then we started back into the cedars.

In those days there were about 20 acres of this red-cedar jungle and in some places one could not see a man over twenty-five feet away. The camping place we selected was about twenty feet in diameter, partly surrounded on three sides with a bank of sand fully six feet high, heavily capped with cedars. Here we gathered dry twigs and built a fire. Then we dragged the boat over and turned it on its side, thus filling the gap and making almost a complete circle around the fire. After gathering arm full after armful of wood for our night's fuel and cutting lots of cedar boughs for our bed, we sat down to rest. The sand was dry, and as the night was still, a very little fire kept us quite comfortable. Then we pulled off our cowhide tops and set them back on the opposite side of our fire. They made great reflectors, mine especially, for although I was only sixteen years old, most of my growth had gone into foundation.

Ted allowed his boots were French kip; I said mine were cowhide. This caused brother to pick at his sprouting moustache as he remarked, "Jack, to look at them from here, one would think they were oxen' fathers' hides."

As I got up and dropped another stick or two on our fire, Ted spoke up quite cheerfully, "Jack, let me tell you just what this made me think of. You know the other night when I was down at that country dance, I ran across one of the sweetest French dolls it has ever been my pleasure to meet. She was a real little bird of a life, and the more I danced with her the more I wanted to, and really I began to think I held a hand bigger than a foot. Finally as we were standing on the corner, waiting our us turn to swing, she nudged me and as I leaned over she whispered in my ear, 'Mr Miner, don't you think if you were to trade your cowhide boots off for a pair of light shoes it would be easier on this man's white ash floor?'

About the next suggestion was to eat our lunch so as not to be bothered with it in the morning. This piece of work was eagerly accomplished, only the programme was altogether too short at the one end, as I could almost feel the pieces of dead hog and bunks of bread strike the log I was sitting on. However we were compelled to be satisfied.

As we sat there watching the sparks disappear into the darkness we could hear the lonely hoot of the owl in the distance; and the swish-sh, swish-sh-sh-sh, of the small waves on the lake a few rods to the south of us and from the slew to the north came the faint creak-, cheark-k-k, of the little spring frogs, as much as to say, "Go to sleep, Go to sleep." All at once Ted's voice rang out, "Wake up, Jack!" and really our surroundings were so completely covered in with Nature she had closed my eyes and I did not know it. Shortly the wind started moaning through the cedars, and we imagined we could feel a change in the atmosphere, and brother suggested we crawl in under our boat and have a sleep. So we straightened the soft cedar boughs around as best we could on the dry sand, crawled in, letting the boat down over us. We wrapped ourselves around each other very close by. The next I knew I was lying on my side with brother's warm arms around me, but my eyes were open and I imagined I could see light under the boat; so I raised it up. Ted spoke first, "Jack, look at the snow!" And really the night almost caused one to doubt his own eyes, for everything was hanging with snow; the only bare spot was the small pile of smouldering ashes; those cowhide boots were simply snowed full. To make bad matters worse the wind was in the north and it was still snowing.

Well, we knocked it out of our boots the best we could and put them on. While I was fixing and blowing smoke in my eyes out of the fire, trying to get it started, Ted knocked the snow off his gun and went to see if the decoys were all right, and before I got the blaze going I heard a "bang!" I only thought he was trying to dry his gun out, but presently I heard "Bang" again. Then I knocked the snow off my shooting outfit and make fresh jracks toward him. I found him quite excited. "Jack, hurry! The ducks are coming by the thousands!" There were about fifty or more in the decoys when I came. "Look! Here they come again! Get in the 'blind' and keep your red head down"! and he continued pricking dry powder in the tube of his gun with a pin. As about twenty-five ducks hovered to alight we pose up and lit into them. That is, he did, and down came three; but my old gun just went "Snap! Snap!"

Ted sprang to his feet and said, "Prick some dry powder in the tube of your gun while I go and get the boat," and just as I was in the middle of this operation brother shouted from the edge of the cedars, "Jack, get ready; here they come again." So I slipped a cap on each tube, but none too quickly, for the ducks were upon me. "Snap! Bang!" and down came a big red-headed drake. Brother fairly ran with the boat on his shoulders, a paddle in one hand; and then the real fun began, for it wasn't a case of looking for ducks, but how fast could we load those old soft-coal burners and get the fuse started. Although some of the decoys were half covered with snow, yet the ducks would alight right among them while we were standing up loading our guns; really the snowy air seemed full of them, and we had the pleasure of seeing five tumble out of one flock.

Soon our empty powder horns compelled us to stop shooting; but this did not stop the sport by any means, for there we lay low in our "blind" and watched and studied those migrating birds, as flock after flock settled down among our decoys, until it firmly believe there were over two hundred blue-bills, canvas-backs, redheads, golden-eyes, ruddies and so forth within gunshot of our hiding place.

But like lots of other good times it had to come to a close and about eight o'clock the storm ceased, it cleared off and the ducks got wise and scarce.

So we picked up the decoys and hid them in the dry sand, carried our boat to its hiding place, and about 10 a. m. we shouldered our thirty-seven ducks and started for home.

The snow was now nearly all melted on the road, leaving the clay so sticky that we decided to go home through the woods and fields. But our heavy load of ducks and the spongy fields made our travelling real hard work, and our progress was of the very slowest character. The farther we went, the slower our gait, for our stream was gradually running down. And how we thought of the basket of grub dear mother wanted us to take. Finally we crossed the last road and the next house to become visible was our own. How high some of those old rail fences did seem, and how my stomach did gnaw for just one bite of food! Talk about Esau selling his birthright for a plate of porridge; really there was such an aching void in me I would willingly have given my birthright, or birthwrong, for just one handful of corn-mush and pork-grease.

As we neared the house mother came to meet us. Glancing over her glasses, she said, "Are you hungry, boys? Let me carry some of your ducks. How many did you get? Aren't they beauties! Now sit down, boys, and I will have your lunch ready in a few minutes." Just then the old clock said "Three." Here we had been nearly five hours coming that many miles.

But just the same, this was a real outing for your life, and as I went to bed I can remember mother and my younger sisters starting to pick ducks. When I descended the old-fashioned stairway again it was Sunday.

OPEN COURT FOR DIVORCE CASES

Toronto, May 9.—That Ontario divorce courts, after their institution as part of the machinery of justice in the province, will be held in "camera" is highly improbable, according to eminent lawyers who last night expressed approval of the Woodsworth Act passed by the Parliament.

Ontario courts, it is pointed out, have a unique record of having avoided closed hearings. The public and press have seldom been excluded from hearings in any of the sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario and in those instances only when it was felt by the trial judge that publication of evidence was prejudicial to public morals.

The Ontario act proposes legislation for Ontario similar to that granted a few years ago to Manitoba and the western provinces. If the bill is ratified by the Senate and not amended and sent back to Parliament, the problem of its administration will rest with Ontario.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE LOVE PILOT

by

Jessie DeLoria

CopRight, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc

Seldom does a girl fall in love with the sort of man she has pictured as her ideal but it was Joyce Kittery's romantic fate to do so.

She lay on a huge rock and mused over the miracle of it. Below her was a boring path which wandered cheerily along the lake, but today she preferred the moss-covered rock. She smiled faintly as she thought of her lady mother retreating out the back door of the camp as her mother's friends entered the front. Imagine spending a glorious afternoon in the mountains playing bridge when it was ever so much nicer to be here and think about well, yes—Carl.

As yet he was her secret. Dad would regard him as a disease because he was a poet; mother would snicker on him as legitimate entertainment for her friends and would inveigle him into reading his poems some afternoon. Carl would hate that. Joyce could picture him standing there, straight and tall, his feet apart, his blond head thrown back, and the magic words ringing until she felt herself thrill.

Joyce had known this thrilling man only a few days. They had been meeting in the woods for rambles which were delicious to recall. Never had a man talked of the things he did, the way he did, for Carl knew much about the ways of life and with an amazing simplicity had revealed many curious things to her. She could listen to him forever—and hoped to. They both knew, and they accepted their love as something there, something that needed no words, no frantic protestations.

Coming gracefully down the path was a woman who instantly attracted Joyce's attention and this interest was not unusual for the woman's splendid carriage, her vitality and striking individuality would rarely pass unnoticed.

Her age was a catch question; her beauty dangerously compelling for it possessed the deadly combination of character and perfection of feature. She was dressed in a sheer yellow dress with the most subtle hints of flame. Over her arm was a light sweater which she spread on the pine needles and sat down facing the lake. Her poise was perfect.

Immediately Joyce began imagining a plot. This, after her resolution never to write another word since she already had enough rejection slips to paper a room; her stories had come back to her from the editors, with the unerring accuracy of homing pigeons. But here was a potential tale that could not be resisted and Joyce began speculating about a lover who would come across the lake right to the very feet of this gorgeous creature. The details she would work out later, so far this woman waiting for an inevitable Him was enough.

Joyce's mind slipped gladly back to her own Carl while she lay idly on her back and watched the clouds which seemed to be getting heavier. It is rained she could not wait for Carl. She turned to watch the lake, which faithfully mirrored the changing temperament of the skies, and noticed it was getting darker while the clouds loosed most threatening. She scanned the path but there was no sign of Carl. In the middle of the lake there was a canoe in which a solitary paddler was making his way to shore. There was no danger yet, but—

Down the valley swept a roar of wind as if it had been suddenly released from a spring. The man in the canoe had better hurry. The sky grew darker and the wind whipped the waves with the mercilessness of a slave driver. The canoe came nearer and she discovered the paddler was Carl.—Carl who was coming to meet her. Joyce stood up now unconcerned and smiling for a man of his strength could easily swim that distance even if the canoe did tip.

Lightning rad a flaming sword across the lake. Joyce's smile faded and she scrambled down the rock, crossed the path and stood on the bank, anxiously waiting. There, the canoe had capsized!

"Carl! My God, he can't swim!" The anguished cry of the woman came to Joyce like a stab of pain.

Carl—and this woman! So this was the lover for whom the lady waited. This was her story becoming alive but it was all wrong; this was not the way she would have planned—it was beyond her control, finishing itself in a horrible manner. Was she going crazy? Stories didn't become real.

Her thoughts raced as she tore off her dress and shoes and jumped in the lake. The wind was menacing, the big waves were black, and Carl was out there, struggling. Odd that an athletic looking fellow like him could not swim. She would teach him, but no, there would be no more eager planning of things to do with Carl.

She was a fool to think he could care for her. How could she have been so sure? He couldn't, he couldn't pretend. But any man would be helpless with that woman. Had Carl deliberately arranged that the two should meet before he came? Was that his way of telling her? He's gone down again! She would save him, she must. Have him—for someone else.

Exhausted, Joyce reached the shore and lay gasping for breath. The scathings of her self-tortured her not at all. Carl was all right now. Nothing mattered anymore. Presently she would get her dress and go home. She felt the first big drops of the rain.

The woman knelt above her. "My dear, my dear," she cried. Joyce looked up. "You've saved him, you brave thing! You saved my Carl." Joyce closed her eyes again but the woman's vibrant voice went on: "Are you all right? You saved him—my son. You appeared from nowhere, flashing by me. I was waiting to meet you."

"Girl Unafraid" By Gladys Johnson

Ken's breakdown was more severe than any of them had realized on that first day. Had he stayed in the city—had he been held in a sanitarium against his wishes, he would have rebelled and, the results would have been disastrous. But in the quiet, big quiet, and with Ardeth's continuous presence, he was submissive and content. Nature supplied her own remedy in the form of deep, exhaustive sleep.

To Ardeth, time went on in an undisturbed dream. Two days of peace, filled with sunshine and the smell of the pines. Reality could not reach her. Despite the abrupt change, it seemed strangely natural to be here.

There were times when she found her hand leaping as she thought of the shop, but they were infrequent. Hang to imagine the teeming city, the rush—of what humans up there in the quiet mountains.

Two days—filled with the trees; with the small tasks of the household. Ken did not gather the true meaning of the situation. Most of the time he slept. When he did after eating he drowsed off again. His weary mind and body were drinking up rest, as a sponge drinks water.

Mary Is Upset

Mid-afternoon of the third day the silence was broken by the sound of a motor. Tom drove up before the cabin and beside him was Mary Eastwood.

Black eyes smoldering with excitement, Mary stood beside Ardeth on the porch. Tom had gone in to see Ken, and Mary fired the opening shot.

"Ardeth, my darling child, what craziness is this? To stay here like this——"

"I know it's not conventional, but sometimes conventions must be thrust aside, Mary dear." Ardeth's tranquil gaze met Mary's steadily.

"Conventions—oh, rubbish!" Mary wrung her hands in her earnestness. "It isn't that I care! Nor Fred. Or even dear old Tom, although I think he's really heartbroken. But—you can't slap the world in the face, Ardeth. What about when you go back?"

Ardeth shrugged. She had leaned back against the rough sapling which formed the rail of the porch and her eyes went up to a tall pine which seemed fringed with silver in the clear light.

"Time enough to take that up when I have to, Mary. It was a case of deciding quickly. I couldn't let Cecile get Ken—even if she wanted him. He needed me. I listened to the world's opinion, Mary, and look what it did—nearly killed Ken. Now he's mine. He is weak and sick, and I'm going to see that he gets well. I'll never leave him again. I don't care what happens."

"But, darling, it will only end in a scandal! Cecile is furious. And she's beastly self-righteous. She'll hang on to Ken legally now. Just for spite. Don't you see, you're playing right into her hands?"

"The girl continued to regard the pine with a faint smile. "Cecile doesn't matter any more, Mary."

Like a Man Drugged

"Not here, maybe. But later. You can't spend all your days in a mountain cabin. And you're not the sort of woman who can get away with this sort of thing, Ardeth. Not the flaunting, adventuress type. You're too sensitive. Life can hurt you."

"Life has hurt me." Ardeth's eyes had come back to regard her steadily. "And Ken needs me."

"What does Ken say? What does he think?"

Her face was lovely with tenderness. "He doesn't think, Mary. He's like a man drugged. It just seems so blessedly right to him to have me around here that he accepts it as natural. Honestly, Mary, I think that another day of the strain would have been too much. He'll be all right but it's as weak as a baby."

Mary stared at her helplessly, suddenly finding that she had no arguments to advance. There was, as well, a serenity, an aura of quiet happiness which Mary had never before seen.

Fine and true, she seems, standing here in the sunlight. A sweet gravity, a thoughtfulness about her which was new—and more of the woman than the girl.

The older woman's filled and she put her arms about Ardeth.

"Oh, my dear, if I could only make things come right for the two of you. Damn Cecile and her selfishness! I'll have to tell you—I went to her as soon as Tom told me. I pleaded with her—I begged her to do the decent thing and set Ken free. You see he hasn't a chance now—she'd bring counter-suit to any complaint. The woman's a dog-in-the-manger! She sneered at me. Talked a lot of noble stuff which was as false as her own smile. I could have killed her."

Again Mary was struck by the complete indifference of the girl's attitude.

"Cecile can't make it right or wrong, my being here," she said earnestly. "Ken needs me. That's all that counts with me. Cecile is responsible for—for him lying in there like that —" She pointed back to the house. "This sickness of his goes back to that night after the baby's death, when he came to me—Cecile hurt something fine and good in Ken's very soul that time, Mary. It's as if—as if she'd stabbed his soul and it had been slowly bleeding to death all this time. I suppose that sounds melodramatic but it shows what I mean. And she'll never get a chance to hurt him again. He's mine."

"Beautiful but crazy!" Mary raged to Tom when they had left and were driving down the grade in the quiet evening light. "But what can I do? She's of age—and in her right mind, though she doesn't act it!" After a moment of silence she burst out vigorously. "And moreover, she's dead right! I'd do the same thing if it were Fred lying there in Ken Gleason's place."

NEARLY A BILLION CIGARETTES SMUGGLED ACROSS THE BORDER BY CANADIAN VISITORS TO U.S.

Many Methods Used to Escape Dominion Excise Tobacco Tax

Windsor, May 10—Carried loosely in overcoat, and suit coat pockets, the vast majority of cigarettes smoked by residents of the Border Cities, pass customs officers every day, without any duty being charged. There are several reasons, the chief one being an advantage of economy.

While it is true that cigarettes are brought into Canada from United States for sale purposes, residents who live but a short ferry ride from Detroit, do not have to expend on "fag" bootlegers.

When consideration is given the fact that Detroit and Canadian Border communities are international to a strong degree, the ease with which American smokes enter at this point can easily be perceived. Thousands of Borderites live in Windsor and work in Detroit. Quite a large number of American citizens live on this side of the Border in order to have finn homes, near at hand to the business section of this large American city. Plan riferfront homes in the Border Cities are much closer to down town Detroit than many Detroit residential districts.

Every few minutes, ferry boats cross and recross the river at Windsor and Walkerville, filled to capacity in the rush hours. All are in a hurry to get to their jobs or their homes, depending on the direction they are travelling. All could not be stopped and searched, for commuting would indeed become a lengthy task.

Many hundreds of automobiles, cross and recross the Ambassador Bridge, completed last year.

Men living in the Border Cities and working in Detroit, smoke cigarettes with the blue excise stamp, all day long. There is no need for them to buy, more than a package at a time, and they have American cigarettes in their pockets regardless of whether they are entering or leaving Detroit.

Men, and of course, also girls, working and living in the Border Cities, take advantage of the low-price on American fags.

Residents of inland Canadian cities, who virtuously enter nearby tobacco shops to purchase cigarettes with the gray seal, might hold up their hands in holy horror at the idea of Canadians going to and returning from United States, merely to purchase cigarettes. But there is a reason.

A package of 20 cigarettes of average price, sells for 25c in Windsor or Toronto. After a ferry boat ride, which costs a nickel, two packages or 40 cigarettes, can be purchased for the same money. And that's far from all of it.

American cigarettes, entering the Dominion legally carry with them a heavy customs tax. Two packages, or 40 cigarettes, can be purchased in the ferry waiting station at Detroit for 32c. One package bought at the Windsor waiting station, costs 45c. Figure it out for yourself.

Tobacco growers of Canada, protest against the excise tax, which they say must be blamed for the wide difference in prices.

The approximate excise charge on Canadian cigarettes is $6 for three thousand, or under 1,000. Over three thousand, the charge is $11 per thousand. When this is figured out in packages of 20, it is easy to see how American producers, with a small excise tax, can sell cigarettes at prices so much lower than Canadian manufacturers.

Makers of Canadian cigarettes are granted considerable protection against American cigarettes, legally imported. A specific duty of $4.10 per pound is charged with an ad valorum duty of 25 per cent added.

Each package of American cigarettes in the usual size of 20, weighs an ounce, or 16 packages to the pound. The average resident of Border communities, smokes eight packages a week—or half a pound. It is also, wonder, human nature being what it is, that so many forget to declare the small packets, buried in large pockets, when passing through the immigration and customs wickets?

Estimates of the number of American cigarettes, smuggled into Canada each year, range from 600,000,000 to 1,000,000,000.

WHY PRICE OF COPPER BROKE

Buying Period Comes in May, Say the Authorities

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

TORONTO—This week's break in the price of copper from 18c to 16½ a pound is the most important event of the moment in the business world. A drop in price had been looked for for several months although many of the leading copper authorities declared it would not be necessary. Only two weeks ago a writer in Financial Times, London, stated that there was no reason to think that copper would decline in price in the near future and only last week the chairman of the Board of the American Smelting and Refining Company issued an optimistic statement on the situation.

Copper has been at 18c a pound for nearly a year. It was pegged there by the American Export Association. The reduction in price was made necessary by the piling up of unsold copper stocks even in the face of drastic cuts in production by all the leading American Copper companies. Last month production of refined copper in North and South America amounted to approximately 127,000 tons compared with 163,500 tons in March 1929. But this decline of approximately 36,000 tons in production was more than offset by the decline in shipments. Shipments of refined copper in March this year in North and South America were 104,197 tons compared with 166,000 tons in March, 1929, a decrease of over 61,000 tons. Stocks of refined copper on hand in the same territory on April first amounted to 256,000 tons compared with 52,000 tons on April first, 1929. These figures alone are enough to show why the price of copper came down. Consumers would not buy it at 18c. The extent of the reduction came as something of a surprise, and even further recessions are being talked of. Even optimism has been expressed, however, that levels below 16 cents are not to be denied as too many of the high-cost producers, which included some of the most important sources of the metal, would be forced to suspend operations, producing a famine in copper that would eventually prove a hardship to ultimate consumers. It is thought the present price cut is something of a gesture to induce buying, and that the price will shade upward as soon as refined and blister stocks are reduced to normal proportions.

ONCE FED DOGS ON CHICKEN, NOW IN POORHOUSE

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

ST. JOHN, N.B.—A dog's life is not so tough as the name implies. John Mitchell, as he gazes ruefully out of the St. John, N.B., County Municipal Home, at East St. John, admits that.

County authorities, in response to suggestions from friends of Mitchell found him living in filth and poverty. Not a particle of food in a tumble down shack, he was occupying. And, the boards being used as fuel. He was rushed to the municipal home, or poorhouse, to use the original title, there to remain for the balance of his life.

It is only a few years ago, that Mitchell fed his dogs nothing but the best of chickens, not even fowl. He had a kennel of the best bred spaniels, setters and pointers-dogs that captured prizes galore in kennel club shows held in St. John, Halifax, London, Eng., Montreal. Each week, he stocked up on the chickens, paying the best market prices for the birds. At every meal, the dogs had chicken on the menu.

Mitchell's father, left the son several houses besides cash. John was manager of a foundry concern, and also head of a night school. By some, he was claimed as the champion penman of the Maritime Provinces. His penmanship was indeed, superb.

No less than nine return voyages did John make across the Atlantic to England, on buying and selling trips for his firm. On most of these he was accompanied by all least one of his prize dogs. The balance were left in the charge of a caretaker. John never married, and he doted on the dogs as superior in companionship to human beings.

Some years ago, John Mitchell claimed the title of the Beau Brummel of St. John. He had always at least 15 good suits, besides numerous top coats and overcoats, hundreds of ties, hats, etc. Always, he made three changes of attire. At noon, before lunch, in the late afternoon, before dinner, later at night for the theatre.

When forced out of his squalid shack, the only clothes he had were those he had on. He was absolutely penniless, with the mortgages seizing the properties.

WESTERN EDITOR IS RECIPIENT OF LATE PORTRAIT

J. H. Woods, Managing Director Calgary Herald is Honored

Toronto, Ont., May 10—Notable feature of the Canadian Daily Publishers annual dinner here recently was the presentation of his portrait to J. H. Woods, Editor and Managing Director of the Calgary Herald, by his fellow members of The Canadian Press in appreciation of his recently concluded four-year term as president. The portrait is from the brush of Kenneth Forbes, the Toronto artist, and is an exceedingly good likeness of the well known Canadian newspaper man and publicist.

John Scott, of the Toronto Mail and Empire, who succeeded Mr. Woods in office a year ago, in making the presentation referred to the important contribution Mr. Woods had made to co-operative news gathering in Canada being associated with the movement as far back as 1907 as a charter member of the Western Associated Press, then founded in Winnipeg, and active through the intervening years in the establishment and advancement of the present nation-wide organization.

Mr. Woods in reply gave an interesting account of some of the early struggles and spoke of the national value of the Canadian Press in bringing to daily newspaper readers in all parts of the country a comprehensive news picture of what was going on elsewhere.

The occasion gained interest from the fact Mr. Woods shortly sails for London in a dual capacity, as President of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce to attend the Empire gathering of these bodies next month, while in June as chairman of the Canadian Section of the Empire Press Union he takes a leading part in the quadrennial meeting of the Imperial Press Conference. Mr. Woods addressed the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Washington recently.

SYNTHETIC CHICKEN NOURISHES CHINESE

Windsor, Ont., May 10—An engaging combination of East and West is Dr. Teyhi Hsieh, managing director of the Chinese Treks Bureau, at Boston, Mass., and representative of the National Chung Hwa News Association of Chungwei here recently was this city. Dr. Hsieh is a Rotarian and a Shriner and had a meeting in Windsor with J. A. Caulder of Toronto, vice-chairman of the international service committee of Rotary International.

At breakfast here Dr. Hsieh produced his own brand of tea which he imports at a cost of $16.00 a pound. He quietly declares he drinks about 45 cups a day and has not partaken of cold water for 18 years. He also produced a small bottle of white powder from his waistcoat pocket. Placing about a half-teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, and adding a little salt, he passed it around to the little group who were at the table with him. Although it did not seem to increase the fluidity of water his companions were delighted to find that it had all the flavor of the finest chicken broth. The doctor explained that it is synthetic but quite as nourishing as real chicken broth. "Chinese science is older than what we call civilization," he said drily when someone commented on the wonders of science.

The news agency which Dr. Hsieh represents has recently conducted successful experiments in the transmission of news in the Chinese language by means of television. In this way it plans to overcome the difficulty in transmitting the Chinese language by wire. The characters are photographed and transmitted throughout the entire chain of newspapers served.

In 1874 a law was passed in France ordering the manufacturers of handkerchiefs to make them square.

21 Great Performers built by McLaughlin-Buick

WITH McLaughlin-Buick offering 15 and Marquette 6 body types . . . there are now no less than 21 great performers built by McLaughlin-Buick.

How truly great they are in every phase of performance is indicated by the fact that far more McLaughlin-Buicks are bought than any other fine car . . . and that McLaughlin-Buick's exceptional qualities of pick-up, power and smoothness are reproduced in Marquette . . . stamping it definitely as the greatest performer in its moderate price field. This claim you are invited to prove to your own satisfaction.

Longer, lower bodies, automatic radiator shutters, sturdier frame, improved clutch and gear shift mechanism, centralized lubrication and non-glare windshield combine with many other advantages to give greater comfort and safety to the three series of McLaughlin-Buicks. And Marquette, possessing an engine with the largest piston displacement in its field, is a striking example of the supreme value inherent in McLaughlin-Buick craftsmanship and design.

See McLaughlin-Buick and Marquette. Take the wheel and drive them on any road. Then see G.M.A.C., General Motors' own deferred payment plan, to purchase the model you choose.

Marquette and McLaughlin-Buick models range in price from $1245 to $1760, at factory, Oshawa, Ontario.

MORMONISM SPREADING RAPIDLY THROUGHOUT WHOLE OF CANADA ERECT MANY CHURCHES, MISSIONS

Observed "100 Years of Mormonism" on April 6th this Year

MORE THAN 700,000

BY FRANK STEELE,
(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer

Toronto, May 10—On April 6, 1930, the centennial of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints, was observed in a chain of services literally encircling the globe. The new Mormon denomination has extended its influence to every continent and to the islands of the seas, and is today an international church. The centennial epistle of Herbert J. Grant, seventh president of the church and the first born in Utah, was read in a score or more different languages.

The Canadian stakes, three in number, located in Southern Alberta, and the churches and missions scattered across the Dominion from St. John to Vancouver, joined in the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of Mormonism although many of the church dignitaries made a pilgrimage to Salt Lake City to participate in the seven days' program in the great over-roofed tabernacle. There were 1000 performers and musicians depicted in 500 scenes the birth and growth of the church, an historical pageant staged on a scale never before attempted in Utah's capital. Sons and grandsons of Utah pioneers impersonated their sires while interesting relics of the remarkable exodus of the church across the plains in 1847, two year before the California gold rush, were used in the drama. Speakers recalled the stirring history of the Mormon church from the days of its infancy in the eastern states to the founding of a City on Zion on the shores of the "Dead Sea" of the New World.

One hundred "stakes" or major territorial divisions and more than a thousand wards as well as the many missions were represented at this notable gathering.

Exactly one hundred years ago on April 6, 1830, Joseph Smith, and a handful of his followers gathered in the little town of Fayette, New York state, and organized according to revelation, as claimed by the founder Joseph, and the laws of New York state the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints. The Salt Lake pageant on April 6 was doubtless far more colorful and spectacular than was that little service of organization but surely it fell far short of the impending drama of those deliberations a century ago. That scene, the other outstanding events of history, cannot be wholly re-enacted. It was unique in the religious history of America.

Humble Beginning

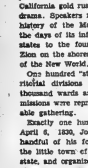
The growth of Mormonism from that humble beginning in the eastern states has been steady both in numbers of adherents and influence. Based upon a claim of gospel restoration through divine revelation and upon a foundation of visions and prophecy in similitude of the apostolic church, thousands at home and abroad were converted and were baptized. The Church, in its movements west to Ohio, Missouri and Illinois, and eventually to the Rocky Mountains, endured storms of persecution. Many suffered death for their testimony; while thousands suffered the loss of homes and farms during those trying years of testing for the struggling church. Among those who gave their lives was the prophet-founder, Joseph Smith. He and his brother Hyrum Smith, the presiding patriarch, were shot to death by a masked mob that stormed Carthage, Ill., jail, in 1844.

With the fearless young leader at the hour of his martyrdom, was one of the apostles, John Taylor. He was saved by his watch in his waistcoat pocket, for the bullet intended for him was turned from its path and he escaped uninjured, the Latterday saints say, providentially. For John Taylor became the third president of the Mormon church and in his selection for the seat of presidency Canada gave the church one of its ablest and most scholarly leaders. Trained for the ministry John Taylor was found in Toronto by some of the first missionaries sent out by the church in its years of comparative obscurity and with him a group of people eagerly waiting for a "restoration" of the primitive church. The whole congregation along with its pastor were converted and later joined the main body of the church in Nauvoo, Ill., a city of 20,000 founded by the Mormons in a bend in the Mississippi river. It was near Nauvoo that Joseph Smith was killed and where the Canadian apostle rose to prominence becoming a loyal supporter of Brigham Young for the presidency.

Mormonism was carried to Great Britain through contacts established on that early mission to Upper Canada and in the century that has passed the British Isles have strengthened the church by sending it hundreds of thousands of converts, not a few of whom have become outstanding men in the church. The present head of the British Mission is also unknown to Canadians, especially western Canadians. He is Dr. John W. Widtsoe, international known authority on irrigation. Dr. Widtsoe made a special report for the Alberta government a few years ago on the Lethbridge North irrigation project and his settlement and not being after completing that survey was called to mission work abroad. The church will direct the observance of the Centennial in Europe.

Enemies of the church thought that the slaying of its founder would spell the overthrow of the church. It proved the opposite. It lit the fires of religious zeal and under that remarkable and sagacious leader, Brigham Young, the church moved across the plains to a haven in the midst of the Rocky Mountains. The first party of pioneers landed in Salt Lake valley in 1847 and in that same year Brigham Young bringing his case down upon the parched soil of the valley exclaimed to his associates:

"This is the place! Here we will found a city and build a temple to the Most High God."



Young Was Right

These who had thought to push on to the more inviting fields of California saw their hopes blasted, for Brigham Young meant what he said—that was the Place! That resting place had been found, a thousand miles from the frontiers of civilization. The words of the far-sighted and practical president proved prophetic for the Mormons did found a city there and they did build a temple although that ornate edifice crowning the Temple Square in Salt Lake today, was forty years in the building. The rock laboriously quarried in the mountains was carted to Salt Lake by ox team. During its years in the West, the church has built a series of temples, one of them and certainly one of the most imposing and distinctive in design and finish, being at Cardston, Alta.

And this Alberta temple is the realization of the dreams and hopes of the founders of Mormon settlements in Southern Alberta. This expansion of the church northward dates back to 1877 when Charles O. Card and a group of associates encamped on the banks of Lee's Creek and in a prayer of dedication designated that area as a gathering place for the church. They thought to find a suitable region for settlement in Washington or British Columbia but the grassy plains of Alberta with their promise of vast agricultural wealth instantly caught the eye of that venerable and wise leader, President Card, and in Alberta the colonists remained. Then, too, the background of mountains with their canyons of surpassing loveliness doubtless reminded them of their Utah home. In any event, they stayed, established the town of Cardston and later many other thriving settlements.

Today the Mormon church is at work in the world, and is co-operating with other Christian faiths in the solving of problems of mutual concern. Its membership, encircling the globe, numbers more than 700,000 and millions are invested in temples, churches, mission homes, offices, hospitals, etc. It operates many schools, demonstration farms and plantations in the tropics and is in Big Business and makes no apology for it. The church holds that the material and spiritual cannot be separated, that they must be blended into everyday living. Hence, the church has given of its influences and funds—especially during the pioneer stages in the West in the establishment of industries, co-operative enterprises, and other business activities. In a word its first aim is to aid its people in a real, practical way and the efforts of the Mormon church in introducing irrigation in the west and later the beet sugar industry are examples of that policy.

President Heber J. Grant, the present head of church, is a man of unusual business judgments and skill and under his administration the church has prospered. The church has been a ready and liberal supporter of community enterprises and legitimate business prospects and it is no reflection on the church that in the main its investments have been profitable. However, this so-called materialism of President Grant and his associates in church leadership should not be misunderstood, for the accumulation of material wealth is underlaid with a Chronic indigestion usually results from torpid liver and a consequently constipated condition of the bowels. Natually, there are headaches and biliousness in many cases and much irritability and depressed feelings.

It is so easy to allow this condition to develop that almost before you know it you become a "dyspeptic."

But what a relief when you learn about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put them to a test. In a day or two you are feeling fine and soon you realize that you have discovered the most effective regulator of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

QUEEN CITY HAVING FACE LIFTED FOR GIGANTIC SHRINE CONVENTION

Can. Pacific and Can. Nat. Erecting Huge "Cities on Rails"

BY T. J. JAMES

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright 1930)

Toronto, May 10—Nowhere on the Continent have convention cities offered the Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine such accommodation as it will have in Toronto for its 56th conclave this June.

It is estimated that but ten cities on the continent can house the Shrine delegates and the tremendous following that attends them at the Imperial Council meeting. While Toronto possibly cannot boast as complete hotel space as other premier cities, its housing feature has been well taken care of by the railways.

Both the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific roads will accommodate the June visitors in "hotels on wheels" by use of Pullman cars parked on track space for the convention period. The National System has a new coach yard within easy reach both of the down town section and the Exhibition grounds where the Shrine session will take place. The Canadian Pacific, not to be outdone in this respect, is building a yard nearby which will be ready for occupancy by June. At past Imperial Council meetings it has been the custom of railways to serve the visitors with "wheeled hotels" but never before has the gathering had placed at its disposal such vast facilities as will be theirs this year.

In "Temple Park," as the C. N. R. coach yard has been named in honor of the occasion, 10,000 people can be housed by parking some 450 pullmans. Temple Park has concrete sidewalks between each of its 22 tracks and is flood lighted. A wide element drive allows a taxi service to each "avenue" in the Park. A two-storied permanent building, 100 yards long, provides headquarters for the Shriners. It will be telephone and telegraph service, beauty parlor, barber shop, information bureau, rest rooms and, in fact, every attribute of a small city. It will have its postal service, messenger service, laundry and valet service. Uniformed police will keep guard over it and a huge electric sign at its gates, flanked with minaret towers, will announce it to be the home of 10,750 Shriners.

In the neighborhood of 300 sleeping cars will be parked by the Canadian Pacific system. Its administrative buildings will take the form of marquees specially erected for the occasion. In the case of both parking yards they are ideally located within easy reach and served by both bus and, in the case of Temple Park, by street car. At other conventions it has been the misfortune of the Shriners often to be located in railway yards on the edge of the city and miles away from the scene of activities. In Toronto, they will be better placed than if staying in downtown hotels.

At first inspection, the idea of erecting a railway coach yard for housing purposes seems simple. But when wanting it for such a purpose, the railway has to transfer its coach yard operations to other quarters for it is the coach yards that passenger cars of every variety are prepared for the road and spruced up. For the C. N. R. it has meant construction of trackage for this purpose at Mimico, on the edge of the city. The yards' tariffs will have to be transferred there and all the equipment necessary. The coming of the Shrine convention has necessitated the C.P.R. constructing a new yard entirely, laying down tracks and providing connections to the main lines. "When the ultimate benefits which will accrue to Canada from the publicity it will receive are taken into account, however, the outlay seems puny; for every public and private body is out for "repeat" business, to impress the convention and its visitors with Canada and make a bid to again play host in succeeding years.

We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother does not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Castoria is readily obtained at any druggists, and the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature that appears on every wrapper.

SAYS RADIO BROADCASTING OF THE DAY'S NEWS EVENTS TENDS TO AID NEWSPAPERS

Floyd Gibbons, Dynamic Newcaster, Says it Can't Take Place of the Printed Page.

Frederick Griffin, prominent Canadian journalist, has been in New York interviewing famous radio stars. The first of a series which he writes for The Ontario Intelligencer, is produced herewith.

By Frederick Griffin
(Copyright 1930)

New York, May 1.—Quite arbitrarily since I have to make a choice, I start with present season advertiser to an assorted menu of radio talent, Floyd Gibbons, the headline hunter.

For nearly a week I have been sight-seeing at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, headquarters of the National Broadcasting Company, great factory of vocal and musical entertainment for the continental food order of two vast air networks that for some eight son hours daily reach millions of list eners-in from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Arctic Circle to the Panama Canal.

I saw in action in the studio, close-up, or interviewed, such air personalities as Rudy Vallee, Graham MacNamee, Floyd Gibbons, B. A. Rolfe, producer of dance music par excellence; Vaughn de Leath, contralto singer, the original radio girl; Bob Mac-Cimsey, the whistling lawyer; Rosaline Green, the young lady who has played a thousand dramatic parts, one night being burnt over the air as Joan of Arc, the next warming the ether with (?) Cleopatra or Nell Gwynne; Phil Cook, the one-man comedy troupe and others—seeking an assortment that would illustrate radio's varied range.

And out of them all I pick Floyd Gibbons, one-time star reporter, former war correspondent, turned broadcaster, the rapid fire talker who every evening gives the world's news from WJZ, with whom to start.

Three IS COMPANY WHEN THE THIRD IS

PLANTERS SALTED PEANUTS

He is a dynamic, dramatic personality, this six foot fellow, with a white patch marking the left eye he lost at Chateau Thierry, the broad shoulders the fighting face that is Irish of a particular type, very like Gene Tunney's, I thought, but more rugged, with more character.

Floyd Gibbons was standing by waiting for the split-second signal which would start him broadcasting when I entered the studio. Just then he sat down in front of the "mike". He wore his grey hat cocked rakishly. With an impulsive gesture he tugged his tie loose and opened his collar at the throat. He thrust out his arms as if to free them from all encumbrances and leave them free to rip and punch his way through.

Then he started—and how he talked! Hard, sharp, fast, like a rivet gun, but with his mouth close to the "mike", controlled and clear. He talked at a rate of approximately two hundred words a minute. In his fifteen minute broadcast he elucidated nearly three thousand words. That was three newspaper colmns. Try it some time.

When he was through with this concentrated, rapid fire broadcasting of the essence of the day's news for the Literary Digest he was sweating as if he had just fought five rounds. But he had never missed a beat, never miscued a word.

Photographs were to be made and this big reporter who won renown hunting the news on half a dozen continents and in more than half a dozen wars before he took up this job of exposing with the same intensity that he had shown when announcing.

He seemed the same as when he had been sitting, with its angular incisors for his script. "I don't like this thing," he said. "Too much of a pulpit look. Take it away."

He ran his hands through his rugged hair. Presently he said about the same emphatic. He had already buttoned his collar, fixed his tie. "For this job," he said, "we'd better be ourselves." And without pretense, he once more jerked his tie loose and his throat bare. Later, after I had asked with him, when he was going off to dress for a dinner engagement with Mary Garden, the singer, who was resident for Europe, I noticed that he had failed to fix them.

"Down to work," I asked him, "eh?"

"Do you think you've gone up or ing to be a newspaper man and becoming a broadcaster?"

"I'm not through with newspaper work," he said sharply. "I'd hate to think so. Just wait until something breaks."

It would probably be pretty hard for Gibbons to keep away from news now, with the virus in his blood from twenty years of mixing it with bitr rents. His first war was with Pancho Villa, the Mexican rebel, in 1914. He followed this by a jaunt into Mexico of his own, and hours with Carranza's fly swatters, also into Mexico.

In 1917 he was assigned to the world war. On his way over he was torpedoed on the Lacenia 200 miles off the Irish coast at nine o'clock of a March evening. He took to the water wearing a life preserver, was picked up by a life boat, and was rescued days. American papers carried his obituary, prematurely, for he cabled five thousand words on the sinking of the Lacenia from Queenstown. It was read on the floor of the Senate and some five weeks later the United States went to war.

Gibbons was with the British at Vimy Ridge. He was with the United States Marines at Belleau Wood in June, 1918, when he was hit three times as he crossed a field. The first clipped his left shoulder. The second smashed his left arm above the elbow. The third tore through his left eye. That is why today he looks, with his rugged face and his white patch, and his hat pulled rakishly down over the latter, like a picturesque swashbuckler.

The French gave Gibbons the Legion of Honor.

He was through the Black and Tan times in Ireland, through the Polish battles under Pilsudski, in the Graeco Turkish war which sounds like a wrestling match. He crossed the Sahara desert on camel back, covering 2000 miles in three months and five days, a record, and then hunted 11,000 miles down the west coast of Africa. Then he went to Java, China, Siberia, and Russia and followed the French and Spanish campaigns against Abdel Drin. Later there were the Phillipine revolution, the Turkish rumpus and the Macedonian revolt in all of which he participated.

In between times he visited Germany and got material for "The Red Knight of Germany," the story of Richthofen, the great air ace, and then a year or so ago he wrote, "The Red Napoleon."

Such is a bald resume of the hair-lighting in Gibbons' last fifteen years. When he broadcasts news nightly from a New York studio to an army of distant listeners, he brings to the job a vast experience in news gathering.

"What do you see as you broadcast?" I ask him. "Just that piper on which you concentrate?"

"I always see somebody," was his reply. "Usually I think of the people of the locality in which the news about which I am speaking has happened. And I find myself talking directly to them, just as directly as I'm talking to you. I find myself seeing them. I get homes into my head, individual homes. They may be in California or they may be up in your country. But always I talk to people, real people whom I see, and not merely just into the 'mike'."

"You really visualize listeners?"

"Of course, because this stuff is not written. It's talked. When preparing it, I talk it and the stenographer takes it down. It's not writing. It's just conversation. Sometimes I talk too much. Today I had 3500 words. I had to get it down to 3000."

He showed me how he had cut his copy to meet not the requirements of a newspaper column, but the inexorable limits of a fifteen minutes broadcast. And every page of it was timed. Right as Floyd Gibbons' office chose sat a production manager, who correspended to the Hollywood director of the movies. He had a watch in his hand with a red second and a copy of the material Gibbons was reading. He timed every page. Sometimes he would stroke Gibbons gently on the arm to slow up and the speaker slowed his tempo. At other times he would beat a brief tattoo and Gibbons would put on a little sprint to catch up.

"Your stuff's got to fit to the split second," explained Floyd Gibbons. "Time here takes the place of space on a newspaper. In fact I think more in terms here than newspaper space. You've got to come out just even with the last word. We start up this job of posing with the same intensity that he had shown when announcing.

He scorned the desk at which he had been sitting, with its angular incisors for his script. "I don't like this thing," he said. "Too much of a pulpit look. Take it away."

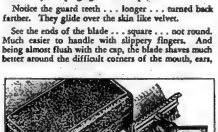
WE have made a dozen important changes in the Gillette Razor and Blade to make an entirely new and greatly improved shaving tool.

Take "razor pull," for example. A razor "pulls" because its working parts have been dropped and dented on floor or wash basin.

Perhaps the dent is microscopic. Just the same it makes a difference. When you handle a Gillette, you are dealing with a fine precision tool. Now look at the corners of the new razor. See those heavy lugs? You can't dent those corners by any ordinary accident. But suppose, you should dent them. Never mind. The ends of the blade have been cut out. The blade is no longer held at the corners. Therefore, a dented razor-corner can't possibly affect the smoothness of your shave.



No more blade wiping

Another thing. The new blades are processed to resist rust. No more do you have to take the razor apart to wipe the blade. Just loosen. Turn blade at right angles. Retighten. Hold under hot running water for rinsing. Shake well. Lay on the shelf.

The old pests are gone. How many a good edge was lost by bumping against those posts.

Notice the guard teeth . . . longer . . . turned back farther. They glide over the skin like velvet.

See the ends of the blade . . . square . . . not round. Much easier to handle with slippery fingers. And being almost flush with the cap, the blade shaves much better around the difficult corners of the mouth, ears, and nose. The famous guard channel beneath the blade edge allows the blade to meet the beard full and clear, yet with perfect safety. This has hitherto been an exclusive feature of high priced Gillettes selling at $5.00 to $75.00. Now you have it in the $1.00 model. See your dealer today.

'BIG SHOT' OF GAN GLAND MARKED BY HIS ENEMIES IS FUGITIVE IN CANADA

Teddy Newberry, 'Boss' of Moran Rum Ring, in Montreal

WOUNDED ERE FLIGHT

"Frank J. Parker" is Mystery Man of Chicago Liquor Syndicate

BY C. B. GREENAWAY

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright 1930)

Chicago, May 10—The victim of an unofficial shooting of Chicago gangland is at present taking sanctuary in Canada.

Emphasis should be placed on the fact that in Chicago gangland there are two styles of shooting; official and unofficial—those that are reported to the police and those that are not.

Unofficially, hoodlums' guns jetted a few days ago at Teddy Newberry, chief whiskey boss of the Moran gang on the north side of the city. Down almost for the full count, Newberry removed himself and his wounds to Montreal of Windsor under the protection of that mysterious hi-jacking agent of Capone liquor known since the St. Valentine's day massacre as Frank J. Parker.

The case was not officially reported to police, yet Commissioner of Detectives John Stege, Capt. Shoemaker, former head of the secret service ghost squad of the police force; Sergt. Chas. Ripon of the north side detective squad car, even Col. Robert Isham Randolph, director of the famous Secret Six committee of the associated chambers of commerce organized to curb the homicidal tendencies of the underworld hoodlums in the booze racket, confirmed the shooting and the flight of Newberry for sanctuary to Canada.

Had he remained in Chicago, another killing would have been added to the ferocious war of extermination and vengeance between the Capone gang and the north side mob headed by George ("Bugs") Moran, principal challengers of "Emperor" Scarface's domain in Chicago. For, since the spy on Moran gangsters were caught in their distributing garage at 2122 North Clark St., St. Valentine's Day, 1929, lined up against a wall, and shot down by their enemies' machine guns, this vendetta has alternately seethed and gushed into an implacable determination of blood for blood.

Average Valentine Slayings

"Who did the killing in the St. Valentine's massacre?" I interrupted in the course on an interview with Commissioner Stege, not just to see if the police had definite knowledge, but to get a basis of explanation for Newberry's flight to Canada, for recent gangster deaths, and for the continued crime drive in Chicago, which, according to police officials, is to last until "everybody is worn out."

Stege, without the slightest hesitation, named the seven killers: "Fred Burke, Roy Winkler, two fellows by the name of Bruer, Joe Guinta, John Scalisi, and Dominick Anselmi. And of these seven," explained the commissioner, "the last three were riddled with bullets and dumped in lonely badlands over the Indiana line."

Once there were seven, and now there are four. Thus far has progressed already the war of vengeance and alertism.

Stripped of many intricacies of gang overlapping and alliance, that basis of explanation stood out fairly obvious. It was confirmed by the police and, again by a visit to the surprising haunts of the hoodlums and the booze trade with John Drury of the Chicago News, whose love of Chicago amounts almost to a passion, whose minute knowledge of his city, indicated in his book, "Seven Days in Chicago," is now being made us of by the Parisian journalist, Claude Cazaux-Jordan, at present making a detailed study of crime conditions.

At the basis of Chicago criminality is the booze trade with its annual millions of revenue at stake. In this wealthiest city territory per square foot perhaps in the whole world, the famous squared loop where the elevated lines from the north, west and south dicet loops around the downtown district before returning to their respective sections again, is the richest province of the booze, gambling and vice territory of King Scarface Al. Capone. His empire is rounded out on the south by the South Side, with a few other vassal suburbs, like Cicero, subdued for good measure.

Death to muscleer'in

In that territory, Scarface Al, is no political Stonewall Jackson chivalrously respecting the rebel flags of Barbara Frietchies. Whoever "muscles in" to the Loop or the S outh Side seems to "die like a dog" without question or exception. He is in the jungle of savage trigger fingers on machine-guns.

All through the history of the North Side gang, whether it was then flourishing under O'Banion, Hymie Weiss or Moran, it has been trying to muscle in on Capone's provinces; trying to hi-jack his liquor. O'Banion tried it and faced a relentless firing squad in his flower shop. Hymie Weiss tried and was riddled to death from spurting machine-guns. Moran and his two lieutenants, the Gusenberg brothers, tried it.

Always, police say, they were trying to "muscle in" on Capone. More than once, police believe, they tried to kill him. In their turn, the Gusenbergs were among the crumpled forms in the St. Valentine's Day massacre. The other day, when Teddy Newberry, Moran's hi-jacking intelligence officer, was taken into custody in a disguised downtown office, it was apparent that he also was poaching again to no good purpose in Capone's territory. A few nights later he heard the song of bullets in the silver walk, and with a flesh wound is now in exile in Canada.

"Teddy Newberry is up in Canada with Parker," said Captain Shoemaker. And Capt. Shoemaker is very well acquainted with that gentleman.

Parker is Mystery Man

Parker, ex-Chicago brewer, ex-convict, now the alleged owner of a Montreal distillery, is a mystery man. With his spies at every Canadian distillery, to complete the sensational story, this associate of Moran and Newberry would keep them informed of the time and destination of their rivals' liquor supplies that were being shipped from Canada. Smuggled freight cars containing liquor worth from $25,000 to $100,000 would then be hi-jacked by Moran gangsters, when these Capone treasures reached the neighborhood of Chicago.

When I went to Montreal in February, 1929, after the St. Valentine's Day massacre, to find this Parker the mystery only deepened. In the office of the Dominion Distillers I talked with a Frank J. Parker, a young man of only 33, who has risen rapidly in the position of vice-president and managing director of this large exporting distillery business.

Young Mr. Frank J. Parker, in his turn, described another mysterious older Frank J. Parker, who is known in the language of the underworld as a real "tough boss." Somewhere in Montreal this other agent for liquor interests was supposed to go into deep retirement occasionally from attempts on his life by Capone gangsters. Charming young women first were sent to tempt him out into ambuscade. Once he is supposed to have escaped death on St. Catherine St. by the merest fraction of an inch when Chicago gangsters in an automobile aimed at him too hasty spray of bullets.

"Every once in a while," the young Mr. Parker of Montreal explained, "he gets into a jam, and my friends want to know whether I can really be a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. I am told he owns an aeroplane, and flies loads of booze from Detroit to Chicago, even as far south as to Cincinnati."

Chicago police did not seem able to clear up the mystery of Frank J. Parker. All they say is that Teddy Newbury is "up at Montreal with Parker."

MANY NEW COURSES GIVE CANADA ADDED STRENGTH IN LONG LIST OF 1930 GOLFING TOURNAMENTS

Western Provinces Coming Ahead Fast—More Than 600 Courses in Canada.

SOMERVILLE EXCELS

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

TORONTO—A recent census shows that there are now over six hundred private, public and pay-as-you-play golf courses in Canada stretching clean across the continent from Halifax, Nova Scotia, to Victoria, British Columbia and it is a conservative estimate that one hundred and fifty thousand Canadians or more this season will be treading the verdant fairways and incidentally contributing alike to their health and happiness. Ontario with 165 clubs is still the banner golfing province of the Dominion but the game is steadily but surely swinging ever westward. It is estimated that one-third of the golfers of Canada are now resident west of the Great Lakes and the claim is made and rightly so, too, that the Amateur Championship in future should be staged at least once every three years in the west.

With greatly improved courses, with club houses which vie with the best on the continent, with climatic conditions unsurpassed for golf, Canada is entering with confidence upon the golfing season of 1930. To the hundreds of thousands of Americans who will be touring the country this summer, the "welcome sign" hangs out and in no place will a welcome be more heartily extended to them than on the golf courses of Canada.

Still another progressive city in Ontario has decided to provide facilities for golf for the masses. Work having been started last week on a public golf course in Sarnia. The new links add to the Athletic Park, the city tourist camp and the Sarnia Tennis Club, just outside the city's northern limits.

Cities in Canada now having Municipal and Public golf courses are: In Alberta, Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat; British Columbia, Vancouver; Manitoba, Winnipeg (2 courses), Brandon; Nova Scotia, Halifax; Ontario, Brantford, Port William, Hamilton, London, Port Arthur, St. Thomas, Stratford, Sarnia, Toronto, Windsor; Quebec, Montreal; Saskatchewan, Moose Jaw, Regina. In addition to these public courses, there are a large number of pay-as-you-play clubs open to the public on the payment of a reasonable fee for the day or by the round. So today throughout the Dominion in a large number of centres golf can be enjoyed at a very moderate cost indeed.

Bobby Jones and his team of ten experts all told and Miss Glenna Collett and her glittering galaxy of seventeen fair golfing satellites, sailed this week for England in quest of fresh fields to conquer. Late advices from the Old Country are to the effect that the Britishers are quite hope ful of holding their own in the international team matches both men and women events, although recognizing that the invasion is the most formidable ever launched by Uncle Sam, but they are rather dubious about their championships. They recognize that in Bobby Jones, Leo Diegel, Walter Hagen and Horton Smith the U. S. has a quartette of medal players it will be hard to defeat in the open championship which has now been won six years in succession by American. The amateur championships both the men's and women's it is also conceded stand a very good chance of crossing the Atlantic.

However, John Shull is preparing to put up a stiff fight and hopes "to muddle through" as usual but he certainly has his golfing work cut out for him the next few weeks on the wind-swept courses of St. Andrews Royalze, Formby and Royal St. Georges.

Mr. J. L. Weller, a well-known Hamilton golfer who witnessed the semi-final match between Sandy Somerville of London, Ont., a former Canadian amateur champion and George Voigt at Pinehurst, N.C., recently in the North and South Amateur Championship writes that it was generally conceded that the game was the finest ever witnessed at famous Pinehurst. Voigt who is on the U. S. Walker Cup team which has just sailed for Great Britain is rated by many experts as second only to Bobby Jones amongst the amateur players of America. Somerville won on the 19th hole with a birdie 3. Both players had a medal 66 for the 18 holes — wonderful golf. Mr. Weller states that Somerville has greatly controlled and straightened out his tee-shots this season and is now playing easily the best golf of his brilliant career. If he keeps up his Pinehurst he will be installed a warm favorite to win for the blued line, the Canadian Amateur over his home course, the London Hunt, next August.

Prince to Launch New C.P.R. Liner

London, England, May 10—Believed to be the first time that a giant passenger liner has been sponsored by the Heir to the Throne, the recent announcement that the Canadian Pacific's new ship will be launched by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales has been greeted with great accamation by the press in all sections of British Isles. The Glasgow Herald commented editorially to the effect that it is "a matter of great satisfaction to the people of Scotland that the Prince is coming north to perform this-important ceremony. It is presumable fitting that the Empress of Britain should be christened by H. R. H. for an indissoluble link being the Clyde and the Dom has been forged to no small extent through the efforts and example of the Prince." A tribute is paid in the same paper to the series of fine Canadian Pacific ships that have recently been built on the Clyde. In addition to the launching of a passenger vessel by H. R. H., being unusual it is remarked upon that quite a departure from precedent has been made in the fact that a lady usually performs the act of sponsorship. The last occasion upon which Royalty officiated at a passenger liner's launching was when H. R. H. the Duchess of York sponsored the 20,000 ton Canadian Pacific liner that bears her name.

FIRST AID ON C.N.R. TRAINS

Worker Always at Hand in Case of Accident to Passengers

Toronto, May 10—Speaking before the Industrial Accident Prevention Association's Annual Convention here recently W. D. Robb, Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways, stat ed that the National system had practically reached its objective of spreading first aid throughout the Railway system so that no accident could occur to either employee or passenger more than 23,000 miles of line without a worker being at hand to render necessary assistance. On the Canadian National Railways, both safety first and first aid were practiced with well defined courses laid down. One was the prevention, the other the cure. Employees undertook the instructions voluntarily and the women employees took an additional training in home nursing. The Vice-President pointed with pride to the fact that among the cups won last year by C. N. R. teams was the Montizambert Trophy, emblematic of championship for all Canada.

Mr. Robb expressed the opinion that first aid was of so much importance that it should be taken up in the schools in shortened form to make it attractive. He believed the young mind would better retain the instruction so valuable in mature years. "Bearing this in mind and with a view to setting an example, several of our instructors have during the past two years devoted their spare time at night to the instruction of pupils at school in towns where they were located. At Edson, Alta., for instance we had the pleasure of presenting several Junior certificates," he stated.

In closing Mr. Robb stated that the C. N. R. stood ready to co-operate with and assist any railways, industrial establishments or similar bodies in first aid work and place at their disposal the benefit of the National system's long experience in this humanitarian work. Mr. Robb was a founder of first aid work on the former Grand Trunk Railway and brought it to its present state of efficiency on Canadian National by continuing his efforts after amalgamation.
